MAYOR REPORTS ON "OPERATION REVIVAL"

Mayor John F. Collins speaking at the Boston College Seminar, on April 12, stated as follows:

Gentlemen, on January 26 of this year, I stood on this platform and briefly described the objectives and procedures of "Operation Revival." Now only 77 days later I could tell you, if time allowed, some of the first products of this program. These initial results, even at this early date, mean savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars to the taxpayers of the City of Boston. But these gains in the first quarter of the first year are only the fore-runner of the expected products of "Operation Revival."

In time we expect the hundreds of thousands to become millions. While those results that have already occurred are important, the real success to date is the establishment of an attitude in City Hall, and elsewhere throughout the city and the metropolitan area. This attitude is one of optimism that the City of Boston can survive and revive.

A Feeling of Optimism

This feeling of optimism for the future of our city is appropriately reflected in the aggressiveness and industriousness of our civil servants, our developers, our taxpayers, the investment houses, and many others. This feeling of optimism is rightly mixed with the understanding that hard work—a lot of hard work by groups of all kinds—will turn optimistic attitudes into realistic achievement.

The program of "Operation Revival" is a comprehensive attack on all phases of City of Boston problems. It deals with taxation, legislation, administration, public services, personnel, budgets, capital improvements, and transportation. Every function, procedure, and service that can judiciously be expedited and made more efficient, will be.

But now for some realistic caution to show why there must be understanding of the great amount of work that lies ahead.

The Go-Ahead Stage

I was sharply reminded just last week that some aspects of "Operation Revival" require months and years of preparation and organization before tangible results can be observed. This reminder hit me when I saw the "Mayflower" being towed out of Boston Harbor to her summer quarters at Plymouth. Boston wasn't built in a day but over a period of three centuries. The root of many of our problems lies in the fact that Boston will not be rebuilt in a day. Many parts of our city are so old and of such inadequate design as to be unable to serve modern society.

The process for reviving the decadent and outmoded parts of our city—the process of urban renewal—is a complex, often confusing piece of business that involves almost every department of city government, many agencies of state government, and the sticky hand of federal agencies.

Our contact to date with urban renewal and urban redevelopment in the City of Boston focuses sharply on the many difficulties involved before final approval and reconstruction are actualities. The many hurdles are being faced, one by one, and our current projects, as of today, appear to be in the go-ahead stage. The New York Streets project is an actuality; the West End is under reconstruction; the Civic Center is now in the homestretch and with community support can move into the demolition stage within a year. Other projects are being designed.

Complexities of Urban Renewal

Our contact to date with urban renewal and its complexities has emphasized that this type of program, if it is to work effectively, requires a new system of governmental imagination, coordination, organization, and administration. But I wish to emphasize that the seriousness of the need for urban renewal in Boston, as well as the complexities involved in carrying these projects out, points strongly to the need for rethinking and probably reformulating the objectives and procedures of urban renewal. I would like to dwell a moment on the seriousness and importance of renewal. We know, even before the 1960 census gives us the actual numbers, that decayed and deteriorated houses and commercial buildings occupy a large percentage of the land area in the city. These areas are expensive to the municipal treasury and also to society and the economy. These areas were created many decades ago; their contribu-

URBAN DEVELOPMENT PROSPECTS AS SEEN BY EDWARD LOGUE

Edward J. Logue, Provisional Director of Urban Development of Boston, speaking at the Boston College Seminar on April 12, spoke as follows:

It is a privilege and a pleasure for me to share this rostrum with two such distinguished public officials as your Governor and your Mayor.

Governor Furcolo is known far beyond the borders of this ancient commonwealth, known for his courage, his dedication to principle, and for his broad-gauged approach to the challenges of his high office.

Your Governor is a native of New Haven. He and I received both our undergraduate and legal education at the same place. The welcome he has had in the land of the Harvards is encouraging to this particular Yale.

I have known your Mayor only a very short while but I have come to be tremendously impressed with his thorough knowledge of your city and its government, with his determination to rebuild and revitalize Boston and above all with the courage, the imagination, and the boldness he has brought to City Hall.

I am happy indeed to have this opportunity to participate in this citizens' seminar. In a very real sense your gatherings have become the town meetings of Greater Boston. Out of this forum, in a few short years, have come many of the most important ideas and programs for rebuilding Boston.

Our subject today is Boston, not the prosperous, comfortable, exploding metropolis, but the core city itself. The fate of the city and its suburbs are inseparably linked.

However, the problems of the old city are the more serious and their solution depends in the first instance upon the vision and the courage of those who live or work there and of the public officials whom they elect to serve them.

I am here to talk about Boston on rather brief acquaintance. I enjoy getting to know a city. If I can, I like to fly over a city, as I did today, or to sail into its harbor, even to drive around its neighborhoods, but above all to walk its streets and parks.

I have circled over, driven around, and walked about in Boston. I find it a complex, fascinating, and endlessly varied city.

If I may, I shall give you the first impressions of a stranger, a stranger who has been made to feel most welcome.

Public Garden, the Focal Point

For me Boston starts with the Public Garden. There is, you know, a best seller whose plot centers on the Public Garden. It is called "Make Way for Ducklings" and it was written for the very young.

On my very first visit to Boston this past winter I had to stop at the Public Garden so that I could assure my six-year-old daughter that it really was there.

Just beyond the Public Garden is Beacon Hill. It is a rare and wonderful urban neighborhood, quite without parallel in America today. Georgetown, Greenwich Village, Society Hill in Philadelphia, not one has the combination of age and beauty and nearby open space and all within walking distance of shops and work.

Beacon Hill has survived all that goes by the name of progress except perhaps the family car which so clutters up its streets. And even here I have had reports that the family car will be tamed and put in its place with the help of a nearby garage now under construction.

Possibilities in Old Sections

South Boston has a formidable sound to a stranger. And yet on a visit it turns out to have the very best location in the city—the ocean breezes, the wide, long view—and the gentle name of "Southie." It should remain one of the best places to live in the city, if it can repel the slum and blight which are invading from the mainland.

East Boston I find is not just an adjunct to the world's best located big city airport, but the place, in all of Boston, to look upon and enjoy the downtown skyline. Yet blight has its foothold here, too, and cannot be ignored.

Charlestown has its charm, too, but what has happened to this historic neighborhood was a shock to me. Not the monument, nor the square, nor the houses close by. But just a few blocks away on the slopes of this storied hill are slums as bad as any I have ever seen, houses broken, empty, neglected, and abandoned.

Surely these conditions must be corrected before the school children of America learn that today it is slums and blight that are marching up the slopes of Bunker Hill. Here is a place that belongs to all America. We must take better care of it.

I come back to Boston Proper, to the North End. Some will say tear it down—its housing is old, the neighborhood is worn out.

I do not agree. Boston should cherish the North End, its market stalls and restaurants, its shops and crowded streets. Here is an example for downtown Boston of the life, the energy that an urban center should have. Open it up more, certainly. The Revere Mall is a fine example of the kind of intimate, friendly, open space a city should have many of. But the people of the North End should not be complacent. Without vigorous code enforcement blight will yet have its way.

The South End is a different sort of a place altogether. It is in the middle. It is the hardest part of Boston to plan for, in my opinion. It has slums and blight and skid row and wonderful old blocks, and parks, settlement houses, and a host of friends.

I have seen enough to know that this is a city of great potential which today suffers from widespread and growing blight.

85,000 Substandard Dwellings

A reliable local source has estimated that there are 85,000 substandard dwelling units in Boston,

Operation Revival . . .

tion to the revenues of the city have declined, and Boston has no new land for new development which can help it replace their values and help keep a stable tax rate.

A Lifetime Job

Boston must eliminate unhealthy blight, and create new land for new development. Boston must find a way to fight back deterioration and the resulting rise in taxes.

But I will advise you now that Boston cannot do this all by itself and Boston cannot do this in one, two, or five years. This is a lifetime job that will never be completed even with federal and state cooperation.

Because urban renewal is a big job, a continuing job, and a complex job, it automatically becomes a major phase of "Operation Revival."

Central Command

It involves many city departments. It is absolutely necessary that these departments work in conjunction with the redevelopment authority. The need is for these agencies to efficiently work together under central direction. Civic agencies also have a part to play, but their role is still evolving and it is one of our tasks to properly integrate their activities. An essential feature of the program is the way in which state and federal governments cooperate to achieve the goal of a new Boston.

These problems demonstrate that urban renewal needs new machinery to operate effectively. It is my task to develop that machinery. The success of this phase of "Operation Revival" depends upon our successfully doing this.

Chain Reaction

When a dog darted onto the crowded Santa Ana freeway at Los Angeles, 40 vehicles smashed together in a chain reaction accident which stretched three miles. Eleven persons were treated for minor injuries.

Damage to automobiles totaled more than $10,000. Fifteen cars had to be towed away.

MAYOR COLLINS STRESSES BOSTON'S HISTORIC ASSETS

Speaking before the Advertising Club of Boston, Mayor John F. Collins, on April 12, spoke as follows:

This is indeed a happy occasion.

The first edition of the Freedom Trail pamphlet has been a startling best seller. A quarter of a million copies were snapped up by eager tourists who realized that in coming to Boston they not only journey into space but also into time.

Thanks to the Yankee ingenuity and frugality which enabled a printing bill of less than half of what might ordinarily be the case, and thanks to the generosity of several of our Boston companies, John Hancock especially, it has become ever more frequent to see out-of-towners strolling our streets, trail map in hand, pacing out the historic sites which many of us pass every day without being conscious that they are there.

With reverential awe mingled with hungry curiosity, Americans from all fifty states peer at the gravestones in the central burying grounds. Stand in the shadows of Faneuil Hall, tread the aisles of the Old North Church, and mount the decks of "Old Ironsides."

Must Sell Freedom Trail

By means of the Freedom Trail, their visit to Boston becomes not just a visit to a city but a visit into the past and they become more conscious of the fact that democracy was not always something taken for granted, but something for which men had to fight, and something for which men had to die.

As the pamphlet puts it: "A visit to Boston should be a part of the life of every free American, for without Boston there would be no free American life."

Thanks to your efforts, two hundred and fifty thousand Americans have had a chance to pay this visit to their glorious past. You have done your job well, and as Mayor of Boston I congratulate you and I thank you. I am sure that in the future, your endeavors will be crowned with even greater success

As you enter the second phase of your Freedom Trail operation, I wonder if you could add another target to your goal. As well as selling Freedom Trail, and with it Boston itself to outsiders, would you also, as much as your time and resources permit, do what you can to sell the Freedom Trail to the average Bostonian?

Many Bostonians have never followed the Freedom Trail, many of them don't even know it is there.

This, in itself, is not unusual. After all, how many New Yorkers have ever been atop the Empire State Building, or climbed the Statue of Liberty.

However, the Freedom Trail is more than a landmark or a collection of landmarks. It is a symbol—a symbol of Boston as a city with deep roots, a city of history and culture, a city with many buildings which were not put up just yesterday and with many streets which were laid out for horses and not automobiles.

Our Past A Big Asset

It is sad, but true, that all too many Bostonians care little for the historic aspect of their city. Not only do they fail to take pride in its historic character but at times, it seems, they even resent it.

Boston is too old and too old-fashioned, they say. Boston is living with its eyes on the past when it should be rushing pell-mell into the future. Boston should try to become like some of the cities of the West and build all kinds of new buildings, new roadways, new everything. "Down with all that's old!"

Well, I consider our past one of our most priceless assets. Every city can at least potentially, build all kinds of new things, but none can ever hope to achieve the deep sense of history, and its tangible forms of expression that Boston claims, you can only build the new, never the old.

Now, Boston is rebuilding, of course, and actually rebuilding at a brisk pace.

I don't have to enumerate all the projects underway which are brightening up our city, the West End Redevelopment Project, the proposed Government Center, the Roxbury Urban Rehabilitation Program, and many, many others. The list is long.

Boston Is In The Race

I can assure you that Boston is no longer lagging in the race for progress.

However, Boston is not going to become, and is not going to try to become, another Los Angeles or Chicago.

Boston is unique in its past, and it should jealously guard this uniqueness with all the power at its command.

You see, as certain aspects of American life seem to take on an ever greater degree of standardization, uniqueness becomes an ever more precious quality.

Why should we bend all our efforts to erect endless rows of look-alike buildings on endless rows of look-alike streets when people all over the country are crying out for a change. Boston with its deep contact with the past offers the visitors, and the residents, such things as variation, contrast, and color.

These are subtle qualities but, as any urban planner will tell you, they stand near the top of the list in determining any city's liveability or, to coin a word, visit-ability.

Yes, in these modern days when people have to look harder and harder to find something different, we Bostonians are luckier than most.

We live in a city where this annoying sameness is at a minimum. We live in a city where every street is not the same as every other street, where every building was not constructed along the same pattern as every other. And we intend to keep it this way.

While we erect spic and span new apartment houses in the West End, we nestle them between sedate and that a third of the city's homes are in need of clearance or rehabilitation. Think of what these figures mean in human terms, in the lives of little children. Measured against this need the seventy substandard acres cleared by the New York Streets and West End projects have hardly made a dent.

Desirable as these projects may be when completed several years from now, they have not been enough. Not big enough, or bold enough, or fast moving enough, to stem the tide of blight.

I make mention of these patch-work projects of the past only to emphasize how much remains to be done. The size of the problem should inspire us, not frighten us.

Required Tools

Happily most of the tools required are available, awaiting only proper use. Let me list some of them.

First, a broadly conceived and well tested state urban redevelopment law is on the books. It could be improved, especially in one particular, but it is a good law.

Second, up-to-date housing, zoning, and building codes. In my judgment, such codes, vigorously enforced, offer any city its best bargain in blight prevention. Boston has such codes or is in the process of getting them. Enforcement is the key. The demolition program has been quite impressive. Housing code enforcement leaves much to be desired.

Third, sound planning framework, not just a restatement of things as they are, but a bold projection of things as they ought to be, a standard by which public and private action projects can be judged as they come along.

Fourth, federal urban renewal funds. The money is there and Boston has not had its share. The total federal money available is a pittance against the billions sunk into the farm program, but that is another matter for another day.

There may be some who do not like to rely on extensive use of federal funds. For me the answer is simple. In her present financial condition Boston cannot afford such opinions.

Some may complain about federal red tape. All I can say is they do not create special obstacles for Boston, not with your Congressional delegation. Other cities have faced and licked the same problem. So can Boston.

Fifth, private capital. Boston capital is at work all over the world. We need to create effective ways of putting it to work at home, on a business, not a charity, basis.

I personally believe that the civic community should give the highest priority to the establishment of two development foundations—one to assist in commercial and industrial development and the other in the field of housing. Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Cleveland offer examples of effective assistance from the private sector.

These then are the tools. The rebuilding process is the application of these tools to a series of well-conceived projects undertaken on the basis of well-considered priorities all in accordance with a comprehensive plan.

A Few Principles

I am not ready today to suggest priorities or projects. May I instead suggest a few principles:

1. Big projects are no harder to do than little ones.

2. Relocation of families and businesses must be done in such a way as to minimize the inevitable hardships as much as possible.

3. In Boston uniform tax agreements are indispensable to large scale redevelopment and renewal and to private development as well.

4. Let us remember to build beauty into everything we do. Too often we get submerged in preparing a project or in rushing into construction. There is a brief but urgent moment in the life of every project when we have a chance to decide whether it will be beautiful as well as useful, attractive as well as revenue-producing. Let us make the most of such moments in the city of Bulfinch.

It takes more than tools and projects, priorities and principles to rebuild a city. Most important of all it takes people.

Organized Citizen Support

It takes organized citizen support. Leaders who will share in the troubles that change inevitably brings; people ready to stand up and be counted for progress.

I am confident that this support is here and eager to get on with the job.

Dedicated Staff

It takes the work of a dedicated and highly competent staff. Projects are not created and put into execution at meetings or with the wave of a magician's wand. They take hard work by people who deeply believe in what they are doing. There are such people working for Boston, but not enough of them. Good staff work is essential, as every executive in this room knows.

Coordinated Administration

The administration of a varied and fast-moving development program cannot be left to a committee or done on a crisis basis by the Mayor, or handed over to a coordinator who negotiates his way through internal obstacles as well as the external problems which we know so well. If we want results we need to recognize a new function, a new post where development responsibility is firmly fixed and authority just as firmly given. Here and elsewhere, such a position would mean a break with existing habit patterns.

City Hall Leadership

Rebuilding is a lot harder than building fresh on open land. It means disruption, discomfort, hardship. Much as we may wish for it the uncertainties and hazards cannot be eliminated. Somebody has to be willing to provide the leadership, take the calculated risks, supply the muscle and the energy.

There is only one place to look for that man. He must be the elected chief executive, the Mayor. No one else can take his place.

I believe that in John Collins you have a Mayor who will provide the leadership, the courage, the daring which is required to rebuild Boston.

Opportunities like this come but seldom in the life of any city. If Boston is to restore and rebuild itself your Mayor needs the full measure of your confidence and your support.

I am confident you will give it to him.

Mayor's Address . . .

historic Beacon Hill and the bustling, colorful North End with its open markets and crowded sidewalks.

While we build a garage under Boston Common, we exercise great care to keep the surface of this historically precious bit of ground intact so that it may continue to be enjoyed and revered.

"Freedom Trail" The City's Heart

And while we look ahead to exciting developments in downtown Boston, we watch over our Freedom Trail with all the zealotry of a mother hen.

Freedom Trail is close to the heart of our city in more ways than one.

Not only is it geographically near our center, but it is also representative of the heart of our concept of the city in the future—the old and the new side by side, each complimenting and reinforcing the other, each contributing its share to making Boston an ever better place in which to live, work, worship, and relax.

POLIO INOCULATION CLINICS RATED SUCCESSFUL

Boston's polio inoculation program ended April 9 a complete success, according to Dr. John H. Cauley, head of the city's Health Department.

On Monday, April 4, 1,788 persons took advantage of the inexpensive inoculation program. The program closed on Saturday with 12,770 persons receiving shots at health clinics throughout the city.

Dr. Cauley estimated that almost 25,000 persons received shots during the week.

"The current inoculation program," Dr. Cauley said, "is the third the city has conducted and completes a series.

"It will be some time before we have another. Since the program started we have inoculated 80,000 persons and have stimulated many industrial concerns, insurance companies, and public utilities to conduct inoculation programs for their help.

"As a result of this program an estimated 200,000 persons have been inoculated in Boston."

JOHN T. LEONARD NAMED SUPERVISOR OF BUDGETS

Mayor Collins, on April 12, announced the appointment of John T. Leonard, 46, of 63 Whitten street, Dorchester, as Supervisor of Budgets.

Mr. Leonard, a career employee with 26 years in city service, received a promotion from budget analyst. He has been serving as acting supervisor of budgets and will succeed John G. Pickett, appointed by the Mayor as Civil Defense Director early this year.

Mr. Leonard is a graduate of Boston English High School and the Bentley School of Accounting and Finance. He joined city service in 1935, served for 19 years in the Auditing Department, and six years in the budget division. He is married and has a son and daughter.

MAYOR RELEASES DETAILS OF LARGE-SCALE RENEWAL PLANS

Mayor John F. Collins, on September 22, released a proposed 90 million-dollar development program for the City of Boston calling for a large-scale urban renewal program with the accent on neighborhood rehabilitation rather than clearance. The document filled 45 typewritten pages and was profusely diagrammed and illustrated.

Ten renewal areas are designated with top priority given to Charles-town and the South End.

Over-all neighborhood renewal planning leading to specific renewal projects also is proposed for South Boston, East Boston, Roxbury, Jamaica Plain, and the Parker Hill-Fenway area.

The entire downtown is divided into three planning areas with action emphasis on Government Center and the surrounding area and then on the retail core.

Federal funds required to carry out the projects are estimated at $60,000,000 and the city's share at $30,000,000 over the next six years.

Maps Illustrate Report

The report, using charts and maps, emphasizes the widespread growth of blight in Boston today and the dangers to the city resulting from its declining tax base and rapidly rising tax rate.

Two maps, one of the downtown Boston area and the other for the city as a whole, show the proposed renewal and planning areas.

Under the proposal Dorchester, Roslindale, Hyde Park, West Roxbury, Brighton, and Orient Heights are designated at improvement areas.

The report points out that approximately half the population of Boston lives in six predominantly residential neighborhoods outside the heavy concentrations of slums and blight which lie close to the center of the city. Except for Brighton and the Orient Heights section of East Boston, these areas occupy approximately the southern half of Boston.

The Mayor said that each of the six neighborhoods has pockets of slums and blight that are growing. The pattern of decay which wreaked havoc on the older neighborhoods closer in is beginning to take shape in these newer neighborhoods as well.

Six Improvement Areas

"The housing in these six improvement areas is Boston's greatest and best hope of continuing to have a large supply of decent, moderately priced housing within the city limits," Mayor Collins said.

"A neighborhood improvement program," the Mayor said, "is the best means of achieving this objective." Such a program would consist of the following major elements:

1. Code enforcement aimed at eliminating blighted housing conditions.

2. Improved municipal house-keeping as a demonstration of the city's concern with the area.

3. Traffic regulations which will keep through traffic out of neighborhood streets as much as possible.

4. Development of neighborhood improvement plans.

5. Assistance to neighborhood groups, school organizations, and others in improvement programs for the neighborhood and for individual home owners.

The Mayor said it appears that as the program moves along there will be opportunities to carry out small-scale projects within the framework of the over-all program. Such projects can have major benefit to the city. The program should be flexible enough to permit this.

Financing the Program

The City of Boston, Mayor Collins said, can afford to undertake this program now and all at once. The more serious question is can it afford not to.

The proposals made here will cost the city an estimated $30,000,000 in capital funds over a six-year period. There is ample bond margin for this amount. It will require approximately $60,000,000 in new federal funds.

Charts are attached showing estimated allocation of federal funds, staging plan by quarters, and impact of the development program on the net annual tax rate for debt service.

The federal share of the funds can be made available.

The city's share of the cost can be financed through long-needed neighborhood improvements such as schools.

The cost of these capital improvements can be met without exceeding the amount presently paid each year for already outstanding debt service.

The decline in debt service charges over the years ahead gives the city this opportunity to finance a major rebuilding program without increasing the already burdensome tax rate.

Staff Reorganization

The Mayor also submitted to the Authority for its consideration a proposed reorganization of the Authority staff.

The key recommendation is the creation of a new top post of development administrator who would also serve by appointment of the Mayor as head of the proposed office of development to be created by ordinance.

All present Authority staff would be retained as well as all staff members transferred from the City Planning Board.

Public Housing

A shift in approach in the public housing program is recommended.

It calls for an end to large-scale housing projects and instead an emphasis on small projects which can fit into existing neighborhoods.

Emphasis is also recommended for public housing for the elderly and the use of rehabilitation as well as new construction.

Transportation Planning

To protect and advance the city's interest in a satisfactory transportation program a special transportation planning unit is recommended.

Legislative Recommendations

Two legislative recommendations are made. The first asks for an amendment to the state redevelopment law to permit the borrowing of federal funds to acquire property during the planning of a project.

This will save a year or more in the completion of a project and ease business relocation problems considerably, particularly in the Scollay Square Government Center area.

The report also urges adoption of a program of state financial assistance to cities for urban renewal projects.

In addition to its specific renewal recommendations, the report offers six "guideposts" or "ground rules" which would guide the operation of the total program.

Mayor's Statement

Following is the statement of the Mayor, John F. Collins, with respect to the proposed development program:

"The development program presents our city with its greatest challenge and at the same time its greatest opportunity. It offers a bold and comprehensive approach to the serious problems which confront our city. I am confident that working together we can make this program a reality.

"It is particularly important to me to note that the whole emphasis on this rebuilding program is on neighborhoods and their problems. I would expect that neighborhood committees would have a key partnership role in the preparation and carrying out of renewal plans. I would call it planning with people instead of planning for people.

"The emphasis on rehabilitation of housing rather than on clearance is important, too. There will still be clearance areas, of course, but we will try to restore and renew wherever practical.

"The cost of the program to the city I regard as an investment in the future. Most of it will go for schools and other community facilities for long-neglected neighborhoods. The program is not only one we need but one we can afford.

"Rome was not built in a day and Boston will not be rebuilt in a day. We must have patience as well as faith and confidence in ourselves and in our future. The time to begin is now.

"I urge every citizen of Boston who has the welfare of his city at heart to get behind this program and give it all-out support.

EXPENSIVE ADVERTISING BROCHURE TELLS BOSTON STORY AT NO COST TO TAXPAYERS

A streamlined and costly brochure highlighting the transformation of the Boston skyline is now being widely distributed. The project places no burden on the taxpayers.

With financial support and professional skill from 16 Boston advertising companies, Mayor John F. Collins has published an illustrated three-color booklet entitled "Boston—A City Rolls Up Its Sleeves." The expense was borne by the participating companies as a public service.

Thus far 25,000 copies of the publication have come off the press. More than 15,000 were inserted in the Boston Patriots football program at the initial game on September 9. About 4,000 were mailed out to radio stations and newspapers in various parts of the country, and another 1,000 are being sent to industrial and commercial concerns to arouse greater interest in Boston's future.

The text of the eight-page booklet was produced in the Mayor's office, under the direction of Richard Sinnott, press secretary. Twenty-six line drawings and photographs were supplied by the city to illustrate the publication.

Expressing his gratitude to the Boston advertising firms which contributed funds and talents to the sell-Boston effort, Mayor Collins stated as follows:

"The exciting story of Boston's new vitality is a story of dreams realized, of men's imaginations and ideas at work building a better today—an even better tomorrow.

"Since this is a story of creativity what better group to tell it than the creative community of the city. Accordingly, the advertising agencies listed below have combined, in a gesture of civic pride, to help defray the costs of publishing the story:

PROPOSED DOWNTOWN DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

FULL TEXT OF MAYOR'S DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

A DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM FOR BOSTON

Boston is one of the great cities of America. None has made a finer contribution to the history, the culture, the way of life of this nation of ours. Yet too much of Boston's greatness lies in its past.

Today Boston has far more than its share of slums and blight. The decay is sapping the great strength and beauty, vitality and charm which it still possesses in such abundance.

Among Boston's greatest assets are its harbor and rivers, its hills and parks, but above all its people. Bostonians love their city. I believe they are ready to do their share toward making it a better place.

Once started on its way toward rebuilding, Boston will find all America cheering it on and ready to help.

There is, after all, a little bit of Boston in everyone who calls himself an American.

Boston Has Too Many Slums, Too Much Blight

The primary purpose of this report is to make specific action recommendations and to suggest a method by which they can be carried out.

I have not tried to create or gather any new statistics on the extent of slums and blighted areas in Boston. In the first place, I found those already prepared impressive enough, and depressing enough too, I might add. In the second place, statistics have had only a limited success in moving cities to act on their problems of slum and blight. The blighted areas map which accompanies this report is graphic evidence of how widespread and serious the problem is. The charts showing the rising tax rate, declining tax base and population are vivid demonstrations of the seriousness of the City's economic problems.

Boston has all kinds of slums and all kinds of blight. It has overcrowded slums and half empty slums. It has bad housing and badly rundown commercial areas. It needs lots of slum clearance but it offers great opportunities for rehabilitation.

For those who are not convinced or who need their recollection refreshed I suggest that they go and see for themselves. The best way is to walk around the City and have a firsthand look yourself.

Of the many walking tours a citizen might take I suggest two. They will give some idea of the extent of blight in Boston today.

Washington Street from Northampton street to Haymarket square — distance under 2.5 miles (MTA rapid transit stops at both ends).

This walking tour will take you along one of Boston's main arteries. Starting in Lower Roxbury you will quickly be in the South End, then you pass into the downtown shopping area and finally to the very decayed part of downtown which is to become the Government Center area. Detours into the side streets and back alleys will help to round out the picture.

On your way you will see lovely squares, a beautiful cathedral, the City's first redevelopment project, the big department stores, Old South Meeting House and Faneuil Hall.

You also will see some of the worst slums in the City plus enough shabby rundown commercial buildings to make you uncomfortable about the future of downtown.

Main Street in Charlestown from Sullivan square to City square — distance one mile (MTA rapid transit stops at both ends).

Here is hallowed ground. There is much that is handsome and worth preserving in Charlestown. It could be one of the most attractive and convenient neighborhoods in the City. Ask yourself how long it can survive the onslaught of the slums you will pass through on your way to City square.

If these walks discourage you try the Freedom Trail. The obstacles today are far less than those which were faced and conquered long ago.

The Big Decisions

Boston has some big decisions to make if it is going to undertake the major rebuilding program which is necessary if it is to face the future with confidence.

First, has Boston enough faith in itself and its future to make the try?

Boston has its share of prophets of gloom and doom who think the City is too far gone to be rebuilt. It has its share of sceptics who believe that Boston's habits in transacting the public business make a major effort impossible.

Second, is Boston willing to face the full extent of its slums and blight, to stop tinkering with patchwork solutions and support a big, bold, fast moving program?

Third, will Boston have enough patience to understand that cities are not remade in a day or a year, and have enough courage to accept the hardships and disruption that are inevitably a part of rebuilding?

Fourth, will Boston be willing to accept the leadership of its Mayor in this rebuilding effort?

I assume the answers are affirmative, and so make the recommendations which follow.

Recommendations

Recommendations are divided into several categories in the following order: Proposed development program, financing, staff organization and suggested guideposts.

PROPOSED DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

There is only one program now available or even on the horizon by which Boston can begin to cope with all its major areas of slum and blight.

This program is federally aided urban renewal. Broadly conceived and vigorously administered it can turn the corner. Boston can afford a large scale federally aided urban renewal program. There is no other comprehensive solution available and a patchwork solution is not good enough.

Rehabilitation is the key to the kind of urban renewal program Boston requires. Considerable clearance will still be needed but rehabilitation should be the major emphasis.

With judicial approval of the tax agreement features of the Prudential legislation for blighted areas a major obstacle to new investment in Boston has been removed.

At this stage two kinds of urban renewal action are possible. One, the filing of a survey and planning application for a specified area, leads directly to adoption and execution of an urban renewal plan. The other step is a request for funds to make a general neighborhood renewal plan. The purpose of this plan (known in the trade as a GNRP) is to identify sub-areas needing urban renewal treatment and to establish priorities for undertaking indicated projects.

This report recommends a comprehensive, action oriented urban renewal program combining survey and planning applications and general neighborhood renewal plans.

The material needed for making the necessary federal applications recommended below has been put together in draft form and can be put into final form very quickly once Authority and Council approval have been given for the filing of such applications.

The first group of recommendations deals with Downtown Boston, the second with the ring of neighborhoods closest to downtown.

Downtown Development Program For Boston Proper

Boston Proper is the name the planners give the peninsula which stretches back from the Harbor to Massachusetts Avenue. It includes the Central Business District and areas adjacent to it.

This area is the most important part of Boston and the primary reason for the existence of the other neighborhoods of the City in their present form. Here are located one of the major financial centers of the United States, the largest retail shopping center in New England, and the regional centers for a whole host of government, professional and commercial activities.

Here also are some of the worst slum and blighted areas of Boston. So large, so menacing, in fact, that they are pushing most new private development steadily out Boylston street if not out of the City altogether. This is an area that is in deep trouble.

Yet potentially this is the most attractive and most interesting downtown in all America, bar none, not even fabled San Francisco.

Its ancient street pattern can be turned to far more of an asset than the more efficient but dull grid pattern common to most other American cities.

Its abundance of historic sites offers islands of strength around which rebuilding can confidently begin.

Its compactness, its walkability give it hope of putting the automobile in its proper place.

Here is Boston's greatest asset, its surest source of continued strength and greatness, if we can but renew the area before too many functions abandon it for the open country or for more efficient downtowns elsewhere.

For the purpose of analysis and recommendation this area is divided into three general neighborhood plan areas: Downtown, Downtown North and Back Bay.

Downtown North is the older and more historic Boston and the one which will receive action treatment first.

Downtown North — Historic Old Boston

Downtown North is that part of Boston Proper lying to the north and east of the Beacon Hill Historic District and to the east of School and State streets. It excludes the West End project now in execution.

A general neighborhood renewal plan is proposed for the entire area. It would be completed simultaneously with the completion of the Government Center redevelopment plan.

I. Government Center

Downtown Boston is the major governmental center of New England. It is not only municipal headquarters, it contains the State Capitol and most state offices and the most important regional and state offices of the federal government.

These functions are today widely scattered in overcrowded, obsolete buildings. They will be more efficient and more economical if they are gathered together.

The Boston City Planning Board, through consultants, prepared a bold, imaginative and sensitive plan for the creation of a Government Center in what is now the most rundown section of the central area.

This plan has in principle won the support of the federal and state governments as well as the City. It is proposed that the plan be carried out through a nonresidential federally aided redevelopment project.

This project can be one of the most important in Boston's history. Without it the presently blighted area will grow and spill over into the remainder of the central area and seriously weaken it. Contrariwise, with the Government Center on its way a plan for the renewal of the central business district can have some real hope of success.

The Federal Urban Renewal Administration has just approved an application for federal survey and planning funds for the Government Center project.

The U. S. General Services Administrator has indicated a willingness to locate a large federal building in the project area provided he has satisfactory assurances that suitable buffer buildings will guarantee that the federal building will not be isolated. The City has given the necessary assurances concerning the City Hall. The General Court has given similar assurances regarding state participation. The assurances and other matters relative to federal participation must now be put in acceptable form.

The Government Center Project should have top priority in the city government. Though the basic planning work has been completed much more remains to be done to make the project a success. Government Centers have a tendency to be rather dull and uninspired. By keeping the spirit of the consultant's report Boston can avoid such a failure.

During the planning period careful study should be given to certain fringe areas which might well have been included in the survey and planning study area. For example, the area bounded generally by Congress street, Hanover street, the Central Artery and State street is an area of prime historic significance for the whole nation.

Some of the buildings such as Faneuil Hall and the Quincy Market are in daily use for their original purposes. This is living history at its best.

Some other parts of the historic area are street patterns and not much more. Scornful as the purists may be of Sturbridge or Williamsburg, they help make history come alive for young and old alike. A restoration of old Boston in this area would be quite appropriate despite the shadow of the Central Artery. This section could have been included in the Government Center as a rehabilitation section. The desirability of so including it should be thoroughly explored in the project planning period now beginning.

2. North Station Area

This area is bounded approximately by the North Station complex, the Central Artery and the Government Center and West End Projects.

A group of merchants and property owners in this area have sponsored and published a very competent study and report on their area making specific redevelopment and renewal recommendations. The report is now being analyzed by the planning staff. It could be regarded as a second priority project directly following the Government Center. The self-help approach taken here deserves in response priority attention and action from the City government.

3. The North End

The North End is one of the most lively neighborhoods of Boston. It has a flavor and a way of life which should be preserved, not destroyed. A clearance project for the North End would be an outrage. The City would never be the same.

Every effort should be made to rehabilitate and strengthen this unique neighborhood. The general neighborhood renewal plan will help achieve this goal.

Early in this planning process the City should begin working with a broadly based and representative North End neighborhood improvement committee.

4. The Atlantic Avenue Waterfront Area

This area used to be Boston's window on the world. From here clipper ships traveled the sea lanes of the world. Today the area is stagnant, unattractive and deteriorating. Most of the port functions have moved elsewhere in the harbor. The old wharves and warehouses have been left to adjust as best they can. And some of the adjustments are fascinating indeed. Who would ever believe that an ancient harborfront warehouse could be converted into apartments so attractive as to enjoy a long waiting list?

This waterfront area can and should again become Boston's window on the world. A seafaring city should be able to look upon the sea and the harbor as it goes about its daily rounds. The great port cities of the world, New York, San Francisco, Naples, Bombay, Colombo, Hong Kong, all enjoy the sights and sounds of their harbors, the sight and smell of the sea.

What is needed is an action program aimed at rebuilding and redeveloping this area.

The first and biggest job is to think through the kinds of development which will make the best use of this land. A second and equally important job is to determine how many of the existing uses can better be located elsewhere.

Once plans and programs are made for the redevelopment of the area it is likely that the urban renewal process will be called into play.

The Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce has long had an interest in a waterfront development program for the Atlantic Avenue area. Boston is fortunate in having a vigorous Chamber with a far deeper and more practical understanding of urban renewal than is usually the case.

The Chamber was among the first to propose redevelopment of the Waterfront Area. The Chamber might very well be willing to undertake and finance an urban renewal study of the area. In seeking such help from the Chamber the City should make clear that it will cooperate in every way including, of course, the work to be done in the preparation of the proposed general neighborhood plan for this area. The City should also freeze the disposition of City owned property in the area until a program can be established.

It would of course be essential for the Chamber to work with the various state agencies which have a present or potential interest in the area.

The interest and excitement generated by the Golden Gateway Redevelopment Project in San Francisco is an indication of the potential a waterfront rebuilding program can offer.

Downtown Boston

The area bounded approximately by the Common, the Public Garden, Arlington street, the railroad tracks, the Central Artery and State and School streets is recommended for a general neighborhood renewal plan.

This area contains the retail core, the financial and entertainment centers.

When people think of Boston or almost any other city, they are thinking of downtown. It is the downtown area particularly the shopping area which gives a city much of its flavor and character.

Boston's downtown can be uniquely attractive. The narrow old streets, the lovely Public Garden and Common, the many historic buildings combine to give downtown Boston a setting which any city anywhere in the world would be proud to have. Add to that a mass rapid transit system which is underground and you have something very special indeed.

Yet most Bostonians would agree that downtown leaves something to be desired. Everybody has ideas about what ought to be done. Everybody agrees that a big rebuilding program ought to be undertaken and soon. But then there are the taxes. Downtown Boston has its problems, and these problems seem to be getting worse instead of better.

What can be done?

The City Planning staff has completed what it calls a "General Plan for the Central Business District." The planners see great opportunities for downtown. To them this is the most exciting, most promising part of Boston.

The planners' General Plan has been approved by the Planning Board and the question always the question with a Plan, is, what happens next.

Conceptually sound, imaginative, thorough the planners' plan is but it is not self-executing.

If Downtown Boston is to be rebuilt we need to put together an action program.

The first step is the preparation of a general neighborhood renewal plan. Out of this broader area plan will come specific action projects.

The Retail Trade Board has indicated its awareness of the serious problems affecting the retail core and its desire to cooperate with the City in achieving workable practical solutions.

The City should welcome this interest and cooperation and should encourage the Retail Trade Board and its membership to undertake extensive studies of their own.

It is entirely possible that a rehabilitation project for the retail core can be undertaken simultaneously with the preparation of the general neighborhood renewal plan for the downtown area. If the Retail Trade Board is ready to support it, this approach should be taken.

The growth of suburban shopping centers, the number of empty stores downtown, the tremendous importance of the retail core to the tax base all point toward the need for early action.

Large scale area clearance should be avoided. Emphasis should be on making the retail core more attractive and separating vehicular and pedestrian traffic as much as possible.

The Back Bay and Prudential Center

The remainder of Boston Proper, the Back Bay, is also recommended for a general neighborhood renewal plan. This is particularly urgent in view of approval of the Prudential Center legislation by the Supreme Judicial Court and the General Court.

The Prudential Center can be a great boon to the Back Bay area and to the City as a whole. However, without proper planning and zoning controls speculators could destroy the special quality of the existing Back Bay residential area.

This area is bounded by the Public Garden, the Charles River, Massachusetts avenue and the alley between Commonwealth avenue and Newbury street.

It is ideally located for residential use and is one of the handsomest urban districts in the United States. Its wide, tree-lined streets, its large and pleasant houses are worth preserving, perhaps even to the extent of having the area designated as an historic district. Though these houses are not as old as those on Beacon Hill, we will not see their like again.

The Beacon Hill houses have proved adaptable to modern single family use. The larger houses of the Back Bay are virtually obsolete for such use.

A debate is now under way on whether the height restrictions should be taken off and high rise apartments allowed to dominate the area. Serious concern has also been expressed about the rate at which institutions are acquiring property in this area.

The even scale, the harmony of these blocks is one of their chief attractions. Once lost, it can never be regained. While tall apartment buildings might be appropriate for the water side of Beacon street, they will not be helpful in retaining the character of the remainder of the Back Bay residential area.

A general neighborhood renewal plan for this area, the neighborhood of the Christian Science Church and the area between Huntington avenue and the tracks, can do much to insure that the impact of the Prudential Center on the Back Bay is all good.

The Rest of Boston Outside Boston Proper

Ninety per cent of Bostonians live outside Boston Proper. Slums and blight have found their way into many of these outside areas. Other areas are almost totally free of blight. A balanced, comprehensive urban renewal program cannot safely ignore the decay which menaces too many of Boston's residential neighborhoods. Some need urgent treatment now. Others will benefit by general neighborhood renewal planning. The healthier neighborhoods will benefit by having the most blighted neighborhoods renewed.

Set forth below are more detailed proposals concerning certain of these areas.

Charlestown

Charlestown is the site of the Battle of Bunker Hill and the home of an estimated 21,000 people. The hills of Charlestown offer some of the best views in the City and the flats have some of the worst slums. The slums are moving up the slopes of the hills. For all its history and all its charm Charlestown has been treated as a stepping stone to downtown Boston from the North. The elevated and the Mystic Bridge do a pretty thorough job of blighting Charlestown all by themselves.

Despite these adverse influences and long standing neglect of the area by the City government, there is a large amount of good housing and more which can be saved if a rehabilitation program is begun promptly enough.

An urban renewal program can provide for rehabilitation of sound housing, clear the slums and spur the City to provide long needed schools and other community facilities.

A meeting has been held with a representative group of Charlestown residents to gain their views and to explain the urban renewal process to them.

Their response was encouraging. Charlestown should be formally designated as an urban renewal area and an application filed for survey and planning funds. Close contact with the neighborhood committee should be maintained throughout the planning period. Much more can and should be made of Charlestown's historic past. It can help Charlestown to renew itself.

The City's share of the cost of carrying out an urban renewal project can be met almost entirely by providing long scheduled community facilities such as the new Harvard-Warren School, scheduled for construction in the fall of 1961. This school is estimated to cost almost $2,000,000. Since it will serve the Charlestown area it can be used to make available almost $4,000,000 in Federal funds without additional cost to the City. Other scheduled community facilities can make up nearly all the remaining City cost.

South End

The South End is an area of faded elegance where some 42,000 Bostonians live. It is bounded by the B. and A. tracks, the Central Artery and the Inner Belt. The outer South End is sometimes identified as part of Lower Roxbury. However, the Inner Belt will cause it to become part of the South End.

Once a residential area of great charm its day of fashion was brief and it has become seriously blighted. It now contains some of the worst housing in Boston, a good part of Skid Row and some very rundown commercial areas.

Opposed to this decay are some great strengths around which a renewed neighborhood can focus. They include the handsome and still sound blocks such as Union Park, the Squares, the great Cathedral, the area's institutions and many other churches.

Above all, however, is the indomitable spirit of the people who live in the South End and the great faith of their friends and supporters in the rest of the City.

The South End is too promising to ignore, too near the edge of disaster for remedial action to be delayed.

The South End needs a major renewal effort. It will call for substantial clearance to cut away the slums. Much of the clearance area should go into nonresidential uses. It will require resourceful rehabilitation on a very large scale. There are some very good reasons why rehabilitation can work in the South End.

The South End has lots of light and air, far more than Beacon Hill. The streets are wider, the backyards are ample.

The rehabilitation project of the Friends Neighborhood Guild in Philadelphia offers a stirring example of what can be done to restore and re-invigorate such an area. A wholesale application of the design ideas of the Friends project with the application of all the available tools of urban renewal could make the South End a pleasant surprise to one and all.

There are proposed schools, a fire station, a library and other community facilities which can defray most of the City's share of the cost of carrying out the project. It is unfortunate that the opportunity was neglected to use the $2 million Franklin-Rice School to obtain $4 million in federal aid without additional cost. That money could have given the school itself a much more adequate site, and made possible very substantial rehabilitation.

Every renewal project needs not only to be strong in itself but to tie on to something strong. A well conceived urban renewal plan can orient the South End toward the Copley Square-Prudential Center business and shopping area.

It is not much of a walk. Hundreds of commuters who work in that area prove it every day by parking their cars in the South End and walking to work.

Urban renewal of the South End should have a high priority. The South End is a well organized neighborhood and the City and the neighborhood should develop and maintain a close working relationship through the preparation and carrying out of the urban renewal plan.

The proposed Castle Square project area should be incorporated in the South End project and planning for its redevelopment should proceed on that basis. If whenever tenants and financing are assured for developments of the magnitude proposed, the project can be pulled out and moved ahead, if early acquisition legislation can be obtained.

Concentrations of blight are found outside the central area, Charlestown and the South End in several other districts, principally Roxbury-North Dorchester, Parker Hill-Fenway, South Boston, East Boston and Jamaica Plain.

For each of these areas the general neighborhood renewal plan approach is proposed.

For the outer areas less affected by blight a nonfederal improvement area program is proposed.

Roxbury-North Dorchester

The proposed area would be bounded by the Inner Belt, the

New Haven tracks, Columbus avenue, Seaver street, Columbia road and Massachusetts avenue.

This area is deteriorating rapidly. A program must be prepared for the whole neighborhood before it is too late.

The area contains many attractive features, particularly the adjacent parks which give hope that the neighborhood can be restored.

Community organizations are active in the area. Their participation and support can help greatly in making the general neighborhood planning program a success.

The Redevelopment Authority has received approval for survey and planning activities for a renewal project in the Washington Park area of Roxbury. This can be an attractive project if it is part of an overall area program. A general neighborhood renewal plan will go a long way toward insuring the success of Boston's first effort at urban renewal.

Parker Hill-Fenway

This is Boston's prime institutional area. It is bounded by Parker Hill, the town of Brookline, the Charles River, Massachusetts avenue and the New Haven tracks.

The area has many natural assets and can be one of the most attractive in Boston. It has, however, its full share of blight. The likely expansion of the many major institutions in the area can have a blighting effect on the tax paying land which is left.

With integrated planning for the whole area a new tax base can be created as a result of the expected institutional growth.

Individually held property can be maintained and improved if there is definite knowledge of what the future of the area will be.

Under a 1959 amendment to the housing act the expenditures of educational institutions for property acquisition can be used toward making up the City's share of the cost of carrying out improvements in the area. Substantial credits will be available to Boston from this area.

If neighborhood groups and the institutions can work together this area can become one of the show-places of Boston. If they go their separate ways, in the long run no one will benefit.

South Boston

South Boston has some of the best located and maintained residential areas in Boston. It also has some of the most important industrial plants and port facilities in the City. These two very different land uses are not on friendly terms. Rather there is a belt of slum and blight between them which is dangerous to both.

The slums and blight menace the sound residential areas of South Boston and are no asset to the industrial users either.

A general neighborhood renewal plan will identify various project areas and indicate desirable areas for rehabilitation and for clearance for industrial or residential reuse.

South Boston has too many advantages, its people have too much pride and hope for their neighborhood to let it be neglected any longer.

The General Neighborhood Renewal Plan approach should be submitted to the people of South Boston and if they give it their support, work should get under way at once.

East Boston

East Boston would be divided into two parts. The Orient Heights section to the east of the highway and railroad tracts is proposed as an improvement area. A program of general neighborhood renewal planning is proposed for the rest of the area. This program would identify and schedule areas for rehabilitation and areas for clearance for industrial, commercial or residential reuse. The geographical advantages of East Boston's location are so great that there would be little difficulty in developing cleared areas for new uses. With the worst of the blight removed, rehabilitation of the remaining area could proceed with confidence.

Neighborhood participation is essential to the success of such a program, particularly when it comes to the selection of priority project areas.

Jamaica Plain

The Jamaica Plain neighborhood is one of the less blighted older neighborhoods of the City. Yet blight is substantial enough to cause concern. A general neighborhood renewal planning study can help identify the strong and weak points of the area and suggest ways of strengthening the healthy portions and correcting the deficiencies that exist.

The approach again would emphasize rehabilitation and cooperative work with a representative neighborhood organization.

Opportunity Projects

It seems likely that as the program moves along there will be opportunities to carry out small-scale projects which can have major benefit to the City. The program should be flexible enough to permit this.

Financing the Program

The City of Boston can afford to undertake this program now and all at once. The more serious question is can it afford not to.

The proposals made here will cost the City an estimated $30,000,000 in capital funds. There is ample bond margin for this amount. It will require approximately $60,000,000 in new federal funds.

Charts are attached showing estimated allocation of federal funds, staging plan by quarters, and impact of the development program on the net annual tax rate for debt service.

The federal share of the funds can be made available. The City's share of the cost can be financed through long-needed neighborhood improvement such as schools. The cost of these capital improvements can be met without exceeding the amount presently paid each year for already outstanding debt service. The decline in debt service charges over the years ahead gives the Administrative responsibility is divided between the Mayor and the semi-autonomous Redevelopment Authority. A good program can get lost quicker by divided responsibility than in any other way. The challenge here is to devise a method which will make it possible for the Mayor and the Authority to do their work on this big program as an effective team while preserving to themselves their respective prerogatives under the law.

There are many ways to provide for this unity of approach. Committees are often proposed and seldom work. The Mayor and the Authority could endeavor to work out problems which might arise at the "summit." This is a dubious time-consuming solution for a Mayor who is chief executive officer of the whole city government and for Authority members who each have private careers to follow.

The Mayor and the Authority could each set up a separate staff representative. This solution provides as many opportunities for conflict as for cooperation.

A simple and direct solution is for the Mayor and the Authority to agree on one man as the top administrator to be in charge of the development staff and program, subject to the dual control of the Mayor and the Authority. He should be removable at the pleasure of either the Mayor or the Authority and should explicitly waive any tenure rights he might acquire under state law. Thus whatever power he might have he could be removed from office at any time.

This report proposes the creation of the position of development administrator to fill that function. The development administrator would serve in the dual capacity of head of the Authority staff and head of a proposed office of development responsible to the Mayor.

In the Redevelopment Authority the Development Administrator would have the following functions:

Develop and carry out plans and program of the Authority subject to appropriate review by the Authority;

Direction of Authority staff;
Internal organization of Authority staff and functions;

Relations with federal and state agencies;

Recruitment of staff personnel;

Establishment of staff compensation subject to Authority approval;

Appointment of personnel, counsel and consultants subject to Authority approval;

Coordination with Mayor and City departments.

Under the reorganization the Authority staff would be divided into four divisions:

Planning, Project Development, Land, Operations.

The planning staff would consist of the planners transferred from the City Planning Board by the Prudential Center legislation. Additional renewal planners would be recruited. The operations staff would consist of the Authority staff as it existed at the time the Prudential Center bill was passed. New personnel would be recruited for the project development and land sections.

Functions of the divisions would be as follows:

1. PLANNING DIVISION

a. General Planning Section

(1) Comprehensive Planning

(2) Capital Improvement Programming

(3) Community Planning

(4) Referrals

b. Transportation Planning Section

Preparation of a transportation planning program and coordination with other agencies involved.

c. Renewal Planning Section

Preparation of redevelopment, renewal and general neighborhood renewal plans, final project reports and other required documentation.

2. PROJECT DEVELOPMENT DIVISION

a. Federal processing to the loan and grant stage

b. Federal relations during project execution

c. Relocation of families

d. Relocation of businesses

e. Rehabilitation in renewal areas

3. LAND DIVISION

a. Land acquisition including appraisals and negotiations except in West End and Whitney street

b. Land disposition except for West End and Whitney street

c. Negotiation of 121a contracts, including tax agreements

4. OPERATIONS DIVISION

Complete responsibility independent of all other divisions for the substantial work remaining to be done in the West End and Whitney street projects and for the closing out of the New York Streets project.

In addition, the Operations Division will have the following responsibilities for new projects:

a. Title searches

b. Closings

c. Property management

d. Demolition

e. Project engineering

f. Site improvements

g. Controller—payroll and project accounting

In addition to the work of the divisions the Development Administrator's office will contain a unit for administrative management, legal staff and special counsel.

The Operations Division would continue to occupy space at 73 Tremont street. The rest of the Authority's work would be carried on from City Hall Annex. Assuming refurbishing and refurnishing sufficient space is available for present needs and likely future expansion.

Office of Development

The proposal here is that an Office of Development be created by ordinance. It would be headed by the Development Administrator by appointment of the Mayor.

The Office of Development would have responsibility for coordination with other city department heads and with a citizens advisory committee to be appointed by the Mayor. It would also have responsibility for coordination of code enforcement in improvement areas.

PROPOSED BOSTON DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM
ORGANIZATION

ORGANIZATION

The Office of Development would have the following staff functions:

1. COMMUNITY RELATIONS. To be transferred from the Mayor's office.

2. CIVIC COORDINATOR. The civic community should be able to look to one person in the development office to get information on what is going on, to contribute suggestions and ideas and to maintain contacts. One function of the Civic Coordinator would be to step up plans and programs for the creation of a development fund.

Since this is a new function the Civic Foundation could be asked to finance it for a beginning period.

3. HOUSING EXPEDITER. Promotion of housing programs and policies is a highly specialized, much neglected and very important area. One of the Housing Expediter's functions would be to promote the establishment of a private housing development fund.

Since this, too, is a new function the Civic Foundation could be asked to finance it for a beginning period.

4. PUBLIC INFORMATION. The public is entitled to as much information as possible about the development program in the most useful form possible. An experienced full-time information officer can be very useful in meeting this need. So can a publication budget.

Whether or not this is a new function it would be appropriate for the Civic Foundation to finance it for a beginning period.

The Zoning Commission and the Board of Adjustment are now homeless and could be transferred to the Office of Development for house-keeping purposes.

The carrying out of an ambitious development program requires the help of many professionals with specialized talents and a high order of competence. The demand for such people far exceeds the supply. Boston can obtain such people if it offers sufficient compensation and establishes a workable administrative set-up.

GUIDEPOSTS

The success or failure of an ambitious urban renewal program will be determined in large part by the guideposts or ground rules which govern it. The best plans can come to naught without public confidence in the program and the way it is being carried out.

Here are some of the policies which will help insure public confidence:

1. PUBLIC INFORMATION

The citizens should be fully informed about the progress of the program in its various stages. The primary means of accomplishing this should be through the newspapers and the television and radio stations. Talks before interested groups can also be useful. The individual citizen should also be able to walk in off the street and get the answers to his questions.

Reporter and citizen alike, however, must understand that at some stages in a project there are many questions which have no answers except speculative ones. Here the best possible answer must be given with proper caution that the final answer is not known.

2. NEIGHBORHOOD PARTICIPATION

The residents of a neighborhood for which renewal is proposed should assume an active role in the replanning and renewal of their area. Neighborhood participation can best be secured through a renewal committee composed of representative citizens of the neighborhood.

A basic assumption of this program is that it will be carried out on a partnership basis between City Hall and the people of the neighborhoods through neighborhood renewal organizations.

3. FAMILY RELOCATION

One major purpose of a renewal program is to relocate families from substandard dwellings into decent, safe and sanitary housing at prices or rentals they can afford to pay at convenient locations. This is not just a pious principle; it is the basic requirement of the law. It is of prime importance that such relocation of families as may be required be done with decency, humanity and a firm determination that the spirit as well as the letter of the relocation law be observed.

4. BUSINESS RELOCATION

Some dislocation of businesses is just as inevitable as that of families, and the hardship is at least as great.

Even though there is no legal requirement to do so, a business relocation office should be established and staffed to assist displaced businessmen in finding satisfactory new quarters.

5. PROJECTS AND PATRONAGE

A large scale urban renewal program offers tremendous opportunities for patronage and the dispensing of favors. Job opportunities are opened up; contractual services are required. The purchase and then sale of large amounts of property offers many opportunities for doing favors.

However, neither the public nor the federal government can be expected to provide the support such a program requires unless they are confident that patronage and favoritism are out.

6. A CITY BEAUTIFUL

Renewal and rehabilitation do not guarantee beauty. It is entirely possible to rebuild Boston in an unattractive, unimaginative way which will make people wonder whether the new is in fact better than the old. This can be avoided with sufficient forethought and courage.

It is the function of distinguished architecture and imaginative civic design to see that beauty is the hallmark of the renewed city. Beauty once flourished in Boston. It must again. The Public Garden, the State House are marvellous examples of what can be accomplished.

PART II IMPROVEMENT AREAS

Orient Heights, Brighton, West Roxbury, Hyde Park, Roslindale, Dorchester.

Approximately half the population of Boston lives in six predominantly residential neighborhoods outside the heavy concentrations of slums and blight which lie close to the center of the city. Except for Brighton and the Orient Heights section of East Boston, these areas occupy approximately the southern half of Boston.

Each of the six neighborhoods has pockets of slums and blight that are growing. The pattern of decay which wreaked havoc on the older neighborhoods closer-in is beginning to take shape in these newer neighborhoods as well.

The housing in these six improvement areas is Boston's greatest and best hope of continuing to have a large supply of decent, moderately priced housing within the city limits.

The city has an obligation to itself as well as to the residents of these areas to make sure that no effort is spared to contain the blight already spreading and to roll it back in every way possible.

A neighborhood improvement program is the best means of achieving this objective. Such a program would consist of the following major elements:

1. Code enforcement aimed at eliminating blighted housing conditions.
2. Improved municipal housekeeping as a demonstration of the city's concern with the area.
3. Traffic regulations which will keep through traffic out of neighborhood streets as much as possible.
4. Development of neighborhood improvement plans.
5. Assistance to neighborhood groups, school organizations and others in improvement programs for the neighborhood and for individual home owners.

These are the neighborhoods in the city which are in the best position to improve themselves. What is needed is the continuing evidence based on performance that City Hall cares too and is ready to help in every possible way.

Pocket urban renewal projects may be necessary. Public housing for the elderly and for rehabilitation purposes may be desirable in some of these pockets or at other appropriate relocations. If such efforts are supported by the community they can undoubtedly improve the neighborhood. The capital improvement program can also help solve such problems and provide further evidence of the city's interest.

I am confident that with effective neighborhood improvement programs mortgage money for home purchases and home improvements will be easier to come by.

The big challenge in these neighborhoods is to keep them competitive with the suburbs. A city neighborhood which people live in only until they get a chance to move out is a neighborhood without much of a future.

Basic services for the neighborhood improvement program will be provided by the city planning staff, the code enforcement teams and the neighborhood workers in the office of development. Funds should be sought from the federal administration grant program or other sources to provide some of the desirable neighborhood services which the city itself might not be able to afford.

Code Enforcement

Code enforcement is the best preventive weapon a city has against the spread of blight. With adoption of the proposed zoning ordinance Boston for the first time will have an adequate set of codes, though continued revision is desirable.

Boston has the means at hand to establish an effective program of code enforcement. The Building Department now has jurisdiction over the zoning and building codes. Administration of the housing code could be transferred from the Health Department to the Building Department. This will leave only fire code inspection outside this one department. Inspection by a team is neither efficient nor economical.

A code enforcement unit should be established in the Building Department under a Deputy Commissioner. The deputy should have a small staff to develop policies and programs as part of the overall development and renewal program.

A force of inspectors should then be recruited and trained to inspect and report violations of all four codes—building, housing, zoning and fire. They should be trained not only to report violations but to explain the city's code program and to suggest ways and means of compliance. A compliance unit should be established in the inspection force.

Code enforcement should be undertaken on an area basis only except for the most serious complaints. Emphasis and priority should be given to the improvement areas and to the general neighborhood renewal planning areas. Public meetings and consultations with neighborhood groups should precede code enforcement action.

It can be anticipated that the inspection force will receive complaints about various aspects of municipal housekeeping. The citizens who are asked to bring their properties up to standard have a right to expect a high standard of municipal housekeeping. Co-operation among city departments here can produce striking results.

Relocation of Families and Businesses

A prime purpose of a renewal program is to relocate families from substandard housing into decent, safe and sanitary housing at prices or rentals they can afford to pay.

This relocation may come about through redevelopment, spot clearance, rehabilitation, code enforcement or right-of-way acquisition for highways.

The city should establish a central family relocation service for all such dislocation.

Business relocation can cause as much or more hardship as family relocation. Even though the city has no obligation to relocation businesses, it should voluntarily assume this responsibility.

Capital Improvement Program

An analysis of the 1960-1965 Capital Improvement Program approved by the Boston City Planning Board reveals tremendous opportunities for integrating capital improvements with urban renewal projects.

The capital improvement program has not been prepared on an integrated basis. Changes in facilities and priorities will undoubtedly take place as this integration is achieved.

However, from the information at hand it is quite clear that the city's share of a very sizable renewal program can be financed out of these scheduled improvements.

Appendix B is a table of the kinds of capital improvements which can count toward the city's share of the cost of carrying out an urban renewal project.

Although the city's borrowing margins are not great it can support a very much larger capital investment than is now being made in urban renewal and related community facilities.

$23.5 million of the urban renewal special debt limit is now unallocated—(Government Center would take $7.5 million of this.)

Thus total borrowing capacity of $24 million is available to finance the city's share of projects in addition to Government Center, if necessary funds for school construction can be borrowed outside the debt limit.

The city's bonding limits are not standing in the way of a larger program at this time. There is enough margin to work with for the time being.

Public Housing

Boston has a continuing need for an expanded public housing program both to serve as a relocation resource and to meet the needs of low income families for decent housing in the only way yet found to do so.

However, it is to be hoped that the day of building huge concentrations of public housing units is over for Boston.

Family size units should be limited to small groups, certainly no more than fifty units to a project. Rehabilitation should be tried out thoroughly as well as new construction.

With the growing number of older people it seems clear that increasing attention must be given to public housing for the elderly.

Public housing projects can be most useful and successful when their locations have been chosen with careful reference to the comprehensive plan.

In the past, project architecture has been on the whole, routine. In the future the ability to create imaginative and attractive design should be the major factor in the selection of project architects, and in the planning for the project.

Private Housing

A balanced urban renewal program must strive to improve the supply of private housing by new construction and by rehabilitation.

New construction should be of various housing types. It would be a mistake to assume at this time that high rise apartments have substantial appeal for families with children. Garden type apartments and town houses should be part of the program if children are to be found in Boston's renewal areas. Luxury housing has its place in the program but there must be lower priced housing as well. Rentals can be reduced through the use of the co-operative approach and also the limited dividend law.

It is recommended that the post of housing expediter be created in the Office of Development to promote the construction and rehabilitation of private housing. This effort would be vastly more effective if the civic community were to sponsor a housing development organization based on the successful experience of ACTION Housing in Pittsburgh.

Rehabilitation

Rehabilitation of dwellings must be made to work in Boston. There is no other choice. The city cannot possibly afford to tear down all of its substandard housing. Nor can it afford to let blighted units sink into slums. What is true of Boston is true of the Federal government. Difficult as rehabilitation may be, the Federal government must bend every effort to make it work.

We have learned how to select areas for rehabilitation, how to set standards and enforce them. We know that the city must be prepared to do its share in improving the neighborhood, through urban renewal or otherwise.

Mortgage insurance can be made available.

Having worked all of these problems out we then must turn to the lending institutions.

If Boston's mortgage lending institutions will set aside a certain proportion of their available funds for FHA guaranteed section 220 and 221 rehabilitation loans in urban renewal areas we will be over the last major hurdle.

If the city does its share I am confident that the institutions will be willing to do theirs.

Boston Development Fund

The renewal program will soon begin to create opportunities for commercial and industrial development in Boston Proper and elsewhere in the city.

These opportunities can turn into construction months or even years faster if the civic community has established a development fund to assist in getting over the hump.

Aid may be in the form of marginal financing, promotion, technical assistance or otherwise. Not the least value of such a fund would be the demonstration of confidence in the city which it would provide.

The businessmen of other cities, notably Philadelphia and Cleveland, have used this device to the great benefit of their communities. It could be equally helpful in Boston.

Tax Agreements

With Boston's tax rate and assessment pattern it may be assumed that prudent investors will seek specific assurances on their tax costs before committing funds to new construction in Boston. This has now become legally possible as a result of the Prudential legislation and advisory opinion—so far as improvements in blighted areas are concerned.

Transportation Planning

Cities sometimes suffer from too much planning and not enough action. In the transportation field, however, Boston seems to be suffering from too much action and not enough planning.

The City of Boston has made no decision for itself on what level of traffic service the arterial highway program should provide. If, for example, the highways are to be designed to handle peak hour loads, then the City is headed in the Los Angeles direction and will never catch up.

Nor has any decision been made on how many MTA passengers the city would like to accommodate downtown and what can be done by the city to encourage their coming.

Are all streets to be available for automobiles? All curbs to parked cars? Is the city getting maximum use of its existing pattern?

How many garage spaces should there be and what customers should they be aimed at—all day parkers or shoppers or a combination?

Does the City have at its command the expert staff needed to review the Inner Belt and Turnpike Extension proposals?

Who, if not the City of Boston, is to co-ordinate the activities of the State Department of Public Works, the Turnpike Authority, the Port Authority, the MTA, the MDC and the railroads as they make their presently unco-ordinated plans about what to do for or to Boston?

Boston needs a master transportation plan and a highly qualified transportation planning man, located in the Planning Division of the Redevelopment Authority.

Many studies will have to be made, including first a study of what all the other studies are about.

The worst thing in the world to do would be to call in a consulting firm and get a report.

First the City must get itself a man who understands transportation planning and the transportation field. He may then need to propose studies of one kind or another. Some of the funds for such studies might have to come from the city but some of it might come from other sources as well.

Boston's first need in transportation is to get its own top notch transportation expert. Incidentally he can not only work with the state agencies and city departments concerned with traffic, parking and transportation, he can render invaluable assistance in the planning and execution of urban renewal projects.

APPENDIX A

DESIRABLE AMENDMENTS TO THE REDEVELOPMENT LAW (CHAPTER 121)

1. EARLY LAND ACQUISITION

By a 1959 amendment to the federal law, the HHFA is permitted to lend money to local redevelopment authorities to acquire land in a proposed redevelopment area during the survey and planning period.

Use of such a procedure can accomplish the following:

1. Substantially reduce hardship to owners and tenants by permitting them to move out if they have made their own relocation arrangements.

2. Save a year or more in the period from planning to new construction by permitting an early start on family and business relocation.

Redevelopment Authorities in Massachusetts cannot take advantage of this helpful amendment under present state law.

2. STATE FINANCIAL AID TO CITIES FOR URBAN RENEWAL PROJECTS

Governor Furecolo has submitted to the General Court a comprehensive proposal for state assistance to municipalities engaged in urban renewal programs.

The federal government now makes a grant of two-thirds of the net cost of doing a federally aided redevelopment project (i.e., the difference between the total cost of a project and the amount received from sale of the land.) The municipality must put up the remaining one-third in the form of cash or community facilities such as schools.

The most important part of the Governor's proposal would provide state funds for half of the local share.

Such legislation would double the size of the program a city or town can undertake with the same amount of money. It also would cut in half the time it would take for a city or town to get rid of all of its slums and blight.

The proposed legislation should be revised so that the state aid will apply to the full local share of the project cost and not just that part which is to be put up in the form of cash. Otherwise, clearance projects will be favored over rehabilitation and renewal and there is no reason to believe that policy was intended.

The other major portion of the Governor's program calls for splitting the net cost of non-federal projects between the state and the city or town. In view of the recently liberalized federal law this proposal is not as necessary as it was a year ago. However, it could still be put to good use if it were adopted, particularly in smaller communities.

TRAFFIC RULINGS

Temporary

The Traffic Commissioner has promulgated the following ruling:

Whereas, If during roadway resurfacing in Florian street, West Roxbury, vehicles were to be allowed in said Florian street conformably to the rules and regulations of the Boston Traffic Commission otherwise operative, such construction would be substantially impeded; and . . .

Whereas, Such construction is to commence September 15, 1960; and

Whereas, A meeting of the Boston Traffic Commission is not scheduled to be held before the commencement of such construction; now therefore . . . I hereby promulgate the following rule and regulation to take effect forthwith and to be operative only until the completion of such construction or the expiration of one month from the date hereof, whichever is earlier:

For the period aforesaid, vehicles are excluded from the following street when and where official signs are in place:

Florian Street, West Roxbury.

From Hyde Park avenue to Wyvern street.

Whereas, If during the period of the International Foreign and Sports Car Show at the Commonwealth Armory, vehicles were to be allowed in Gaffney street, Boston Proper, conformably to the rules and regulations of the Boston Traffic Commission otherwise operative, the functions in connection with such show would be substantially impeded; and . . .

Whereas, Such functions are to commence October 17 and to end October 25, 1960; and

Whereas, A meeting of the Boston Traffic Commission is not scheduled to be held before the commencement of such show; now therefore . . . I hereby promulgate the following rule and regulations to take effect forthwith and to be operative only during the period heretofore described:

For the period aforesaid, vehicles are excluded from the following street:

Gaffney Street, Boston Proper.

From Commonwealth avenue to the Boston & Albany Railroad.

Two Building Permits Total $8.2 Million

The Boston Board of Appeals has approved two building permits totaling $8.2 million in new construction, Chairman Samuel Tomasello stated on September 20.

A $7.5 million expansion of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company building on Boylston street was authorized by the lifting of height restrictions to permit building an additional six stories above portions of the existing structure now four stories high.

Also approved was a $700,000 construction of 70 apartments at 125 Chiswick road, Brighton, by the Turner Associates of Boston.

The structure will be of brick and six stories high Mr. Tomasello said.

AMENDMENTS TO ORIGINAL AWARD OF DAMAGES

The Mayor and Public Improvement Commission have approved the following:

That the amount of $47 is awarded to Leon and Beatrice Bascetta for an damages sustained under the order of the Public Improvement Commission and Mayor of July 28, 1958, for the laying out and construction of Westminster street, Hyde Park.

That the amount of $421 is awarded to Harold H. and Dorothy Gleken for all damages sustained under the order of the Public Improvement Commission and Mayor of May 20, 1959, for the laying out and construction of Colorado street, Dorchester.

GAS MAIN PERMITS

The Mayor and Public Improvement Commission have approved the following:

FINANCES WORRY PHILA. MAYOR

Philadelphia's Mayor Richardson Dilworth maintains the city would need a minimum of $24,000,000 additional a year for the next four years to get on its feet and sustain itself.

"Even if we had stopped everything dead, we would need 10 to 12 million dollars more annually to get through the next four years," he told a news conference.

CITY RECORD

OFFICIAL CHRONICLE OF BOSTON MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

VOL. 52

SATURDAY, JANUARY 2, 1960

No. 1

LOOKING AHEAD!

This, in the rough, is how the City Planning Board staff envision the Government Center Plaza when the new Federal Building, State Office Building and City Hall are completed. In the foreground is a spacious setting for Boston's historic Faneuil Hall and at the top left is the State House Dome, overlooking the whole scene. The plaza will cover much of the space now occupied by Scollay and Dock squares. The exact locations of the buildings are yet to be determined, although State Office Building site, at the top of the sketch, is pretty well defined under present plans.

TIME-HONORED CEREMONY WILL MARK THE INAUGURAL OF MAYOR JOHN F. COLLINS

John F. Collins, 20 Myrtle street, Jamaica Plain, will become the forty-first mayor of Boston on Monday morning, January 4, 1960, at a formal inauguration ceremony in Symphony Hall.

The oath of office will be administered by Chief Justice Raymond S. Wilkins of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court. The new Mayor, in turn, will swear in the newly-elected City Council and School Committee.

Present at the ceremony will be the only two living former mayors of Boston: John B. Hynes, who is retiring after ten years in office, and City Councillor John E. Kerrigan, who served as mayor in 1945, who will receive the oath of office as city councillor for his fifth consecutive two-year term.

Richard Cardinal Cushing, Catholic Archbishop of Boston, will offer the invocation. Prayer will be offered by Rabbi Sidney Steiman of Temple Beth Hillel, and Rt. Rev. Bishop Athenagoras of the New England Greek Orthodox Diocese, followed by benediction from Rev. Frederick M. Meek, D.D., of Old South Church.

During the ceremony, City Clerk Walter J. Malloy will read the certificate of election of the Mayor, the City Council, and the School Committee.

essential than such a step. Standard specifications exist only in a relatively few categories, and no Board of Standards has been set up.

In relation to this matter, the first step must be to spell out adequate authority in law for the Purchasing Agent to compel departments to accept standard specifications. The present law, section 5 of chapter 3A of the Ordinances of 1953 states the duties and authority of the Purchasing Agent but it appears to limit him to filling requisitions that meet the test of legality. What is needed is the clear investing of the Purchasing Agent with authority to set up standard specifications which shall be compulsive on using departments. The enforcement of the use of standards should be made through a Board of Standards which would include the Superintendent of Supplies, the City Auditor, as secretary, and an employee designated from each of three using departments (Public Works, Hospital, and Parks and Recreation).

Standards in specifications are so basic and the possible savings so obvious that the matter speaks for itself. The National Institute of Governmental Purchasing is currently working on comprehensive standards. Similar standards should be adopted in Boston and enforced; the benefit to the entire purchasing system of the City would be great.

Planned Buying

II. All buying of supplies, materials and equipment should be based on the anticipated consumption by every department in the various categories of supplies and materials for a whole year. This long-term consolidated buying is done in such items as surgical and drug supplies and foods, but it is not done in such items as automobiles, paints, hardware supplies et al. (Copper tubing, for instance, is bought as much as five times a year.)

There should be an estimate of needs for the year in every commodity. The most effective approach to compelling submission of an annual estimate of needs to

FIN. COM. POINTS OUT POSSIBLE SAVINGS ON PURCHASING FOR CITY

December 29, 1959.

HON. JOHN F. COLLINS,
Mayor-Elect of Boston.

DEAR MR. COLLINS:

The Finance Commission feels that it can render a valuable service by supplying you with recommendations for your consideration in various areas of municipal administration which offer opportunity for substantial savings.

The City's expenditure for supplies and materials is substantial. In the latest complete fiscal year, 1958, the amount spent for supplies and materials in the City, County, School and Special Appropriations budgets, came to slightly in excess of $11,000,000. Roughly, another $750,000 can be added to this figure for equipment. The largest part of this $11,750,000 was handled by the Purchasing Division of the Administrative Services Department.

This expenditure could undoubtedly be reduced, and administration made more effective, if the body of recommendations originally offered by the Finance Commission were carried out.

Commodity Standards

I. Standards for every commodity should be established and a Board of Standards set up to enforce standard specifications. Nothing could be more basic and

TRAFFIC RULINGS

The Traffic Commission has promulgated the following ruling:

Whereas, If during the emergency created by the unsafe condition of the Summer Street Bridge over Fort Point Channel, parking of vehicles were to be allowed in Melcher street, South Boston, conformably to the rules and regulations of the Boston Traffic Commission otherwise operative, public safety would be endangered; and

Whereas, The Boston Traffic Commission has taken no action on the matter because notice of the precise effect of the present situation did not come to the attention of the Boston Traffic Department in time for a traffic engineering study of the matter to be presented to the last meeting of the Boston Traffic Commission; and

Whereas, Public safety and convenience require that remedial measures be invoked as of December 16, 1959; and

Whereas, A meeting of the Boston Traffic Commission is not scheduled to be held prior to December 16, 1959; now, therefore,

Pursuant to the power vested in me as Traffic Commissioner of the City of Boston by St. 1929, c. 263, s. 2B (as inserted by St. 1957, c. 263, s. 5), I hereby promulgate the following rule and regulation to take effect forthwith and to be operative only until the expiration of one month from the date hereof:

MUNICIPALITIES REQUIRE MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT

Principal speaker at the Mayor's luncheon to the Boston Municipal Employees' Conferama held November 19 and 20, 1959, at the Public Library Auditorium, Copley square, was Dr. John J. Brennan, Jr., vice president of Electronics Corporation of America, Cambridge, Mass. The subject of Dr. Brennan's talk was: "The Development of Management."

He spoke as follows:

Development of Management

When I received the cordial invitation from your Mayor to address you at this luncheon, I had two principal reactions. First, I was pleased to receive and to be able to accept the kindness of Mayor Hynes. Second, however, I was at the same time somewhat at a loss as to how to blend together the myriad of pertinent material covered during the various conference panels.

I have read with a great deal of interest the remarks of the several speakers during the past few days in which they have probed with you the business of operating the large municipality of Boston, including its hospitals, its health department, its public welfare department, its police department, etc., and have scrutinized the costs generated by these departments and the inevitable municipal taxes which must provide the means of defraying these and other operating costs.

These problems are complex and the conference just completed cannot help but bring greater understanding and cooperation in their resolution. In this connection, I am sure that Mayor Hynes and Mayor-elect Collins have and will welcome any and all constructive help forthcoming as a result of this conference, because the mayor of any municipality, especially a large focal city such as Boston, should possess at one and the same time the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Job, the persuasive oratory of Socrates, the friendly influence of Carnegie, the swiftness of Mercury, the cleverness of Machiavelli, the

First of a Series

A complete report of the annual Boston Municipal Employees' Conferama, Fourth Edition, held November 19 and 20, 1959, at the Public Library Auditorium, and attended by some 350 key city employees, begins with this issue of the "City Record."

Following the principal address on the Conferama, printed herein, each of the six panel discussions of the conference will be reported as a single installment of the entire series which, in all, will cover a period of seven weeks.

The panels will later be published as a document.

wit of Victor Borge, and, above all, a sincere dedication to and belief in the motto inscribed on your municipal seal, Sicut Patribus, Sit Deus Nobis—"God be with us as He was with our fathers."

The complex problems of municipal administration examined during this conference point up a very obvious, albeit an oversimplified summarial conclusion, namely, that any organization, industrial or municipal, in order to be operated efficiently and properly, must have a management which really manages and not a management which is such in name only. The operating problems always will be there in one form or another because that is what business is all about; but the management of an organization has the unavoidable responsibility for handling each problem, large or small, with the necessary skill and dexterity. This ultimate responsibility cannot be delegated or explained away.

Methods Are Common

It would be an unwarranted misplaced presumption on my part if I were to attempt to pontificate on the techniques and approaches to be pursued by a municipal administration, through its management, in the detailed conduct of its affairs. The field of municipal administration is comprised of so many areas which are unique that I would be best advised to leave the discussion of those matters to persons eminently more qualified than I. However, the general techniques of management, the modus operandi if you will, should be quite similar for industrial and municipal organizations. The criteria for good management should be the same in government as in industry.

One of the most vexing, recurring problems in industry is the acquisition of capable managers at all levels, and the internal development of the executive abilities of those employees who evidence the potential ability and the desire to become valued members of management, even top management.

I would surmise that government is no less faced with the need to provide a ready reservoir of capable managerial talent schooled in the realistic over-all problems of management and, hopefully, in the problems peculiar to governments as well.

One of your conference panels investigated the problems involved in training supervisors and other key employees whose duties would be concerned with running a multiplicity of municipal departments. The business of in-training development is very closely allied to the problem of providing a management which manages and of providing a second, or even a third, echelon which can offer indefinitely a continuity of managing management. The term most commonly applied to such a program is a broad one—"Executive Development." This is the aspect of management which I would like to discuss with you today because a keen intensive understanding of the underlying considerations in this area of management will represent a major step towards consistent availability of managers who manage.

Basic Criteria

Much has been written about the subject. However, much of the published material neglects to go behind the scenes to investigate the real reasons why some programs have succeeded and others have failed, either at inception or shortly thereafter. Unless certain basic criteria are met, including the overwhelmingly favorable attitude of those responsible for a program, any program is doomed to failure. These are the concepts which I would like to consider.

During the past ten years, the concept of executive development has gained general prominence. Executive development programs revolving around academic environments as well as individual company programs have become commonplace and accepted as a routine requirement of good management. However, we should not be misled into thinking that executive development is a newly discovered area of management—the need for it has always existed. The concept has taken on more formal robes in recent years with the accumulation of greater understanding on the part of top management of the need for more experienced executives both for the present and for future managements.

Subject Defined

What is "Executive Development"? There are many definitions which describe the term and the concept. These definitions revolve around the individual trainee, or trainor, the type of program, and the concept of individual and collective growth of management ability. All these concepts are valid. However, I like to think of it as that program whereby an entire organization is uplifted in performance, decision-making ability, and overall efficiency. This concept may appear to be broader than the traditional academic definitions. Yet, unless executive development incorporates my concept as one of the foremost goals, a program will consist only of an isolated set of courses, individual direction, etc., with no real over-all common organizational goal.

A successful "Executive Development Program" revolves around four factors—the real determinates of success or failure: (1) the intrinsic objectives of the program itself; (2) the attitude of top management toward the program; (3) the attitude of the supervisors toward the program; and (4) the attitude of the employees participating in the program. These are the factors which I would like to discuss with you because in my opinion the best executive development program will go for naught unless these factors are realistically considered and the program will achieve one certain result—failure. Let's examine each of them.

First: Objectives of Program

Let me enumerate the prime objectives of any development program:

1. To provide over-all upgrading of the performance of the organization by upgrading existing personnel;
2. To provide more competent supervision as well as more competent supervisors;
3. To make available a backlog of more competent supervisory replacements;
4. To create a continuing program of training in its various aspects;
5. To provide a method of evaluating supervisors and other key personnel, and establish courses of action based on these evaluations; and
6. To recognize, through advancement and other means, the individual accomplishments evidenced in the program.

These goals are quite broad, deliberately so; and rather all-encompassing, again deliberately so. They necessarily must be if the basic intrinsic values of a development program are to be realized. You may wonder why I have included some of these goals. Many development programs have not succeeded to the degree originally envisioned and, as a matter of fact, some even have been dismal failures. Much can be learned from these programs which have failed, as well as from those programs which have succeeded to a moderate or even a high degree.

The enumerated objectives have incorporated the goals which were ordained in whole or in part by those managements with successful development programs as well as those goals which the managements of mediocre programs either did not recite or, if set up in theory, did not achieve in practice. These objectives would seem to be self-evident; but, at the risk of belaboring the obvious, permit me to make a few very brief comments on them.

The completion of a cycle of a development program will, if properly planned, create one or more additional tiers of management. This reserve of management not only must be carefully planned and developed, but also, more important, must be utilized where appropriate as opportunities arise. Stated in another way, the personal incentives in a development program, which will be significant motivating factors to each participating individual, must be recognized by management. Also the personal accomplishments must be recognized in terms of salary, promotion, or other appropriate means, within a reasonable period of time or the personnel will tend to lose faith in the promises of the program and in management.

In-Training Program

Incidentally, for an entirely different reason—but no less compelling, the fruits of a development program should be enjoyed to the fullest extent because the tangible and intangible costs of such an in-training program can be significant. It behooves the leadership of an organization to ascertain that the program is enduring and that it is maintained at the same high level of purpose and endeavor as when in first bloom in order to recoup the value of its investment and to insure its executive growth.

The collective accomplishment of these objectives would seem to produce by themselves an industrial or municipal Utopia. Unfortunately, such is not the case. Development programs, like any project, have inherent limitations. For instance, we may be impressed with our magnificent accomplishments in this age of space study, satellites, trips to the moon, and the like, which are truly "out of this world." Unfortunately, most organizations are still in this world, with all of its prosaic limitations, and the individuals who inhabit it are not yet robots who cavort with heads sprouting antennas and with built-in data computers, infallible in all judgments. We human beings still have most of the inherent limitations and shortcomings which we exhibited before "Lunik," "Sputnik," and "Explorer" became household words. Intrinsic abilities vary; degrees of effort vary with each individual; and output and performance even more so. Supervisory ability and training ability will likewise vary.

Vigilance A Must

Rudyard Kipling, in his poem "The Gods of the Copybook Headings," succinctly expressed another human limitation when he said: "And the burnt fool's finger goes wobbling back to the fire." Individual habits seldom change; they wobble back to the same inefficient methods as if drawn by a magnet, unless constant management vigilance is maintained.

Consequently, these human imperfections necessarily will result in performances which are somewhat less than perfect, whether the performance is related to a development program or to some other area of endeavor.

In addition, the business of managing an organization is not a "sometimes" proposition, but rather a daily realistic resolution of problems in terms of situation analyses. No amount of foresight can possibly permit the incorporation of every fact and problem, present and potential, into a development program. At best, the program will provide a general management approach to business problems. The assumption then must be made that the present and future management standard bearers will exercise practical realistic judgment, utilizing their training, and seeking the guidance of the more seasoned members of the management team as the need arises.

In spite of these limitations, it is pretty much an indisputable fact that any organization, with a well defined management development program tailored to the needs of the specific organization, will reap many tangible and intangible benefits which will result in a higher degree of efficiency and a more mature judgment applied to management matters.

You will note that I have not attempted to spell out the dimensions and scope of the program itself. This is intentional. The objectives of a program bear no direct relationship to the physical aspects of the program, nor should the objectives be at all tempered by the proposed program details. Rather, the program should fit the needs and demands of the objectives. Stated another way, the program can be tailored to the needs of the organization, its financial condition, etc., but the objectives do not have the same flexibility. They cannot be compromised; they cannot be watered—or I should say, they should not be watered—for the convenience or gain of anyone.

Second: Attitude of Top Management

A development program will succeed or fail in direct proportion to the degree of active participation by the top management of an organization.

What do I mean by "active participation"? It means many things. It means taking the initiative in spearheading a development program, recognizing its inherent values and limitations. It means recognizing the dollars and cents cost of a program. It means tailoring the program to meet the needs of the organization. It means positive cooperation in effecting the desired results of the program—not passive cooperation as the path of least resistance or the acceptance of a program as "the thing to do."

It means evaluating the various types of programs available so that the selected program is introduced with the wholehearted understanding and approval of top management.

It means selecting supervisors solely on the basis of job qualification, knowledge, experience, and an ability to impart this knowledge to others. It means impartiality and objectivity in all decisions, and the insistence by management that supervisors "follow the leader" in their approach to problems.

It means making sure that the development program is being carried out as ordained by the program objectives. It means making sure that the program is properly coordinated by a representative of management.

In a nutshell, the top management must completely believe in its own development program and take all necessary steps to put this belief into operation.

Third: Attitude of Supervisors

The focal point of a development program is that group of supervisors who have the responsibility for putting the program into practice and who must make the many impartial objective decisions, including those personnel evaluations required, as the program progresses and unfolds. On the operating front the supervisor can make or break the project.

There is a natural reluctance on the part of most employees to be involved in a so-called training program because it smacks of going back to school and is sometimes erroneously construed as a reflection on their maturity and ability. Of course, such is not the case at all. Rather, it should be considered a mark of recognition to be selected as a participant in a development program. Nevertheless, it requires management dexterity on the part of supervisors to evoke the full and complete cooperation of the selected employees.

Must Be Sold on Program

It is axiomatic that unless the supervisor himself is completely and realistically sold on the development program, he will not be able to do a convincing selling job to those employees selected. The supervisor, therefore, must be realistically, factually sold on the program by management in terms of the values which will accrue to the organization as a whole and to the supervisor himself.

I would like to reiterate two facts which should be quite self-evident upon reflection and which should be pointed out to any supervisor who may offer objections—pseudo or otherwise—to such a program.

First, any teacher will readily admit that he never learned more quickly or more thoroughly than when he became an academician. Teachers are forced, if you will, to be better prepared as teachers than they ever were as bright eager students. The same is true of the supervisor. He should know the job of his subordinates in detail and therefore be in a position to offer guidance and leadership as often as the occasion demands. With this approach, the supervisor in a development program, acting as a teacher, a coach, and a management representative, all at the same time, cannot help but become a better informed, better disciplined administrator, of infinitely more value to the organization, and thereby enhance his personal welfare.

Second, it is an accepted fact, readily verified by any successful person, that the process of learning and studying should never end. If it does, then complacency has set in—and complacency and inertia are synonymous. When the individual learning process ceases, the growth process likewise stops.

A supervisor therefore should be more than willing to plunge into a development program which will actually formalize for him, for the benefit of all concerned, the never-ending learning process.

Fourth: Attitude of Employee

Finally we come to that group which represents the largest segment of a development program—the department or division employee. This group represents those selected as participants because of their demonstrated ability and their potential for moving up to more responsible administrative and management positions.

As previously stated, it should be a fairly simple matter to logically convince these embryonic administrators of the value of a development program to themselves personally. It should be considered a mark of distinction to be selected as one of the participants. However, as in other walks of life, logic yields to emotion and it is at this point that the supervisor must step in and play his role of salesman for the program.

A further problem, however, often arises in attempting to translate this sales-engendered enthusiasm into an enduring effort. It has often been said that free competition is what makes our economy so great. This adage is no less true in a development program. Some participants will do the minimum—others will do the best job possible. The program thus automatically produces at least one good criterion for ranking and upgrading the individuals, and indeed even for separating the wheat from the chaff.

Sacrifice Is an Ingredient

The best way I know for an individual to achieve the desired performance in a program is embodied in the word "self-sacrifice." Self-sacrifice may entail many things: much extra study; additional hours in the office; or an occasional week end of work. These are some of the elements, some of the ingredients which will breed success and the factors which management should impress upon the group, for they are the type of factors which managements recognize as steppingstones to success.

At the outset, I enumerated the four factors necessary for the success of a development program. There is nothing mysterious about these factors. They can be fulfilled if management really wants them fulfilled. If management has the will and the sincere conviction necessary to accomplish the task, then the resourcefulness, the ingenuity, and the downright sincerity of management will provide the way and the means to make the program a success, so that they can say: "Mission accomplished."

May I thank you very much for inviting me to meet with you; and may I congratulate you on the success of your conference. I wish you every success in your future endeavors.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

December 23.

General Order No. 631.

Sergeant-Detective Marcus E. Madden, Patrolmen Edward J. Silva and Martin J. Touhey, Division 11, and Patrolman Thomas J. Kelly, Jr., detailed to Division 11 from the Crime Prevention Bureau, are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

At about 2 A.M. on Saturday, December 5, 1959, Patrolmen Silva and Touhey while patrolling in Bowdoin street, Dorchester, in the sector car, observed three youths acting in a suspicious manner. They stopped the youths, who identified themselves as Geza O. Gaurenszky, 18 years, single, 2 School street, Dorchester; Thomas W. McAdams, 17 years, single, 5 Kingman road, Dorchester; and William M. Maynard, 15 years, 652 Adams street, Dorchester. They were brought to Station 11, where Gaurenszky and McAdams were charged with being suspicious persons, namely, breaking and entering in the nighttime. Maynard was charged with being a delinquent child, to wit: breaking and entering in the nighttime.

Questioned later that morning by Sergeant-Detective Madden and Juvenile Officer Kelly, and subsequent to further investigation by the officers, the youths admitted breaking into eight business places on Division 11 and into four places on other divisions. They also admitted to three attempted breaks in the nighttime; one larceny from a dwelling house; three stolen cars; eight larcenies from parked motor vehicles, including tires, radios, and one electric drill. Investigation resulted in recovery of one new Remington typewriter, five transistor radios, two tires and rims, and one electric drill. The youths confessed to having realized about $2,500 from their crimes.

On December 7, 1959, the three defendants appeared in Dorchester Court before Judge William G. Lynch, charged with seven counts of breaking and entering buildings in the nighttime, and larceny therein; two counts of larceny; and three counts of using a motor vehicle without authority. They were held in bail of $5,000 for a hearing on December 15, 1959, on which date Judge Lynch held Gaurenszky and McAdams in $5,000 for the grand jury. William Maynard was adjudicated a delinquent and was surrendered to the Youth Service Board.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the good police work of these officers in their investigation of the breaks and larcenies, on which they spent many hours, and of their arrest of the culprits with subsequent interrogation and follow-up work, all of which resulted in the solving of a number of other larcenies, auto thefts, and breaks.

December 24.

General Order No. 632.

Patrolmen Leo D. MacDougall and Robert T. McCreary, Division 4, are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty, and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 1.40 on the morning of November 2, 1959, Patrolmen MacDougall and McCreary, while cruising in the patrol wagon and when at the intersection of Columbus avenue and Rutland square, were informed by a citizen that an assault was taking place in the alley in the rear of 484 Columbus avenue.

The officers immediately proceeded to this alley and observed a man, later identified as William G. Klein, 35 years, of Newton Center, lying on the ground in an injured condition. At the same time, the officers saw four men fleeing from the alley on foot, in the direction of West Newton street. Patrolman McCreary left the wagon and gave chase down the alley, while Patrolman MacDougall contacted the radio dispatcher and requested that a radio patrol car be sent to assist the injured man, after which he drove the wagon around the block in an effort to apprehend the four men whom Patrolman McCreary was pursuing.

On reaching the intersection of the alley and West Newton street, Patrolman McCreary saw the four men enter the house at 168 West Newton street and immediately entered the house in pursuit and was joined by Patrolman MacDougall. Together they checked the building and on the third floor observed blood on the door to one of the apartments. They were admitted to this apartment by the occupant who told them that four men had entered there, that three fled down the fire escape and that the fourth man had entered her bedroom. The officers entered this room and apprehended one Jonah Morris, 22 years, single, of 168 West Newton street. He was placed under arrest on suspicion of unarmed robbery, taken to Station 4 and booked.

Meanwhile the injured man had been removed to Boston City Hospital where he was found to be suffering from a question of fractured nose, was treated and released. When questioned by Sergeant Flaherty he stated that he had been walking in Rutland square and upon approaching an alley was set upon by four men who dragged him into the alley, assaulted him and robbed him of $15 in U. S. currency and his wrist watch.

Further investigation at the apartment where Morris was apprehended disclosed a top coat belonging to Morris, in the pocket of which was found a wrist watch. This was identified by the victim as being his property.

As the result of continuing investigation in this case arrests were made of two additional persons suspected of being involved in this crime, namely, one Richard E. Parris, 20 years, single, 19 Worcester street, Boston; and one Lawrence E. Silva, 23 years, 168 West Newton street, Boston. A John Doe warrant, with full description of the fourth subject, was issued and is on file at Station 4.

On December 21, 1959, in Central Municipal Court before Judge Adlow, the complaint against the prisoners was reduced to larceny from the person and they were sentenced as follows: Jonah Morris, six months, House of Correction; Richard E. Parris and Lawrence E. Silva, three months each, House of Correction.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the alertness and good investigative work in this case, as the result of which Patrolmen MacDougall and McCreary effected the arrest of three criminals and obtained a good description of the fourth, against whom a warrant is outstanding.

City Purchasing . . .

serve as the basis for consolidated purchasing would be to set up a purchasing plan for every department, in all possible categories, at the time the annual budget is passed and the amount available for supplies is first known. Here, also, it would be advisable to spell out this in an ordinance.

Central Warehouse

III. A central warehouse for common-use items should be established. It has been estimated that a substantial saving in the cost of the commodities stored could be realized. This would provide for the storage of common-use items bought in bulk.

No Separate Buying

IV. The Purchasing Division should do the buying of all supplies and materials for all City and County departments. At present, much purchasing is done separately by the County and Police Departments as well as by the City Purchasing Agent. Steps should be taken to require both City and County departments to use the Purchasing Division. This is necessary if the full concept and benefit of central purchasing are to be realized.

Manual of Operations

V. A manual of operations and procedure to be followed by all personnel associated with purchasing should be prepared. Such a manual would spell out specifically all the steps and procedures to be followed by all personnel involved; both those in the Purchasing Division and those in using departments charged with ordering supplies. Every large city today recognizes such a manual as indispensable in securing standard procedures. Models of excellent manuals can be obtained from almost any large city.

Inspection System

VI. A system of inspection of goods received by the using department, as well as the sampling and testing of deliveries should be established. As matters stand, receipt of purchased goods by the various using departments is not communicated to the Purchasing Division; as a result, a necessary coordination of purchasing and receipt of goods is missing. A start had been made in the right direction to the extent that receiving notices had been forwarded to the Purchasing Division. This practice has, regrettably, been discontinued.

In the general area of field inspection of deliveries, much remains to be done. Some years ago the groundwork was laid for a system of spot inspection of goods delivered, but the plan was never fully carried out.

As for sampling and testing, no comprehensive testing program has been set up. Purchases of coal, oil, and food are tested and inspected as a matter of general practice; an adequate program of testing and inspection should be broad enough to cover all commodities purchased in quantity.

Inventory

VII. In the area of property control, the Purchasing Division has made some progress. An inventory of office furniture, machines, cars, and other equipment has been made, material for entry on punched cards has been prepared and is awaiting processing.

In the disposition of surplus supplies and equipment, however, some pertinent comment is in order.

Section 14 as amended by section 6 of chapter 8 of the Ordinances of 1953 provides the following:

"Section 14. If the officer in charge of any department shall at any time have the care, custody and management of any personal property belonging to the city which is not required for the purposes of such department, he shall by a writing executed in triplicate, one copy of which shall be retained by him, one copy filed with the city auditor and one copy delivered to the purchasing agent, transfer the care, custody and management of such personal property to the purchasing agent, who, if such personal property is required for the purposes of another department, shall by a writing executed in like manner transfer the care, custody and management thereof to the officer in charge of such department and, if such personal property is not so required and he estimated the value thereof not to exceed five hundred dollars, may, with the written approval of the mayor, lease, sell or otherwise dispose of the same at such time, for such price and in such manner as he shall adjudge most advantageous to the city."

A system of reporting and transferring surplus property to the office of the Purchasing Division has been set up and is operating.

However, the weakness of this system was strikingly demonstrated in the recent sale of obsolete fire equipment which had been junked by the Fire Department.

The Fire Department followed the provisions of this section of the ordinance in disposing of eleven obsolete and junked pieces of equipment which had been stored in various fire stations, by transferring the care and custody of the equipment to the City Purchasing Agent.

The ordinance does not specify what procedure is to be followed if the estimated value of the property exceeds $500. In the case at hand, the estimated value appears to be approximately $950. This estimate is based on the certified weight, made by the Fire Department on the junk delivered to the junk dealer's yard, multiplied by the prevailing average trade rate for "unprepared" junk (the classification into which this material falls).

The ordinance should be amended to provide for amounts in excess of $500.

In the case under discussion the office of the Purchasing Agent did not solicit bids from the many junk dealers located in this area or notify them that a sizable quantity of junk was to be sold. Instead the same junk dealer, which has been regularly used by the City for this purpose for some time, was solicited to purchase the material under discussion. Ordinary business procedure should dictate that in such cases all junk dealers should be notified. Proper procedure might include setting a starting price based on the prevailing trade rate, with dealers bidding above or below that price, and the award being made to the dealer offering the best price.

The above recommendations and principles stem from a survey originally made for the Finance Commission by Russell Forbes, nationally famous expert in the field of public purchasing. If these recommendations are followed, the Finance Commission feels that Boston will have a purchasing and supply system under which the City will receive the fullest benefit from the huge appropriation now expended for supplies, materials, and equipment.

Respectfully submitted,

ANTHONY J. YOUNG,
Chairman,
ROGER J. ABIZAID, M.D.,
MAXWELL B. GROSSMAN,
The Finance Commission.

THOMAS J. MURPHY,
Executive Secretary.

CITY PLANNING BOARD.Reproducing of Report

DEAR MAYOR HYNES:

On December 1, 1959, the Planning Board voted as follows:

"That Spaulding-Moss Company, 401 Summer street, Boston, Mass., be engaged by contract at a total cost not to exceed three thousand dollars ($3,000) to reproduce one thousand copies of a report entitled 'A General Plan for the Central Business District.'"

It was further voted:

"That the proposed contract specify clearly the scope of work to be undertaken by Spaulding-Moss Company and further that the proposed contract be entered into dispensing with public advertising, subject to the prior approval of his Honor the Mayor, and that the chairman be authorized to sign said contract on behalf of the Planning Board."

Therefore, on behalf of the Planning Board, I respectfully request your authorization to dispense with the customary public invitation for bids and to enter into a contract with Spaulding-Moss Company, 401 Summer street, Boston, Mass., to reproduce 1,000 copies of our report entitled "A General Plan for the Central Business District" at a cost not to exceed three thousand dollars ($3,000).

This report will contain approximately eighty pages, 9 inches x 11½ inches, including text and numerous colored maps, charts, and illustrations. The report will be wirebound and covered with a durable cover bearing an appropriate design in black and two colors.

The report is intended for distribution by the City of Boston to public officials, city and state; to business and civic leaders in Boston and Massachusetts; and to selected agencies in other principal cities.

Spaulding-Moss Company has done a considerable amount of work for the Planning Board through the years, including production of the annual "Capital Improvement Program" report, the 52-page "Proposed Zoning Regulations for the City of Boston" report with maps, and various other reproduction services from time to time. All this work has been carried out in a highly satisfactory, efficient, and expeditious manner.

In light of the foregoing and in view of the fact that the proposed charge for the subject work is considered fair and reasonable, it is the considered opinion of the Planning Board that public advertising would be of little or no avail to the City of Boston in the present case.

Respectfully yours,

TIMOTHY J. REGAN, JR.,
Chairman.

Under the provisions of section 22 of chapter 3 of the Revised Ordinances, I shall, with your approval, designate Martin A. Fulton to serve as Acting City Auditor in my absence from the office at any time during the four-week period beginning December 21, 1959.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH P. LALLY,
City Auditor.

OFFICIAL CHRONICLE OF BOSTON MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

VOL. 52

SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1960

No. 2

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF MAYOR COLLINS

The full text of the inaugural address of Mayor John F. Collins, on January 4, 1960, delivered at Symphony Hall, Boston, is as follows:

As I assume the office of Mayor of Boston, although I am acutely aware of the many grave problems which face our city, I am heartened by the confidence you have shown in my determination to perform the tasks that lie ahead, and inspired by your willingness to share in the monumental civic effort which we must make together.

Despite the financial crisis confronting us, which has lowered the city's national credit rating, and despite our staggering 1959 tax rate and the forbidding prospects of an even higher tax rate in 1960, the result of nearly ten million dollars in fixed commitments made or incurred since the 1959 rate was established, I enter upon the performance of my duties undeterred by prophecies of doom, ready to meet the challenge, and ready to launch "Operation Revival" for Boston.

"OPERATION REVIVAL"

What is "Operation Revival"? It is not "Operation Survival." Our purpose is not merely to keep the city alive, or to spare it from municipal insolvency alone. As "Bostonians United," united in a resolute, unsparing, and enthusiastic effort to revitalize our city so that a resurging Boston, with its treasured past, may also take its dynamic place in the forefront of American cities of the future, we must move forward with confidence in our ability to meet the challenge.

Survival is not enough. We must restore, rebuild, and redevelop. We must and we shall move forward, and we shall do so with the dedication, the zeal, and the vigor which our task requires. In this crusade for Boston, I know that every citizen will join with me, with the City Council, with the School Committee, and with every civic organization and public agency in dedicating ourselves to the revitalization of our capital city.

TWOFOLD PROBLEMS

Boston's problems may be classified into two major groups: those of Boston's own creation, which are within its own control, and those originating elsewhere and beyond Boston's power to control. Expressed in terms of the mounting municipal tax rate, each group roughly accounts for half of our city's expenditures.

Within Boston's own control, and therefore its own responsibility, are the management and housekeeping problems of a major city. Boston's Mayor must provide its citizens with a full measure of those governmental services to which they are entitled, with maximum efficiency, at lowest possible cost, and with faithful and impartial stewardship. Police and fire protection must be good. Streets and highways must be clean and in good repair. Schools must be well maintained and administered. Parks and playgrounds must be well kept and managed.

As to such matters, Boston and its Mayor must and do this day accept exclusive responsibility, without need or request for favor, assistance, or subsidy from outside sources. And if there is any housecleaning to be done in these areas of municipal responsibility, then Boston will do its own housecleaning.

But beyond Boston's control, and therefore not its responsibility, are the problems created by the burdens originally thrust upon it in years past. The original reasons for these burdens today have no justification in fact or in logic, and indeed require Boston's taxpayers to subsidize the costs of municipal services in surrounding cities and towns, and of state-wide services which should be borne by the entire Commonwealth.

In these respects, Boston's interests coincide with those of many of our cities and towns. It is in the solution of such problems that Boston is entitled to, and therefore courageously requests, outside assistance. Their solution is relatively simple, but their solution lies with the Legislature.

It is often said that Boston is entitled to no outside help until she demonstrates a willingness to help herself. This is more exaggerated than accurate, but we accept it as a challenge. And we shall prove to the Legislature and to the Commonwealth at large that we are able to meet that challenge.

Difficulties State-Wide

The last dozen years alone have demonstrated to the people of Massachusetts that those fiscal difficulties, which it was formerly fashionable to regard as wholly peculiar to Boston, have strangely forced their way into the governmental mechanisms of all of our expanding and maturing municipalities throughout the state.

As our neighboring citizens have observed their own skyrocketing tax rates with increasing concern, they have come to grips with the fiscal facts of life, in the form of ever-mounting costs of commodities, construction and payroll. They realize that corrective measures must be taken at once, on an equitable, state-wide basis, if we are to avoid the strangling effects of our present tax system.

In view of these facts, and the increasingly precarious financial circumstances of all our cities and towns, it is my solemn public duty to urge upon our Legislature, especially those members from outside Boston, that those of our municipal problems which are wholly within the Legislature's control call for solutions which are statesmanlike and state-wide in nature, solutions which are nonpartisan, nonpolitical, and nongeographical in approach.

If I am not mistaken, the people of the entire Commonwealth recognize these facts, and are eagerly awaiting this kind of solution to our common fiscal problems.

It would be a serious error to underestimate the public's intelligence and understanding, or to disregard its insistence on prompt effective action. The public, which pays the bills, is becoming increasingly watchful and impatient with unnecessary delays and inaction at whatever level of government they may occur.

It is my intention to deal with those matters which are within the Mayor's control aggressively, realistically, thoughtfully, and without regard to political consequences.

I accept now the responsibility for those matters, and dedicate myself to their fulfillment.

PART ONEWithin City Control

Let us now address ourselves to those matters which are within Boston's own control.

Home owners and property owners have long known and felt the severe impact of our rising municipal expenditures and tax rate. Rent payers are no longer under the illusion that such matters are of remote or indirect concern to them. Everybody's pocketbook is hurting, with the result that our citizens are not only demanding an immediate stop to the upwardly curving spiral, but a prompt accounting for the money already being extracted from them.

While most of our citizens realize that for substantial relief we must await legislative action, they rightly insist upon the most rigorous economy and the maximum efficiency possible in all areas of local financial management.

While financial commitments already made by or imposed upon the City of Boston for the year 1960 make it difficult, if not impossible, to prevent an increase in our 1960 tax rate, I solemnly pledge you that not one cent in our 1960 tax rate will represent an avoidable or unnecessary expenditure of public funds. We shall run an extremely tight ship.

Council and School Committee Elect 1960 Presiding Officers

Edward F. McLaughlin, Jr., 6 Calvin road, Jamaica Plain, was re-elected president of the Boston City Council at the organization meeting held on January 4. Mr. McLaughlin has been a city councillor since 1954. He is the first president to be re-elected for a second year in the presiding officer's chair since the formation of the nine-man Council in 1952.

The School Committee, on the same day, elected John J. Tierney, Jr., 32 Melville avenue, Dorchester, as its chairman for 1960. Mr. Tierney is starting his second two-year term on the School Committee.

I have been advised by the City Auditor that if the city's expenses and income during 1960 do not vary in other respects from 1959, we must nevertheless raise almost ten million dollars more to meet these inherited obligations, which by themselves will necessitate an increase of about six and one half dollars in our 1960 tax rate, unless we succeed in offsetting their severe impact by correspondingly deep and drastic slashes in our expenditures.

Outside City Control

The net addition to the city's 1960 expenditures, over which we have no control, consists of the following items:

An additional $1,750,000 to cover the full year's cost of pay increases granted to city employees in 1959, but which were in effect during only a part of last year.

A corresponding item of $1,200,000 on account of School Department pay increases.

An anticipated increase of $1,000,000 in pension costs to the city.

An estimated increase of $2,250,000 in the city's share of the MTA deficit.

A loss of $2,000,000 represented by the nonrecurrence in 1960 of the so-called state "withholding tax windfall" which occurred in 1959.

Course Determined

And, finally, an estimated decrease of $1,500,000 in the city's general revenues.

These sobering and discouraging facts both illustrate and underline the nature of our problems and the necessity of prompt relief in those areas open to legislative action.

But if we are dismayed, we cannot afford to be deterred by our dismay. We must proceed vigorously and relentlessly to counter the results of these obligations by putting into effect every possible economy, and by eliminating every known source of waste.

A fundamental step in this direction is a survey and analysis of our costs, methods, and operations, department by department, in order to determine where, with proper equipment, savings can be made, and unnecessary or overlapping functions can be eliminated. Only in this way can we be sure where three dollars can do the work of four.

Hospital Economies

An example of such a study is the recently published report of a survey of the functions and expenditures of the Hospital Department. According to this report, we can achieve savings of at least $1,000,000 this year, and annual savings of several million dollars in succeeding years in this department alone. I need not assure you that we shall promptly carry out every economy which can be effected at the City Hospital, now or in the future, without adversely affecting its purpose and function.

Other Surveys

For the same purpose, I have already taken steps to initiate through the use of public and private funds, other departmental analyses. Indeed, I expect that my administration during the next four years will undertake continuous surveys of all departmental functions, to the end that we secure the most for our money, and always for the least money.

To Cut Public Baths

Every reasonable economy already brought to public attention will be effected, including the elimination of most chauffeur-driven cars, the establishment of motor vehicle pools for city officials and employees requiring such transportation in the performance of their public duties, and the elimination of those of our public baths which are substantially unnecessary.

Tax Bureau

I shall reconstitute and strengthen the special bureau to coordinate the functions of the Law Department and the Collecting Department in order to speed up the collection of the millions of dollars due the city on account of tax titles, City Hospital bills, and other accounts payable to the city.

Payroll Savings

But by far the major possible saving to the city is in the area of payroll, and here we must not only hold the line, but we must also reduce our expenditures, without detriment or injustice to our city employees, the vast majority of whom are faithful, trusted, and as anxious to perform the best possible service as the public is to receive such service.

We would make a grievous error not to recognize the importance of all public employees both as individuals and as workers, if we fail to offer them challenging and stimulating opportunities, at every level, to make and display their best efforts, and if we fail to reward meritorious service and outstanding accomplishment. We must give career people the scope and incentive to put their experience to bear on expenditure-control and other problems, and we must weld our forces, through leadership, into a spirited, loyal, and effective employee organization.

Nevertheless, there can be no doubt that we are presently overstaffed in many departments, and that the per capita cost of many municipal services in Boston is greatly in excess of what is normal, necessary or reasonable, even after due regard has been given to the metropolitan nature of some of our functions.

Our payroll must and will be cut, not by indiscriminate or needless discharges, but by stern application of a policy of no unnecessary hiring.

Of our more than 21,000 public positions, about 1,000 annually become vacant by reason of retirement, resignation, and death. In theory, if these positions could be abolished as they become vacant, an annual saving to the city of three to four million dollars would be possible. It is my obligation and therefore my intention to effect such savings where consistent with a minimum level of essential services.

No Pay Increases Yet

In frankness and in friendship, I must make this further statement to our city employees: Except for the correction of any obvious and unintended inequities which may exist, and barring unforeseen emergencies, I see no possibility of general pay increases or of general increases in so-called fringe benefits until the city's financial household is put in order.

We who serve the public cannot afford, in our own interest, to set ourselves up as an irresponsible, reckless oligarchy, unmindful of our obligations to our employers and of the mutuality of our stake in Boston's financial stability.

By this time, we must recognize and acknowledge that the compensation and working conditions of public employees in Boston compare favorably with those in private industry. The City Treasury must be regarded as a trust fund to be administered with fiduciary care. In large part, the money that goes into our treasury comes from working people of average income. It is not fair to our home owners and rent payers of limited means to subject them to incessant demands by their public servants for further increases in compensation, while their own pocketbooks become less and less adequate for their family needs. All of us in public service must exercise self-restraint, lest we endanger our job security itself.

School Department Costs

In like manner, I say, with all respect, to the Honorable Members of our School Committee and to every other agency to whom the same may apply: We are all part of a single government. The responsibility for fiscal self-control is not intended to be the Mayor's alone. If in fact, the responsibility is left to me alone then you may be certain that I will carry it out as though it were indeed my own.

In this regard, I urge the public and the Legislature to give thoughtful reconsideration to existing public policies which grant relatively unlimited appropriation powers to some public agencies, without corresponding fiscal responsibility, and substantially without any control by the Mayor and the City Council.

For over a century, for example, School Committees have been given almost full autonomy with respect to school expenditures. There are some good reasons for such a policy, not the least of which is to keep political considerations out of our children's education, and to assure adequate municipal provision for educational facilities. Nevertheless, the time has arrived for a review of this policy, to the end that due regard be given to the fiscal responsibilities involved, and for the purpose of insuring the maximum utility to be derived from the educational dollar itself.

While I would be reluctant to recommend at this time any change in legislation applicable to the appropriating powers of the Boston School Committee, I am compelled to draw the attention of the members of that Honorable Body to the dire financial plight of this city. School Committee expenditures alone account for more than $31,000,000 annually, by far the highest of all city departments, and more than twice the combined expenditures of the Police and Fire Departments, and represent more than $17 in the 1959 tax rate. The adoption of a mere "hold-the-line" policy by the School Committee will not sufficiently serve the city in this, its hour of crisis. I urge the committee to inaugurate an immediate, over-all review of its expenditures for the purpose of determining what budgetary economies can be effected at once. I shall request the members of the committee to meet with me at the earliest possible time, in order to set in motion the machinery necessary to effect such immediate economies. I am hopeful that the savings in the School Department budget, to be worked out cooperatively between us, can and will be measured, not in thousands but in millions of dollars. The choice confronting the School Committee is clear, either eliminate in this cooperative fashion the waste and extravagance in your budget voluntarily, or force upon me a course of action I should be most reluctant to adopt, an arbitrary cut in the expenditures of the School Department budget consistent both with the legislative powers conferred upon the Mayor and with what I feel to be the justifiable demands of Boston's taxpayers.

Police Department

As to the Police Department, although its administration has been placed beyond the Mayor's control, money for its expenditures must nevertheless be raised in the same manner and from the same sources as other municipal expenses. I do not believe that it is in the public interest that the fiscal control of the Police Department shall be wholly beyond the purview of the Mayor and City Council.

In short, if our taxpayers' money is to be expended with maximum economy and for the most useful purposes, then the Mayor and City Council must have fiscal authority and control commensurate with their public accountability.

Let me assure you, however, that my program of economy and efficiency is immediate, and will not be delayed while awaiting such legislative changes. We shall make progress as rapidly as the circumstances require or permit. Avoiding unnecessary abruptness and all sensationalism, we shall act at once where urgency dictates, more slowly where wisdom advises.

Our work will be done, however, with constant awareness of the human values as well as the dollar values involved in the administration of the government of a large city. Mere fiscal reform is not an end in itself, but only a means by which we may bring better government and better services to human beings. Government is not a mere bookkeeping process. The electronic computer has its limitations. Brilliantly and relentlessly accurate in its special way, it nevertheless lacks the heart, the compassion and the understanding of human needs and aspirations which our government must have if it is to serve well and truly as a government of the people.

New Agencies

I turn now to other important areas of local management and responsibility:

In the field of departmental organization, I contemplate certain changes, realignments and innovations, which will be put into effect as soon as studies are completed. Among these, the following are indicated at this time:

The establishment of a Bureau of Public Information and Citizen Relations, in which will be combined those functions relating to public relations, citizen complaints, public events, and community relations. It is my present intention that an integral function of this Bureau will be to organize and coordinate Citizens' Community Councils in local areas, and to improve communication between our citizens and City Hall so that the convenience of local areas may be served to the fullest extent possible. The positions of Labor Advisor and Industrial Advisor will be abolished, and most of their functions will be absorbed by this Bureau.

We shall restore Boston's reputation in the recreational field. By intelligent reorganization of the Parks and Recreation Department, we can enrich its recreation program, make better use of indoor and outdoor recreation facilities, and improve its recreational leadership. We can do these things without adding to our budget. We shall take proper advantage of all available public and private recreation resources and tie them together into a diversified program for citizens of all ages.

The Mayor's office will be staffed with administrative assistants who will aid in supervision of departmental functions, and maintain proper liaison between the Mayor and department heads, and between the Mayor and civic and other governmental agencies.

Generally, as to appointment of department heads, it has been and will remain my intention and purpose to obtain the best possible personnel, men and women who realize that not only they and I, but also our government itself, are on trial, and who have the zeal and dedication to serve the public as it deserves to be served.

In the field of Urban Renewal we have made a beginning, but only a beginning. It has been truly said that Urban Renewal is not only the means of rebuilding and revitalizing our city, but also one fundamental key to the solution of our financial problems.

This subject deserves far more elaboration than my time today permits. Be assured, however, that it has my earnest, constant and deep concern, and that it constitutes a major portion of my continuing program for Boston.

Suffice it to say that I consider urban renewal to be of such vital importance to our city that I intend to strengthen our renewal organization and program by appointing a Development Administrator, responsible directly to me, and of proven experience and ability. Through his full-time coordination of all renewal activities—slum clearance, rehabilitation, conservation, code enforcement, housing, and promotion of all kinds of taxable development—the Development Administrator will expedite and accelerate the plans and programs of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, the City Planning Board, and all other agencies operating in this field. He will make sure that Boston, which now ranks far too low among the major cities in federal renewal grants, obtains its just share of financial assistance from the federal government for this purpose.

Equalization Survey

As to real estate assessment practices, in keeping with my prior announcements, it is my intention to put into effect the results of the Equalization Survey recently completed by the outgoing administration, and to adopt, in connection therewith, the new related standards for valuation. It is my hope that these will prove to be as important, as farsighted, and beneficial advances in the field of commercial property assessments as it was intended they should be.

Doubtless some imperfections will become apparent, which can in due time be overcome. But a good and necessary start has been made in the right direction. We now have the right to expect that valuations of commercial property will become more equitable, just and nondiscriminatory, and that as a result, the problem of abatements will steadily diminish in difficulty and importance.

PART TWO

Within Legislative Control

I do not believe that anyone within hearing of my voice needs further persuasion that our tax rate is too high, or that the home owner and property owner bear far too great a burden of our municipal expenditures.

In turning to the Legislature for the tax relief that is so urgently and obviously necessary, it is not enough, I submit, to say "Give us a new source of revenue, so that we can pay for these expenses." It is necessary in addition to suggest, "Relieve us also of such expenses as are not properly ours."

It is the common responsibility of all the cities and towns to present to the Legislature, for its consideration, certain basic facts bearing on the division of financial responsibility, as between the state and local governments, according to the nature of the governmental functions involved.

For it is my conviction, that regardless of the rate of tax, and regardless of the nature and amount of tax relief, no fundamental solution to local fiscal problems will occur until municipal budgets are restricted to expenditures for functions and responsibilities which are intrinsically local in nature.

Freeing ourselves from mere tradition and from formulas based on accident, convention or political convenience, and realizing that we must accommodate ourselves to the conditions and needs of the seventh decade of the twentieth century, and not of the nineteenth century, we must realize that, as between the state and its municipalities, expenditures for welfare, court costs, hospitals and prison expenses are no longer city responsibilities but state responsibilities, because they are no longer local, but state-wide, in substance and function.

Illness, poverty, disability and the infirmities of old age occur and exist in Boston, as in every city and town throughout the land, but they do not occur because of Boston. They need and receive enlightened and generous relief. But the financial responsibility therefor is no more local, than in the cases of Social Security and Unemployment Insurance. The entire cost of welfare expenses, of which Boston's share alone is over $8,000,000, should be removed from municipal budgets.

Our judicial system is not local but is state-wide in nature, function and administration. It is wholly beyond municipal control. Yet Boston pays more than $4,000,000 per year for court expenses in Suffolk County. Such expenses are state responsibilities, and should be so met.

By similar analysis, we may ask whether hospital and prison expenses should be borne, or so nearly exclusively borne, by the cities and towns? Indeed, in the light of advanced knowledge in the fields of public health and penology, is it even desirable that hospitals and prisons be municipally operated and controlled?

It is my belief that the general public interest, and not only that of the citizens of Boston, would be beneficially served and promoted by the transfer to the state of the Mattapan Sanatorium and, perhaps, ultimately, the City Hospital. In addition, inmates of the Deer Island House of Correction should for many sound reasons be transferred to state penal institutions, and to this end appropriate initial steps have been taken.

Other matters which deserve the sympathetic consideration of the Legislature, and as to which I have filed various legislative proposals, are the familiar subjects of MTA, MDC, and County costs in general, which require no extended discussion at this time.

While it is for the Legislature itself to determine the extent and nature of tax relief, there seems to be general agreement among all groups of interested citizens that some new source of tax revenue for our cities and towns is necessary.

Limited Sales Tax

However, I continue to favor, for this purpose, the kind of Limited Sales Tax bill which was last year submitted to the Legislature. That bill, while broadening the tax base and exempting all regularly purchased necessities of life, contained the past, I regret my inability to accomplish more. Under the circumstances facing me, I did what seemed to be best for Boston. I did not shirk the job. I tried to be fair in all my dealings and in all my actions.

“The new mayor succeeding me, Hon. John F. Collins, inherits many problems. He will need support and help from many sides to solve or partially solve those problems. If he gets that assistance, and if the Legislature will respond to his just pleadings, Mayor Collins will have a progressive administration, and our old City of Boston will take on a new lease on life.

“For all too long there has been a tendency to be overcritical of Boston and its government. Too many times, this sort of criticism emanates from sources which are either selfishly motivated, or unwilling to lend a helping hand.

“Boston needs a helping hand. It needs strong and vigorous, and even optimistic enthusiasm on the part of those elements in our city which have their interests and roots in the city. Some of this kind of help I have had, but much more is needed. Elected officials cannot meet today's challenges alone. They must be joined with others who realize that only by a unity of purpose and forces can Boston hope to right itself and steer a stiff rudder.

“Boston's present situation is nobody's fault, and yet it is everybody's fault. Starting on that premise, there is no reason why all of us in Boston cannot move forward together, forgetting the lethargies, the errors, the follies, and the mistakes of the past, and setting our sights on the future.

“Boston will never die if we, ourselves, all of us, resolve that it shall be a healthy and progressive city for living, for pleasure, for inspiration, for business.

DOES BOSTON GET A SQUARE DEAL FROM THE LEGISLATURE?

"Does Boston receive a just and fair deal from the State Legislature?"

This question was posed and answered by three members of the Massachusetts Legislature at the opening session of Boston's two-day Conferama on municipal problems at the Public Library Auditorium, Copley square, November 19 and 20, 1959.

Moderator of the panel was City Council President Edward F. McLaughlin, Jr. The panelists were:

Senator John J. Beades, of Dorchester; Senator Philip A. Graham, of Hamilton, and Representative William F. Otis, of Boston.

REMARKS OF MODERATOR

The subject matter of this panel discussion is one that has been discussed almost on a daily basis, particularly during the past decade, for it is during this period that Boston's financial problem has finally become realized by most of the people. As in any issue there are always two sides. Speaking as a member of the Boston City Government I, of course, feel strongly that the city does not receive just and fair treatment from the State Legislature insofar as the assessment of the MTA deficit, the MDC costs, Suffolk County costs, and the distribution of certain state revenues are concerned. There are other areas, but these suffice to point out the high lights of the problem.

Since Boston is a creature of the Legislature and is limited by the Legislature as to its sources of revenue it has become essential that the city look to the Legislature for relief. The city has for the most part always had the support of the members of the Legislature who represent the City of Boston, and likewise has not had the support of those outside of the city. There are many reasons for this, political and otherwise. However, I feel that the time has now come when all of the members of the Legislature must realize that Boston is the key to the economic well-being of Massachusetts and as Boston goes so does the rest of the Commonwealth. It is imperative, therefore, that they look upon whatever legislation comes before them that is beneficial to Boston with more than the normal parochial point of view.

Must Evidence Self Help

At the same time, however, I well realize that Boston must do more than it has done in the past to encourage a sympathetic Legislature. More self help must be evidenced. I feel that during the past few years, at least insofar as the City Council is concerned, we have made great strides in that direction. There is, of course, room for improvement. Speaking only for myself as an individual member of the Council I feel confident that the new year will see even a stricter application by that body of the basic principles of economic and efficient government. It must be realized, however, that Boston operates under the so-called "strong mayor charter" and that many questions of policy that affect the economic well-being of Boston can be determined only by the administration, and we will have to wait until the new administration takes office to see what plans it has in that direction.

SENATOR JOHN J. BEADES

I have chosen to speak about certain facets of the interrelationship of the Commonwealth and the City of Boston but I assure you that I make no claim to any original contribution on this subject.

Your very able present Mayor, John B. Hynes, has certainly discussed this general problem from the Boston viewpoint over the last ten years and I hasten to add that Mayor-Elect John F. Collins presented a very able treatise on this subject before the Boston College Seminar on April 10, 1956, while in the City Council.

My purpose here today is to attempt, in the limited time allotted me, to paint a picture of the effect of legislative action or perhaps better said the failure of the Legislature to act in a statesmanlike manner on problems affecting our capital city.

State Responsibility

In the relationships of the Commonwealth to the City of Boston, I maintain, in all respect to my fellow panelists and without fear of any word of contradiction, that the role and responsibility of the Commonwealth are paramount. The state after all is the legal source and fountainhead of all the powers of local government. It can give and it can take away. It can authorize and it can forbid and its determinations in her case are fateful and final.

If anyone is presumptuous enough to presume that I have come here this morning with a ready-made program for a new relationship between Beacon Hill and School Street that will overnight see the city on a new and easy road to prosperity under the generous and beneficent guidance of a kindly paternal state, he is very flattering, but very much mistaken.

As a matter of fact, although in the past decade the legislative branch of the state government has slowly begun to move in the proper direction, it is still merely tinkering with bits and pieces rather than facing head on a program of positive and constructive action which not only would help Dame Boston, but also in truth by its positive action would help New England and the Commonwealth as a whole.

MDC A "Curiosity"

I am certain that each one of you present here this morning is well aware of the tremendous effect of the burden placed on the Boston taxpayers by the Metropolitan District Commission, which organization was described by former Governor Christian A. Herter as a "curiosity" in American government. On this I merely wish to state such a descriptive statement cannot be disagreed with by me. Unless we can devise a system of less curiosity and more common sense, we will never settle some of Boston's more pressing problems.

The last session of the Legislature took a positive step in this direction when it enacted into law a new sewerage formula. The enactment of this formula will result in savings of large sums of money to our capital city and I am proud to have played a small part in that.

Another discriminating assessment on the City of Boston is the Metropolitan Transit Authority formula which is most inequitable, discriminating, and harmful to Boston. Again, although we have heard much talk in the Legislature concerning the necessity of a change, there has been no definite action.

Cost of County Government

A third phase is the cost of Suffolk County government whose budget like that of the Metropolitan District Commission is voted by the Legislature and its costs again are levied willy-nilly on the taxpayers of Boston, who have no voice in this matter. Contrary to the method of apportionment of county expenditures in all other counties, the apportionments in Suffolk County are different. Since Chelsea, Revere, and Winthrop are exempt by legislative action from the expenses of the County and the expenses are borne largely by the City of Boston, failure of the Legislature to at least apportion the county expenditures either on a basis of assessed valuation or on a basis of population has always been a mystery to me. The only argument that has been put forward to defeat legislative action to bring about the necessary corrections has been purely on a political basis. It appears that the elected officials representing Chelsea, Revere, and Winthrop have been extremely popular individuals amongst their colleagues for they raise no other argument in bringing about the defeat of such legislative action as to say the passage of this will bring about my own defeat. Perhaps, we should congratulate the voters of those cities and towns in their choice of electing such personally popular individuals who, by their own popularity, are able to help their districts.

I have scantily touched on the previous three phases of legislative injustice because I know that my colleagues appearing here this morning with me have done a great deal of research and are prepared to give a more intense treatment to the subject matter at hand.

Clean House First

In my ten years as a member of the Legislature, there is no statement heard in its legislative branches that has upset me more, but has been used more often to aid in defeating legislation which would correct Boston's unjustifiable burdens than that one which states: "Let Boston clean its own house first and then when that is done, we will then help Boston."

Mere words should not be accepted as statements of fact for as a former member of Boston's city government and as a legislator with a sincere love of the home city, I would be the first one to cry out against any questionable conduct in Boston's city government, but on the other hand resenting as I stated before with every breath in me unfounded accusations, I say the time has come for the members of the Great and General Court to stop playing politics with words and to recognize the fact that if Boston fails to survive that, they, as members of the governing board of Boston, and as its legislative trustees, will have to bear the brunt. Because without our capital city in a sound financial state, the 351 cities and towns of this Commonwealth will tumble with it.

Up to now, I have not ventured into really deep water by raising some of the questions which arise out of the financial relationship existing between the state, cities and towns, including Boston. In any event, we must remember when we talk about state-local relations under our present system, we must talk about those which are constant throughout the state and under our present laws to meet varying conditions and needs amongst towns and cities.

May I again use a descriptive phrase which I have used previously when I state that we have now a system of distribution and disbursement of state-collected funds to cities and towns which is a "curiosity" in American government.

A Strange Device

On our income and corporation tax revenue, we have ten different formulas for the retention of part of the sum and the distribution of most of it, all having as a base a false and artificial legislative-imposed property valuation. Neither the state nor the municipalities can estimate with any accuracy what their liabilities and receipts are likely to be.

In recent years official guesses have been wide of the true total by as much as 35 per cent and then to make confusion utterly confounding, there is the existence of the fantastically strange device known as the State Tax Formula for certain important distributions. This is based on the remarkable theory that a good way to achieve equity among the towns and cities when there is money to be distributed is to do it on the basis of the relation that the real estate valuation of a given town as determined by the State Tax Commission bears to the valuation of all real estate in the Commonwealth as established by the same means. This process bears no relationship to actual valuation as fixed by local assessors—the base upon which our whole real estate tax base rests—but upon either the educated guesswork or expert manipulations of whomever has to submit a new schedule to the Legislature for approval. The esteem in which this improbable process is held by the General Court itself is best indicated by the fact that it has refused to accept a commissioner's guess since 1945—with the result that we are proceeding as if there had been no population shifts or valuation changes since then!

In short, the whole system of distribution and reimbursement is no less than a tragic mess, doing justice to neither the Commonwealth nor the cities and towns.

School Aid

As applied to the Chapter 70 School Aid Program as well as to the school building assistance program you can see what the inevitable results have been—the growing towns have been made to appear increasingly poor as the number of school children increases, while the old 1945 valuations have remained constant. They have consequently been receiving far more school aid than the formula ever contemplated they should.

In the light of all this, let me say a word about the City of Boston. In recent years, Boston has fared quite well in the distribution—receiving some 21 per cent of the state total based, of course, on the 1945 Equalization and Apportionment, but Boston is not growing. Property for the most part is not being replaced. In fact its tax base is constantly shrinking in its intrinsic value as certainly compared with the rest of the state. On the other hand because the number of school-age children represents a smaller proportion of the population in Boston than in the state as a whole, the city naturally receives less Chapter 70 School Aid in proportion to population. A lower equalization valuation would give the city more aid per child, although Boston has built fewer schools and has, therefore, not benefited materially from the School Building Assistance Program; but here Boston's future potential gain, if a new formula were adopted, is considerable, since its building needs, mostly for replacement of antiquated structures, are certainly greater than that of the average Massachusetts community. As the rest of the state grows and as Boston's valuation declines, it would be to Boston's benefit to see to it that the distribution formulas are geared more closely to urban needs.

Hub's Fiscal Resources

Now let's look at the picture of Boston's fiscal resources. It is a known fact that we are trying to raise more taxes from less actual value of taxable property than any other large city and that two thirds of the city's present annual expenditures falls upon real estate and personal property; that the annual amount of new taxable construction in Boston is relatively negligible, and that the city's competitive position is being steadily undermined.

The state, in turn, has added to the already heavy burden, by legislative act, the authorization of multi-million-dollar Metropolitan District Commission projects; the legislative-imposed Metropolitan Transit Authority deficit has been increased by leaps and bounds, and by its failure to take positive legislative action to reimburse municipalities for properties lost to the tax rolls through various exemptions and through land takings for expressways and other public facilities. The Commonwealth has been constantly chipping away at Boston's already depleted tax base.

State Fiscal Distribution

Next to taxes on real estate, the city's chief resource is the combination of reimbursements, distributions, and grants, which we generally call State Aid.

As Robert Morgan stated at a Boston College Seminar, the State Aid is insufficient in amount and is not geared to the needs and fiscal abilities of our municipalities.

Former Governor Christian A. Herter stated that the old system of distribution and reimbursement is no less than a tragic mess doing justice neither to the Commonwealth nor the cities or towns. It is quite obvious that the members of the Great and General Court should face up to realities and take legislative steps to correct the basis for assessment of Metropolitan District Commission, Metropolitan Transit Authority, and Suffolk County costs which are inequitable, discriminating, and harmful to Boston.

This is a simple matter and we are asking not for the Commonwealth to give a gift, but rather for simple justice in the manner of redistributing these costs amongst the members of special regional districts.

Secondly, the Commonwealth should carry further the process of reallocation of functions between Boston and the metropolitan districts, and should consider seriously as to whether or not there should be established a new form of government of limited powers for the metropolitan districts.

Thirdly, the Commonwealth should take immediate steps to correct and improve the system of financial distribution as between the state and cities and towns. This should include the assumption of a greater share of welfare costs by the Commonwealth.

I am convinced that fair-minded legislators now believe that the future of the state as well as of their own communities is linked with that of Boston and may I inject this at this time that I wish to congratulate Mayor-Elect John F. Collins on his statements that he will appear in person on crucial legislation at Beacon Hill. I think this is a very important contribution because it has always been my candid opinion that dispatching a legislative agent to speak for our city is not sufficient enough, but I am certain that the personal appearance of the Chief Executive will have a tremendous impact.

I also trust that the Chief Executive will have joined with him at these legislative hearings the leaders of the business life of the City of Boston, especially those whose economic interests lie in Boston, but whose homes are elsewhere. These latter gentlemen could do much to reconcile the attitude of the legislators from their own communities.

Picture Not Rosy

In conclusion, may I state that I enjoy coming home since I have always felt that my service in the Boston City Council made me one of you and gave to me an invaluable education and insight of the fiscal problems of our home city.

I am not appearing here today wearing rose-colored glasses nor am I of the belief that my counterparts in the Legislature will agree 100 per cent with my viewpoints, but when I look back towards the days of my first appearance in the legislative halls and to see the change now apparent in the thinking of the legislators from elsewhere in the Commonwealth, although we are not winning everything, we are making inroads in breaking down the anti-Boston attitude of years gone by.

SENATOR PHILIP A. GRAHAM

Any person who understands the problems of government in Massachusetts knows that our capital city is the Hub of the Commonwealth and that nearly every one of its citizens benefits from the city either as a source of his livelihood, through use of its educational facilities, or by patronizing one or another of our fine department stores, to cite only a few examples.

All of the municipalities in Massachusetts have financial problems facing them because of expansion problems due to highways, schools, and other public services. No doubt Boston's problems are as acute as those of any one of our other cities. I, personally, am well aware of these problems and fully realize that we need cooperation among all the municipalities to solve such problems. However, before Boston can expect the other municipalities to so cooperate and to share in the expenses of the former's operating of the municipal government, the city itself—through its city government and representatives in the Legislature—must show that it is willing to cooperate with the other communities and demonstrate that it has the courage to place its own house in order.

Public Library Expense

I can briefly explain what I mean by taking two of many bills as examples:

1. Senate Bill 547 which sought to provide for the reimbursement of the City of Boston for certain expenses of the Boston Public Library. These "certain expenses" referred specifically to the operation and maintenance of the reference and research facilities of the Public Library as they benefit those who are not residents of the city. The bill sought to have a determination made of the extent of use of these facilities by residents of communities within the limits of the MTA with an ultimate objective of assessing whatever cost was considered proportionate to the total use of the reference and research section of the library on these communities.

While there might be some justification for this bill, this is an invitation to share only in the expenses and not in the management of this phase of the library's function. Surrounding communities are not going to participate in this type of thing.

Those directly concerned with Boston's future must not expect that they are going to be only the agents for handling the taxpayers' dollars of the surrounding communities but must be willing to give these communities a share in the management of these projects—at least a veto power if they think money is being unnecessarily expended.

Fewer MTA Guards

2. Senate Bill 258 which was relative to the number of guards on the rapid transit passenger trains operated by the MTA. This bill was a request from the Board of Trustees of the MTA and was endorsed by all the responsible officials. It sought to change a law whereby one guard is required for every two cars. All other municipalities operating transportation systems similar to the MTA have been able, with modern equipment, to reduce the number of guards from a minimum of one guard for four cars to a maximum of one for ten cars. Passage of this bill would have saved the MTA hundreds of thousands of dollars and would have given the taxpayer the benefit of modern improvement in safety control. Yet we note that every Boston Senator voted against this.

How can we expect other municipalities in the Commonwealth to enthuse over a program to rebuild Boston if its legislators are not willing to show due concern for the taxpaying public? This legislation was so written that no MTA employee would have lost his position with the company and these economies were to be brought about through resignations, death, and retirement.

Every citizen of Massachusetts is concerned about his capital city of Boston and will readily cooperate when it is found that Boston is really sincere about putting its house in order. Until then, I doubt whether much enthusiasm can be generated for any plan that will encourage the taxpaying public outside of the Greater Boston area to participate in Boston's problems.

REP. WILLIAM F. OTIS

To the question "Does Boston Receive a Just and Fair Deal from the State Legislature?" I must answer in the negative. However, I hasten to comment by asking: Has Boston deserved or earned the respect and confidence of the Legislature in its governing operations? Has it just coasted along, with its ever-mounting cost of city government, without honestly taking stock of the increasing crisis and, with needed vision, made the courageous steps to endeavor to put its own house in order? I honestly believe it has not done all it could have done, and it may very well have to suffer the consequences if it does not provide real evidence of willingness to help itself.

Nevertheless, Boston has sorely needed and now more desperately than ever needs large-scale assistance from the Commonwealth and the Legislature, which has been reluctant to come to its aid on many problems in the past.

MTA Deficit

One of the many problems on which Boston must have help from the Legislature, and to which I shall particularly address my remarks, is the unfair and inequitable burden it bears in its share of the MTA deficit.

Boston's 1959 assessment for the deficit alone was $10,160,183, which amounted to $6.90 on the tax rate. This assessment was based on Boston paying 64.3828 per cent of the deficit. The 1959 assessment was based on the MTA's 1958 deficit of $15.8 million. The city's assessment in 1960 will be based on a 1959 deficit expected to reach $20 million.

A new method of assessing the annual deficits of the Metropolitan Transit Authority upon the municipalities of the Metropolitan Transit District is needed. The present method is inaccurate and unfair. It especially victimizes Boston. In 1959, Boston paid over $1.7 million more of the 1958 MTA deficit than justice and equity required.

The same formula is also used for assessing the principal payments for rapid transit debt on cities and towns of the transit district. For its proportion of this assessment, Boston paid close to $125,000 more in 1959 than its equitable share. All told, then, Boston was forced to pay close to $1.9 million more of the MTA's assessable expense in 1959 than it should because of the unfair formula.

Under the fairest formula, Boston should pay no more than 54.814 per cent of the deficit. If Boston paid only this proportion of the deficit, it would have paid $8,534,520 in 1959, or $1,627,663 less than it did. This would have reduced the tax rate $1.10.

As you can see, even making Boston's share of the deficit fairer would not affect the tax rate significantly. The real problem is the deficit and that is where the attack should be directed. The deficit really amounts to an unlimited expense account, and either should be abolished or a limit should be fixed by law.

Present Method of Assessment

The present law authorizes the MTA trustees, from "computations made in their discretion for the purpose," to assess the Authority's deficits on the municipalities in the district. The amount assessed on each community should be "in proportion to the number of persons" in the communities of the district "using the service."

In line with the law, the trustees, in 1940, tried to measure the actual users or car riders as against the number of persons to whom the service was available.

The computation used had three elements. The important element was a count of the actual number of persons who boarded the MTA in each of the fourteen cities and towns served. By taking a passenger count of embarking passengers and charging such volumes to the places of embarkations, the trustees tried to measure use of the transit facilities by each municipality. Over 3,000,000 riders were counted.

Validity of Count

How reliable was the count? Take two MTA users—one lives in Cambridge and boards a Massachusetts Avenue car each morning to transfer to the subway at Harvard square. He emerges at Park street and walks to work. The other user lives in Boston and boards the subway at Charles Station each morning to emerge at Park street.

At 5 p.m., both enter the Park Street Station, one getting off at Charles street and the other at Massachusetts avenue above Harvard square.

At the end of the day, the count in this example charged Boston with three "users" and Cambridge with one. This situation was repeated many times and had a great effect on the final count.

Tremendous numbers of passengers on the system have always been commuters from cities and towns outside of Boston. Under the present method of apportionment all home-going trips of these passengers were charged against Boston because they embarked on the system in Boston. No attempt was made to segregate these return trips and to charge them to the municipalities whose residents were using the transit system.

This obvious injustice demonstrates a major defect in the passenger count system used in determining the allocation of the deficit burden.

Formula Outdated

What is also important is the fact that the last annual count to determine use of MTA service was made back in 1940. Continued use of this old count assumes that there have been no material changes in the transit district since 1940.

It is definitely apparent, however, from the annual reports of the MTA that changes in travel habits of the district have taken place. The reduced use of the system is undeniable evidence.

The situation with respect to auto travel versus use of the transit system has changed in recent years so radically that continued use of the 1940 passenger count is unrealistic, and therefore unfair.

Moreover, even the traditional concept of the metropolitan transit area has been outmoded through the accelerated outward movement of population. The area of residence of beneficiaries of the transit system has been pushed beyond the limits of the fourteen municipalities in the present transit district.

A New Formula

Taking a new count would still present difficulties and would merely perpetuate the unfair treatment accorded to Boston.

In fact, a new count taken in 1956 increased Boston's share of the deficit to 66.1281 per cent and had to be discarded. This was due to the fact that the count was conducted similar to the 1940 count and thus was inherently unjust.

Continuation of this method would mean that even if no one lived in Boston, the city would still have to pay 50 per cent of the deficit.

An assessment formula based on population would be fair because of its simplicity, and more important, because it makes allowances for the readiness-to-serve factor—a universally recognized ingredient of utility charges which is now completely neglected.

Precedents Established

A ready precedent for a formula based on population is found in the methods adopted by the Legislature for allocating other metropolitan expenses among the cities and towns benefited.

The method of allocating the cost of service of the metropolitan sewer and park systems combines the factors of valuation and population of the municipalities served. Generally speaking, population is the primary basis for allocating maintenance costs, whereas valuation enters into the basis when capital costs are concerned.

Boston's proportion of the MTA deficit based on population would be about 11 per cent less than it is. With respect to sewer assessments the method of assessing the debt service of any future capital costs has been improved by a 1959 act of the Legislature, by relating these costs to sewer capacity.

It is estimated that Boston's share of the MTA deficit can be reduced by $6.5 million if the gap between the MTA income and expenses is cut by $10.5 million. As stated before, the gap between MTA income and expense reached $15.9 million in 1958, and is expected to exceed $20 million by the end of 1959. Under the law, MTA deficits are assessed on the fourteen cities and towns served by the transit system. These municipalities experienced sharp increases in property tax bills this year on account of the staggering MTA assessments. Boston's share of MTA assessments for 1959 was just under $11 million, or $7.20 of its tax rate. Next year it may well climb to $15 million or more.

The MTA Trustees, with the approval of the Advisory Board, as required by law, should take drastic action immediately to improve the system's income picture and to reduce expense.

Raising the Fares

The first order of business should be revisions in fares through action by the trustees and through action by the Legislature. An increase in the general fare to 25 cents with a corresponding increase in the local fare to 20 cents will bring the MTA fare schedule in line with other large transit systems. It is stated that it will produce almost $5 million a year in additional income. Baltimore, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, and St. Louis already have general transit fares of 25 cents. In most of these cases the increases have been made in recent months. With few exceptions cities with a 25-cent fare do not have the liberal transfer privileges enjoyed by users of the MTA system.

The time has long passed for lifting the legislative limit on so-called children's fares. In 1952 the Legislature froze MTA fares for children between the ages of five and fourteen at 5 cents. Massachusetts is the only state in which children's fares are fixed by state statute. Of seventeen large cities in Boston's population class, seven do not have special fares for children. Six others have established children's fares which are half the adult rates. Of the remaining four cities, three have higher fares for children than Boston. If the 1952 act is amended so that children's fares are raised to one half of the adult fare and so that the maximum age for children is reduced to twelve, MTA income would increase by about $1 million a year. Raising the general fare to 25 cents and the local fare to 20 cents, and increasing children's fares as recommended will bring in an additional $6 million a year in income. For Boston this will mean a reduction in its share of the MTA deficit of $3.8 million.

Consideration should be given to the adoption of zoned fares. This would mean further substantial increases in revenue and a fairer apportionment of fares between the long-distance and short-distance riders. The Highland Branch is a good example.

Elimination of Featherbedding

The Legislature should eliminate costly featherbedding in MTA operations by repealing the statute enacted in 1935 requiring a guard for every two cars of passenger trains. A change-over to one guard for every four cars instead of one guard for two cars would bring manpower savings on rapid transit lines of at least $500,000 a year. Boston's share of the saving would be $320,000 a year. Rapid transit systems in other cities are not penalized by such legislative restriction. In New York City and Chicago, one guard is used for as many as ten cars. Wages and other labor costs in 1957 consumed 90 cents of every dollar collected in MTA income. This shows that sizable savings in expense can be achieved only by making sensible reductions in manpower.

If action is taken on the above and the elimination of costly bus lines and owl service and other economies are put into operation, such as changes in fare collection at certain rapid transit stations, discontinuance of poorly patronized service lines, and reduction or discontinuance of lightly patronized feeder lines during evenings, Sundays, and holidays, it is estimated that it would save about $950,000 a year.

The city must continue efforts to secure the enactment of bills reducing Boston's share of the MTA deficit from 64 per cent to 50 per cent, and assessing a part of the deficit on fringe cities and towns.

Each year many bills have been filed for Boston's interest and assistance by Boston legislators and others. Probably the wisest move the Legislature could make to really resolve the MTA problem would be to remove all legislative control as it is presently constituted and place its operation in the hands of a board of trustees chosen from the fourteen cities and towns that make up the transit area, freeing them of all legislative control, and who would operate the system on a private-business basis. In other words, remove its present political entanglements.

The so-called "Sullivan Plan" takes the trustees out of state jurisdiction, where they do not belong, and places them under the jurisdiction of the communities interested in efficient operation of the system. It stabilizes the cost to the cities and towns at much less than the deficit, and requires the MTA to meet all operating costs from operating revenue. The present blank-check operation in which the cities and towns have to pick up the losses, whatever they are, encourages waste and political manipulation. Cities and towns outside the present fourteen would find it to their advantage to get into the system—as soon as the reforms broke down the present hostility to the MTA.

Mr. Sullivan's plan recognizes the existence of the automobile and ties it into rapid transit by an ingenious integration of the two to realize the advantages of each.

An efficient transportation system, including highways, railroads, and public transit, is a must for the Greater Boston area and every community within its boundaries. I believe Boston can recover from its rapidly deteriorating financial condition if the Legislature and city officials carry out a constructive program of remedial action. The time has come for the Legislature to unite and act for the interests of the whole good rather than individual community self-interest and shortsightedness.

To touch briefly on a few other issues affecting Boston which need legislative assistance, the following are important.

Suffolk County

Boston pays all Suffolk County expenses, which in 1958 totaled $7.9 million. This amounted to $3.82 on the tax rate.

If Suffolk County expenses were paid as they are in other counties—that is, on the basis of 1945 equalized valuations—Boston's proportion of county expenses would be 92.6 per cent. That would have made the city's tab for 1958 amount to $7.3 million and would have reduced the tax rate by 32 cents.

If Suffolk County expenses were paid on a population basis, the city's proportion would be 86.4 per cent. Based on total 1958 expense, the city's tab would have added up to $7.0 million, and would have reduced the tax rate by 61 cents.

If the state paid all court costs, and this makes the most sense, since court costs make up the major share of county expenses, as John Daly, Executive Secretary to the Supreme Judicial Court recommended, Boston's share of Suffolk County costs would be reduced by $4.5 million. If Boston then paid 100 per cent of remaining county expense, the tax rate would be reduced $3.04.

MDC

Thirty-nine per cent of the maintenance costs of the Metropolitan Parks District is assessed on the cities and towns in the Parks District. Boston pays 39.2 per cent of this assessment on the basis of one-third population, two-thirds valuations.

Population is a better index of use of Parks District facilities than a combination of valuation-population. If the formula for assessments were based on population alone, Boston's share of Park District assessments would only be 35.7 per cent.

The 1958 assessment was about $1.3 million. If the formula based on population alone were used, Boston would have saved about $150,000 on its 1958 assessment, a reduction of about 10 cents on the tax rate.

Transfer of Sanatorium to State

The Boston Tuberculosis Sanatorium should be transferred to the state. Its transfer would mean a reduction of $2.4 million in annual expense to the city, a reduction of $1.60 in the rate.

The treatment and care of tuberculosis patients is no longer considered a local problem.

If the sanatorium was transferred and Boston paid for its patients at the going state rate of $8.57 a day, the city would still save about $1 million, about 68 cents on the tax rate.

State Sharing in Certain Costs

The Commonwealth should reimburse cities and towns for 25 per cent of the administrative expenses for Old Age Assistance and Aid to Dependent Children, and for 50 per cent of the administrative expenses for Veterans' Benefits. This would increase Boston's share of state aid by $650,000 a year and would affect the tax rate by about 45 cents.

Exemption from Gas Tax

The Commonwealth should reimburse cities and towns for state taxes paid on motor fuel used in municipally-owned vehicles.

Boston would receive about $70,000 in additional revenue from this. It would reduce the tax rate about 5 cents.

Reimbursement for Tax Losses

The Commonwealth should reimburse cities and towns for their losses of property taxes on account of veterans' exemptions. If the Legislature is to grant such exemptions, it ought not to do so at the expense of municipal income.

Boston's tax loss on account of veterans' exemptions runs to over $700,000 a year. This affects the tax rate about 48 cents.

Transfer of Drawbridges

The care, control, and maintenance of all bridges with drawspans in Boston should be transferred to the State Department of Public Works. Drawbridges serve marine shipping, which benefits the area and not the city alone.

Boston would save $500,000 by this move, reducing the tax rate by about 35 cents.

State Subsidy for Public Library

To recognize the metropolitan and state-wide use of the rich reference and research collections of the Boston Public Library in Copley square, the Legislature should authorize an annual payment equivalent to one third the cost of operating the Division of Reference and Research Services. This would mean an annual subsidy of about $300,000 and would affect the tax rate about 20 cents.

FIN. COM. RECOMMENDS END TO TEMPORARY BORROWINGS BY CITY

December 31, 1959.

Hon. JOHN F. COLLINS,
Mayor-Elect of Boston.

DEAR MR. COLLINS:

Boston can save close to $1,000,000 annually by eliminating temporary borrowing.

Each year the City is forced to borrow many millions of dollars, because taxes are not due until late in the year and obligations must be met every month in the year. This annual temporary borrowing averaged approximately $80,000,000 during the past five years.

The interest paid on temporary loans, in anticipation of the receipt of taxes, has risen sharply. In 1954, the amount was $415,854. In 1958, it was $970,947. The fact that our economy has entered an era of high interest rates on borrowing means that the cost of this as well as all forms of borrowing is bound to rise.

It is hardship enough to pay a tax bill based on a high rate, but to increase the tax burden because the collection calendar is not geared to the expenditure program is to add an extra burden without providing an added municipal service.

The key to elimination of temporary borrowing lies in developing and following an early calendar of budget, property assessment, tax rate setting, and due date of tax payment, which will bring in the tax collections when needed.

Why the City Borrows

The City Treasurer continually analyzes his cash position in anticipating the commitments facing the City for the period ahead. When this analysis indicates that the cash position of the City is inadequate, the City must then resort to temporary borrowing. The amounts of such temporary borrowing are presented in the following table:

Temporary Borrowing
	1958	1959
January.....	$5,000,000	—
February.....	10,000,000	$10,000,000
March.....	10,000,000	10,000,000
April.....	10,000,000	5,000,000
May.....	15,000,000	5,000,000
June.....	—	10,000,000
July.....	—	10,000,000
August.....	10,000,000	5,000,000
September.....	10,000,000	—
October.....	10,000,000	—
November.....	—	—
December.....	—	—

The interest paid by the City on this type of temporary borrowing during the past five years has amounted to $4,474,233, as shown in the following table:

Interest Paid on Temporary Loans in Anticipation of Taxes

1954.....	$415,854 52
1955.....	471,693 19
1956.....	1,007,589 00
1957.....	1,698,240 00
1958.....	970,946 69

Solutions in Other Cities

In many other cities, temporary borrowing in anticipation of the collection of taxes is unnecessary. The factors involved and the procedures followed in some of these other cities are presented herewith for their possible application to the Boston situation.

Baltimore

This city is comparable to Boston with respect to population size and its heavy reliance on the property tax as a source of revenue.

The following table presents the key elements in Baltimore's successful effort to gear its collection of taxes to its current needs:

PER CENT OF COLLECTIONS CURRENT YEAR	Time of Property Assessment	Tax Due	Discount for Prepayment of Taxes		Penalties and Interest on Late Tax Payment
			Real Property	Personal Property
1957—97.22%	Oct. 1	July 31	Jan.—1%	1% If paid by May 31	Aug.—1½%
1958—98%	Prior year	Current year	Feb.—1%		Sept.—3%
			Mar.—1%		Oct.—4½%
			April—1%		Nov.—6%
			May—1%		Dec.—8½%
					After Dec. 1 additional 7%

The above data on Baltimore makes several points clear. The city enjoys an extremely high tax collection. Almost 100 per cent of due taxes has been collected by August. The imposition of penalties helps to prevent delinquency in payment. Offering a discount for prepayment as an incentive is also a factor.

It is important to note that Baltimore establishes its valuations, adopts its budget, and sets its tax rate—all before January 1.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

December 28.

General Order No. 633.

In accordance with law, the following-named police officers are hereby retired from active duty in the Boston Police Department, effective at the close of business on Thursday, December 31, 1959:

General Laws (Ter. Edit.), Chapter 32, State-Boston Retirement System.

Walter E. Moore, patrolman, Division 10.

John J. Murphy, patrolman, Division 6.

December 30.

General Order No. 634.

Patrolmen Arthur F. Connolly, John M. Kenney, and Robert C. Olson, all of Division 3, are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

Shortly after three o'clock on the morning of December 21, 1959, Patrolmen Connolly and Olson were dispatched to 11 Grove street, Apartment 4, on a trouble call made by an unknown person. On arrival in Grove street, they met Patrolman John M. Kenney, the route officer, and all three entered the apartment house. Receiving no response to constant knocking at one door, the officers entered a small reception hall and tried another door, which was not locked but was being held by some unknown person. Patrolman Olson immediately went to the rear of the building and Patrolmen Kenney and Connolly finally forced their way into the apartment, occupied by Don S. Young, 25 years, and his wife, Jane, 23 years.

Don S. Young was seated in a kitchen chair with his hands tied behind his back with wire, and his wife, Jane, was held from behind by a man later identified as Peter M. Stevens, 38 years, 331 Tremont street, Boston, who was armed with a knife which he held at Mrs. Young's throat. Stevens was quickly subdued by the officers.

Don Young related the following to the officers: That at about 2:10 that morning Stevens knocked at his door, informed him that he was a police officer and demanded admittance. Young opened the door and Stevens forced his way into the apartment, stating that he was looking for dope, searched Young and took $3 from his pocket and his Elgin wrist watch. He then forced Young to make a cup of tea and made him cut the telephone wires. He then tied Young's hands behind his back and tied him to the kitchen chair. Stevens then attempted to tie up Mrs. Young, but did not have wire enough left, meanwhile refusing to let her attend to their six-day-old child who was crying in the bed. When the officers arrived, Stevens grabbed Mrs. Young by the back, held a kitchen knife at her throat, and threatened to kill her if she made an outcry.

The Elgin watch and money taken from Young were found in Stevens' pocket when arrested. He confessed to forcing his way into the apartment, taking the money and watch and tying up Mr. Young. He also stated that he had just been released three weeks previously from the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Concord, on parole.

Philadelphia

This city which also enjoys a high percentage of current tax collection is also free of the necessity for temporary borrowing. The following table presents the elements in the Philadelphia situation:

PER CENT COLLECTED IN CURRENT YEAR	Time of Assessment of Property	Taxes Due	Discount or Prepayment of Taxes	Interest and Penalties on Late Payment
Real Estate 96.9% Personal 99.5% . . .	Generally completed in Nov. for subsequent year	June 30	Up to April 30 1%	Jan.—1% Aug.—2% Sept.—3% Oct.—4% Nov.—5% Dec.—6% After Jan. 1 all 7% Penalties and 1% interest per month

Here, again, as in the case of Baltimore, its valuations are established, its budget is adopted and its tax rate set—all before January 1.

New Jersey Municipalities

As in the case of Baltimore and Boston, New Jersey municipalities rely heavily on the property tax as a source of revenue. They enjoy a uniformly high percentage of current property tax collection.

A distinguishing characteristic in the case of New Jersey municipalities is the fact that taxes are collected quarterly, payment falling due on February 1, May 1, August 1, and November 1. Taxes become delinquent following the above respective dates. Municipalities are permitted to penalize tax delinquency up to 8 per cent, although in actual practice 7 per cent appears to be the most common penalty used. Although municipalities are permitted to offer discounts for prepayment up to 6 per cent, in actual practice the discount feature is not used in many municipalities.

Since the tax rate for the current year is not set until the middle of the year, the first two tax payments in a given year are based on the prior year's tax bill. When the new tax rate is set in the middle of the year, an amount based on the new rate is computed. A taxpayer is given credit for the amount paid in the first and second installments. The balance is split into two equal parts which become, respectively, the third and fourth installments.

The billing is done twice a year: one bill, separated into two parts, carries the amounts for the first and second installments; the second bill carries the amounts for the third and fourth installments.

Experience of Other Cities

The experience of other cities demonstrates two things clearly:

(1) It is possible to eliminate temporary borrowing.

(2) There are several methods of handling the situation.

There is more than one approach to this problem. One method calls for so scheduling the preliminaries (budget, property assessment, declaration of the tax rate) that the due date for the year's tax payment may be set relatively early in the year.

Another approach provides for several collections during the year, through a system of quarterly payments (but the bills are sent semi-annually) as is done in New Jersey municipalities.

Penalties

Penalties and discounts are elements in the picture in other municipalities; this is particularly true of penalties.

The desirability of a substantial penalty to be imposed on delinquent tax payments is stressed in a discussion of the factors involved in an analysis of the credit of a municipality, which appears in "Fundamentals of Municipal Bonds," published by the Investment Bankers Association of America. It reads:

"It is also important that the municipality have adequate penalties for nonpayment of taxes when due. Some individuals simply let their real estate taxes go if the tax penalty is not sufficient to more than off set what they would have to pay for money at the bank. In other words, if they had a 4 per cent penalty for nonpaid taxes and they had to pay 6 per cent at the bank, they might let their real estate taxes go and use that money rather than go to the bank and borrow at 6 per cent. Thus, while it is difficult to state definitely what an adequate penalty might be, it would seem desirable that is should be no less than 8 or 10 per cent and preferably higher."

A New Venture

The proposal to finance current municipal operations without the aid of temporary borrowing means a sharp break with the past. It also means making some basic decisions and taking new steps.

A decision will have to be made on the question of rescheduling the budget calendar, assessment date, declaration of the tax rate, and the method and timing of tax billing. Other decisions will have to be made in the matter of setting up effective penalties, and whether there should be prepayment incentives in the form of discounts. The merits of quarterly payments as a collection system will have to be decided. Certain changes in law and present procedures will be involved.

The reward should be worth all this effort, however, since the prize is the saving of approximately $1,000,000 a year in interest cost, and a resultant sounder financial picture.

The Finance Commission urges that this question be fully explored, and the procedural and legal changes involved in reaching the objective discussed in this report be worked out as a part of your program looking to economy in the administration of the City.

Respectfully submitted,

ANTHONY J. YOUNG,
Chairman,
ROGER J. ABIZAID, M.D.,
MAXWELL B. GROSSMAN,
The Finance Commission.
THOMAS J. MURPHY,
Executive Secretary.

In Central Municipal Court before Judge J. John Fox, on December 22, 1959, Stevens was charged with robbery; assault by means of a dangerous weapon; impersonating a police officer; and destruction of Telephone Company property. Probable cause was found on the robbery complaint and jurisdiction declined on the other offenses, and Stevens was held for the grand jury in lieu of $10,000 double surety.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the excellent manner in which Patrolmen Connolly, Kenney, and Olson conducted their investigation and effected the prompt arrest of the subject Stevens who, although paroled only briefly, had already resumed his criminal career.

January 4.

General Order No. 635.

Patrolman John V. Nee and Patrolman Francis D. Powers of the Special Service Squad of Bureau of Criminal Investigation are hereby commended for meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

On December 22, 1959, the home of a resident of the town of Milton was invaded about 7.30 at night. The occupants were away from home at the time of the break, but returned shortly thereafter and observed a 1958 Pontiac sedan, Mass. Registration No. 202-975, parked nearby. Upon entering their home they were confronted by two men who fled, one by means of the front door and the other by the rear door. The Pontiac was seen to move away during this time, but it was not immediately ascertained that the two men concerned in this burglary were connected with the automobile. A later investigation disclosed that this vehicle had been stolen on Division 2 in Boston early the same day.

The Milton Police caused a teletype to be sent out requesting the apprehension of this car and its occupants. About 2 A.M., December 23, 1959, this car was found parked on Kearsarge avenue, Roxbury, the motor cold, car locked, and apparently abandoned. Surveillance was maintained on this car for the remainder of the night by Patrolmen Nee and Powers, together with other detectives of the Special Service Squad.

Maintaining this vigil after their usual hours of duty had concluded, at 8.30 A.M., December 23, 1959, Patrolmen Powers and Nee observed a man with a bag in his hand move towards the car, insert a key, enter the car, and start it in motion. The car, Mass. Registration No. 202-975, was followed and forced to the curb. As Patrolman Nee alighted and started to approach the stolen car, the operator put the same in motion and drove the car at Patrolman Nee causing the officer to jump from its direction in order to avoid serious injury. The operator of this stolen automobile opened the door of the car and fled, and was pursued by Patrolmen Nee and Powers. Both officers discharged their service revolvers in the direction of the fleeing suspect. During the pursuit of the escaping felon, Patrolman Nee damaged his topcoat, climbing fences, etc., and it is worthless as wearing apparel.

These officers believing that they had made contact with the escaping felon and that he was wounded, Capt. James V. Crowley was contacted and he dispatched two cars from the Robbery Squad to assist.

Search was made of the surrounding terrain, without success. In order to apprehend this felon whose identity was unknown to either the Milton police or by the pursuing officers, Patrolmen Nee and Powers went to the City Hospital for a further check to ascertain if any person had applied for medical aid.

At about 9.30 that morning, December 23, 1959, a man identified as Bruce C. Geary, 17 years, 5 feet, 8 inches, 135 pounds, of 24 Winthrop street, Roxbury, arrived in a taxicab with two members of his family and applied at the Accident Floor of the Boston City Hospital for treatment. Patrolmen Nee and Powers recognized Geary as the man wanted by them and kept him in constant view at the hospital while he was being examined by Dr. John Valeri, who found that Geary was suffering from a gunshot wound of the left thigh and possible fracture of the left thima (thigh bone). He was held for treatment.

When questioned by Patrolmen Nee and Powers, Geary stated he broke into and entered the home in Milton and when the people returned he ran out the front door, entered the stolen car that was recovered by these patrolmen, but refused to name his accomplice stating he committed the breaking and entering alone.

On December 26, 1959, Geary was released from the Boston City Hospital and was taken into custody on warrant by Patrolmen Nee and Powers on the following charges:

- 1. Violation of the Automobile Law, to wit: using a motor vehicle without authority.
- 2. Violation of the automobile law, to wit: Operating a motor vehicle on a public way (Kearsarge avenue, Roxbury), without a license or permit so to do.

3. Assault and Battery by Means of a Dangerous Weapon, to wit: an automobile, on Patrolman John V. Nee.

Geary was taken to the Roxbury District Court and was arraigned on the above complaints before Judge Philip Tracy. Geary pleaded guilty and was given the following sentences:

Charge No. 1: Six months, House of Correction, suspended for one year.

Charge No. 2: Twenty-dollar fine for operating an automobile without a license.

Charge No. 3: Six months, House of Correction, suspended for one year.

The fine and probation being accepted by the defendant, he was discharged from custody and was immediately arrested by Patrolmen Nee and Powers, and brought to the Bureau of Criminal Investigation from where he was turned over to the Milton Police Department on charge of burglary at 563 Blue Hill Parkway, Milton, Mass., on December 22, 1959.

The Police Commissioner is pleased to recognize the efficient police work and the off-duty hours performed by Patrolmen Nee and Powers in this case thereby accomplishing the arrest, within a comparatively few hours, of the subject who was wanted in another community on a breaking and entering charge.

In further recognizing the devotion to duty and fine police work performed by these officers in this case, the Police Commissioner is pleased to advance from patrolman to detective third grade, John V. Nee and Francis D. Powers, of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, same to be effective Wednesday, January 6, 1960, at 7.45 o'clock A.M.

January 5.

General Order No. 636.

The resignation of Patrolman Emmanuel E. Rogers of Division 9, having been presented, while charges against him are pending, it is hereby accepted to take effect Tuesday, January 5, 1960, at 7.45 o'clock A.M.

BELVIDERE ST. WIDENING

Boston Proper

The Mayor and Public Improvement Commission have approved the widening, relocation, extension, and construction of Belvidere street, Boston Proper district, from Dalton street to Huntington avenue.

The project is described as follows:

The highway named Belvidere street is hereby widened, relocated, and extended from Dalton street to Huntington avenue, and ordered constructed.

For the making of the aforesaid improvement an easement for highway purposes is hereby taken in the following-described lands:

MORE CITY DWELLERS FORECAST

Central cities, in the future, may become more residential, with less emphasis on manufacturing and more on wholesaling, banking, government and other services, according to a housing insurance expert, Otto Nelson, as quoted in the American City. These activities often represent a more efficient use of urban land, with certain manufacturing diluting the tax base, he said.

CITY RECORD

OFFICIAL CHRONICLE OF BOSTON MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

VOL. 52

SATURDAY, JANUARY 16, 1960

No. 3

BEACON HILL TO LEARN BOSTON'S REAL PLIGHT

Mayor John F. Collins accounted for his first ten days in office by pulling together many loose ends, particularly with respect to the city's relationship with the Massachusetts Legislature and preparation of the 1960 budget estimates.

On January 12, the Mayor was host, in his office, to thirteen members of the Legislature, eleven of them representatives and two of them senators, whose constituencies lie within the city limits. This was the first of a series of planned conferences.

Out-of-Town Support

The Mayor has strongly emphasized that his success on Beacon Hill with regard to Boston's legislative program rests in persuading lawmakers from distant areas as to the gravity of the city's problems. He said, after he has conferred with the Boston legislators, he plans to arrange sessions with out-of-town legislators according to geographical interests and stress to them the importance of Boston's "Operation Revival" for the entire state. He said he intends to appear before legislative committees on Beacon Hill on important bills, one of them, he said, the limited 3 per cent sales tax measure giving all receipts to cities and towns. He plans to intensify legislative relations in contrast with policies of the past.

With the thirteen Boston legislators the Mayor discussed his legislative program in an informal atmosphere. Following the meeting the legislators were served luncheon right on the Mayor's conference table.

One legislator declared it was the first time he had ever been invited inside the Mayor's Office at City Hall. Mayor Collins went a step further and said his door "will always be open" to any Boston legislator who wants to discuss a local or community problem.

Legislative Team

On January 11, Mayor Collins appointed a two-man legislative team to represent the city on Beacon Hill. They were: former Representative Louis K. Nathanson, of Roxbury, and Attorney Paul J. Burns, of Dorchester. Both, as assistant corporation counsels, immediately began their duties at the State House representing the Mayor on a large number of petitions and proposals he had introduced for consideration of the current legislative session.

According to Corporation Counsel Arthur G. Coffey, Assistant Corporation Counsel William H. Kerr will appear before legislative committees only on the most technical and involved issues and will supervise redrafting of all legislative bills affecting Boston.

Budget Preparation

John P. McMorrow, Director of Administrative Services, and the city's eight budget analysts worked through last week end on the preparation of the Mayor's budget estimates for 1960. Mr. McMorrow indicated that there was much more room for budget cutting than he had expected, and that cuts are being made—in small amounts here and there—each department discovering ways to economize and eliminate waste.

Mr. McMorrow said: "A general tightening up of administration in all departments is the order of the day. Every item is being checked and triple checked."

Each department has been given a low budget figure to shoot at. Then, Mr. McMorrow and his staff will take aim on the same target. Finally, a series of conferences will be held, at which the Director of Administrative Services and the department heads will settle down to a give-and-take session. Differences will be ironed out and a final figure will be reached.

"The cooperation from department heads and their personnel has been excellent, and we are getting good results," Mr. McMorrow said.

POLIO IMMUNIZATION RESUMES IN MARCH

Boston's low-cost polio immunization clinics will be held in late March or early April, exact dates and locations to be published later, the Boston Polio Inoculation Program Committee announced on January 11. These clinics, which will be held in convenient locations throughout the city, will enable all those who received the first two inoculations in the earlier clinics to have the third one in the series. Anyone, however, may have an inoculation whether it is the first, second, third, or booster. Donation will be as in the previous clinics, $1 per shot with a $3 maximum for families attending the clinic together. As before, the inoculations are free to anyone unable to make a contribution.

Late March has been selected for the clinic in the hope that the weather will be favorable for a large turnout. January and February were considered too risky weatherwise to schedule clinics which, it is hoped, will attract more than 25,000 people. Remember, no one is protected without at least three inoculations of Salk vaccine and a fourth or "booster" dose is strongly recommended. Get your shots! Be sure your entire family is protected. Tell your friends and neighbors. Anyone can get polio! Everyone needs protection!

MUNICIPAL IN-SERVICE TRAINING COURSES ADVOCATED

"Is In-Service Training a Worth-While Undertaking in Municipal Operations?"

This was the subject discussed in the second panel session of the fourth annual Conference on Municipal Administration held at the Boston Public Library Auditorium, November 19-20, 1959.

Moderator of the panel was Philip J. Bond, Assistant Superintendent of the Boston schools.

The panelists were:

Agnes E. Reynolds, Secretary to the Boston School Committee. Topic, "The Secretary."

Mildred C. Crowley, Administrative Assistant, Personnel, Welfare Department. Topic, "The Social Worker."

Edmund J. Morgan, Chief Building Inspector, City of Boston. Topic, "The Inspector."

Frederick J. Garvin, Associate Civil Engineer, Public Works Department. Topic, "The Engineer."

REMARKS OF MODERATOR

May I summarize worth-while recommendations for staff development through an administrative program which will effect growth and competency in individual staff members and improve the quality of service to be rendered to the city:

1. Staff meetings within a department or a division of a department should be held periodically to familiarize all personnel with the work of the department or division.

2. A program of in-service training of employees within a department or division of a department should be developed so that the work of a department or division will be carried on efficiently without interruption. In-service training should follow a regular program through a policy of seniority and merit, the department head assigning a worker to a principal with a definite number of hours each week assigned to training.

3. Within a reasonable time of the termination of the services of a principal employee, Civil Service examinations should be requested, qualifying or competitive within a department, as the department head sees fit.

THIRD OF A SERIES

This is the third of a series of seven installments which will completely cover the two-day Conferama sessions of 1959.

"THE SECRETARY"

By Agnes Reynolds

The School Committee of the City of Boston is a corporation set up under the law and consists of five members, elected at large for a term of two years, who serve without salary.

The present membership of the committee is: Mr. John P. Regan, Chairman; Mr. George F. Hurley; Mr. John P. McMorro; Miss Madeleine L. Reilly; and Mr. John J. Tierney, Jr.

I am the Secretary of the School Committee and serve as its recording secretary.

Through experience, I have found—from a practical viewpoint—that there are few problems in municipal government which cannot be worked out in such a way as to promote efficiency in function and operation.

An indication of this is to be found in the tremendous growth in recent years of the multiple services and essential functions provided to the public by the School Department of the City of Boston.

To a considerable degree our present secretarial and clerical staff possesses the requisite skills and experience—either working together as a team or individually—to give to each department the clerical knowledge best suited to its operational requirements.

May I digress at this time to say that it is my conviction that all secretarial and clerical employees should be assigned to serve under such working arrangements as will adequately fill the individual requirements of the various departments in which they work.

The Proper Atmosphere

It is pretty generally accepted that personnel procedures are most effective when they are founded on such sound personnel policies and practices as:

1. Promotion of harmonious employee relations through provisions for a workable position classification plan.
2. Equitable pay schedules.
3. Suitable working conditions.
4. Recognition of merit as well as seniority in selection and promotion practices.

Classification Plan

A significant step toward attaining these objectives for Civil Service employees in the School Department was taken several years ago when a new Classification and Compensation Plan was adopted for the secretarial, clerical, and custodial positions under the jurisdiction of the School Committee.

This plan was the result of a survey made by J. L. Jacobs & Co., of Chicago, at the request of the then School Committee, and included the classification of approximately one thousand Civil Service employees, in the School Department.

The administration and maintenance of the Classification and Compensation Plan, including the development of a merit rating system, will tend greatly to resolve and reduce employee grievances and related problems.

In connection with the administration of the plan, the School Committee, at its meeting on December 4, 1957, established the Office of Personnel for the administration of Civil Service personnel matters in the school system, said office to be directed by the Assistant Superintendent in Charge of Personnel.

Automation

During the last quarter of a century machine accounting methods have been developed to such a degree that manual recording of transactions has become obsolete, with few exceptions.

Municipal governments across the nation recognize the advantages of machine methods and each year a greater number of such installations are being made.

The School Department has had an accounting machine installation since 1950 and payroll tabulating machines since 1949. An IBM Section was established in the office of the Business Manager in August, 1955.

The Business Manager's Office has the responsibility for accounting and auditing, budget preparation and budgetary control, the processing of all department payrolls and all payroll records, and the purchase of supplies and materials.

The new IBM section, established by Mr. Leo J. Burke, our Business Manager, is an operation that is designed to eliminate repetitious and time-consuming effort while, at the same time, keeping files on an active and continuing basis.

Present applications in the IBM division include:

1. Tabulation of requests for purchase of textbooks and instructional supplies.
2. Inventory of equipment purchased.
3. Records of academic personnel.
4. Appropriation and cost accounting.

This year, English High School has begun the use of IBM for registration, scheduling, class listing, and preparation of report cards—procedures which are termed "pupil accounting."

The machines in the office of the Business Manager will be used to supplement those at English High School.

In-Training Courses

In-training courses have been conducted by the Business Manager when new machines are installed and it becomes necessary for the personnel in his office who code and prepare the work for the machine room to have a working knowledge of the machines and their uses.

The personnel who operate the IBM machines have had card punch training before taking the Civil Service examinations for that particular type of work. In addition, IBM maintains a training program of its own.

Both the Business Manager and the Secretary have given short-unit courses for employees taking Civil Service promotional examinations which were, necessarily, restricted to personnel in the School Department.

In view of the rapid changes and improvements in clerical practices in recent years, the advantages of an operative In-Training Program for clerical workers would be twofold:

1. To assist employees in developing efficiency in present assignments; and
2. To make available to employees the additional opportunity of developing skill in modern office techniques and to prepare for promotional examinations as vacancies occur in the School Department.

I feel that the establishment of In-Training Courses in the secretarial and clerical areas in the School Department would be a decided step forward in view of the many and rapid changes which occur in the methods and procedures of office practice from year to year; and will recommend the establishment of such courses in the future in the School Department.

"THE SOCIAL WORKER"

By Mildred C. Crowley

My contribution to this discussion today is to interpret the role of the social worker in the community, particularly the role of the public welfare worker and to tell you of the on-the-job training which goes into the making of a good public assistance social worker.

When we hear the term social worker, no longer do we think of the severely tailored, flat-heeled, pince-nezed individual of yesteryear. Neither do we immediately think of Lady Bountiful though I am afraid that certain segments of the population still think of the social worker as a "do gooder." Not so. It is true that the social worker must be motivated by a desire to help his or her fellow man when he is in need either because of financial resources or because death or serious illness has deprived a family of its breadwinner, or because the ravages of time have incapacitated a person and he is no longer able to support himself.

What kind of a person do we expect this social worker, whose principal goal is the alleviation of human suffering, to be? What are the basic requirements essential for a person to do the public assistance job? What goes into his training on the job that makes his contribution to the community a worthwhile one? These are the questions with which we are concerned today.

Big Business

To understand the meaningfulness of the public assistance worker's job in the community, you will need to know a little about the Public Welfare Department. Public welfare today is big business. During the year 1959 the Boston Welfare Department will expend approximately forty million dollars. About thirty-seven million of that will be spent for relief—Old Age Assistance, Aid to Dependent Children, Disability Assistance and General Relief—the remainder, approximately three million dollars, will be spent for administration.

Let me make a point here, for you folks who are conscious of the costs of municipal government. Although the department will expend forty million dollars, the net cost to the City of Boston will be only about ten million dollars or approximately 25 per cent of the total cost. The balance will be paid by the state and federal governments. I say "only"—it still is a lot of money. So, you see, with an expenditure as large as that we must always be conscious of the taxpayers' money and whether it comes out of the federal pocket, the state pocket, or the local pocket, we have a serious obligation to be certain that it is properly expended. How does this affect the administration of the department? It very definitely imposes upon us the obligation to train our workers. In fact, we cannot afford not to train them.

Required Knowledge

What do the public assistance workers have to know, what basic knowledge is required for these persons who are going to spend the public's money? First of all, they must have a knowledge of the law under which the agency operates and of the basic structure of the agency. They must have knowledge of the eligibility requirements for services, financial and otherwise, of the agency, and knowledge of its policies and procedures. They must have knowledge of the rights and privileges, duties and responsibilities of the applicants or recipients and their relatives. They must have knowledge of the objectives of the various programs and the underlying philosophy under which they are administered. They must have a knowledge of social and economic factors. They need to be aware of the other programs in the community, such as social security, public housing, unemployment compensation, etc. They need to know something of the programs for the prevention of disease and for rehabilitation. They need to have an understanding of human behaviour. They need to be able to meet the applicant or recipient on his own ground and they need to cultivate a nonjudgmental attitude. They need to be able to recognize deviations from normal behaviour and to work with the client for his ultimate good and the welfare of the community.

Important Skills

Knowledge in itself is not sufficient. The public assistance workers also have to acquire certain skills to implement this knowledge. They have to acquire proficiency in interviewing, observing, recording, interpreting. They need to accustom themselves to working within the agency framework. They need to acquire skill in selecting those cases which need social services as well as financial services. They need to learn to manage their case-loads so that the requirements of the total job are met. They need to be able to interpret policies to the client and to the community and they also need to recognize the fact that certain policies are not workable and bring it back to the administration.

To help the public assistance workers to be the kind of workers that they are expected to be, you can readily see that we would have to have a staff development program. What is staff development?

Staff development is the result of conscious planning by an agency to provide through its administrative program for the continuing growth of individual staff members in an efficient and effective performance on the job. In other words, the ultimate purpose of staff development is to improve the quality of service rendered both clients and community by the agency.

In-Service Training

How do we do this? In various ways. We draw our staff from lists established by the Division of Civil Service as the result of competitive examination. This presupposes certain basic qualifications determined by Civil Service. Here is where our in-service training program actually begins. New social workers are assigned to an orientation program where, first of all, they are acquainted with the rules and regulations pertaining to personnel matters, such as attendance; sick leave and vacation privileges; probationary status for the first six months of employment; continued evaluation of their work performance; annual and longevity increments; eligibility for promotional examinations; participation in in-service training programs, and qualifications for educational leave. In a classroom setting they briefly review the history and philosophy of public welfare; they review the federal and state laws governing public assistance; they are given copies of the Employees Manual and of the Manual of Policies and Procedures and are instructed in their proper use. They learn the structure and organization of the department. They actually see the business end of the operation at central office by visits to various sections such as the record library, the aid audit section, where authorizations for relief originating with the social worker in the district office are processed; the IBM installation, where payrolls and checks are actually prepared. They are briefed on what is expected of them as social workers and the attitudes which they must cultivate. They discuss the interviewing process, its purpose, principles and methods. Case work concepts are briefly outlined and discussed. They are informed that their orientation will continue on a weekly basis over a period of some three or four months. They are advised that their in-service training will be continued after their assignment to the district office as social workers, through the very effective method of supervision of their day by day performance. They are advised that their work performance will be regularly and formally evaluated by their immediate supervisor at regular intervals.

What methods does the first line supervisor use in in-service training? First and most important is the individual conference between supervisor and worker which is usually on a weekly basis. There are staff meetings, both unit and general, where policy and procedure or changes in procedure are discussed. Staff members are also permitted to attend conferences on social work held at various times during the year. As part of our in-service training program we also offer institutes and seminars to selected staff members at various times during the year. Because the first line supervisors are the most important cog in the wheel, we have more or less concentrated on their development within the past few years.

Staff Development

Right here I would like to say a word about a part of our staff development program which is unique at least in Massachusetts. We have been fortunate in having as a member of our staff a former dean of one of the schools of social work who was able to give us much valuable advice in the selection of courses and even made it possible for us to benefit from courses given on a professional level at a school of social work. These courses were financed by a grant from the Hood Foundation expressly for the training of public welfare workers in the Boston Welfare Department. Many of our staff have profited by these excellent courses which have helped them in their daily work. Time will not permit my telling you of the type of courses or the number of staff members who have benefited by them—suffice it to say that they have proved of inestimable value in our staff development program.

While we are proud of our present staff development program we are not satisfied with it and we are helping to improve it each year so that it will be the constructive factor that it should be in helping us to discharge our obligation to our clients, the community in which we live, and the taxpayers who support the public assistance program.

"THE INSPECTOR"

By Edmund J. Morgan

According to the dictionary, the meaning of the word inspect is "to look closely into, to examine officially." There are many other possible and customary meanings, these two are the simple ones. The last, however, is for us the more pertinent. To examine "officially." That is the operative word. Inspection is an official examination necessary to implement a law or regulation. It is an extension of the police power of the state and its exercise presupposes that the inspector, whoever he may be, is qualified by training and experience to act, to evaluate work, and to recommend its acceptance or its rejection.

There are, obviously, certain requisites for the position of inspector. Briefly, they may be said to fall into the following categories:

1. Deportment and personality.
2. Training and experience.

Deportment and personality have been stressed because without them it is practically impossible for an inspector to do a good job. An inspector's value to the city or to any employer may easily be nullified if his manner is overbearing or his personality offensive.

An Ambassador

He is an ambassador of good will from the employer to the public. He should be prepared to conduct himself in a gentlemanly manner, to reflect credit upon his principal, to avoid an arrogant or insolent bearing. His personality should be cordial, his bearing friendly, and his manner helpful. Without these attributes a public servant's usefulness is seriously impaired; with them even an absence of full technical knowledge may sometimes be overlooked.

Training and experience in the particular field in which he operates are essential to any inspector who hopes to do a good job. Technical training should be a qualification of every inspector, but this should not be interpreted to mean school or academic training only. Craft training, learning on the job, still has its place. Theoretical knowledge cannot replace actual experience. The chief value of theoretical knowledge is in the scope; it covers many phases of a field of endeavor and in this day of specialization that is no small benefit. The chief danger in practical knowledge is that it is restrictive, limited. The day when a builder, for example, knew all phases of the building industry has long since vanished. We have today men who know well only a single phase of the building industry; they may know that phase thoroughly, but their knowledge is limited and circumscribed. There must be, of course, a balance between the practical and the theoretical. There is room in all lines for the student who is willing to dirty his hands and for the mechanic who is willing to "hit the books." Assuming that the inspector meets these requirements, and he should not be an inspector if he cannot meet them, we come to three more aspects of his work which implement his qualifications and abilities.

1. Procedure and methods.
2. Marking method of reports.
3. Securing compliance with his orders.

Role of Critic

It is not the function of an inspector to tell anyone how to do his job. I may qualify this somewhat by saying that it is not the function of a building inspector to tell anyone how to do his job. While I am most familiar with the duties of a building inspector I may say also that it is my opinion that this rule applies to practically all inspectors employed by public authorities. It is the function of the inspector to tell the person doing the job wherein his error lies, where the end product is deficient or defective, where the method errs. He is the critic of the end result, not of the means by which the result is obtained. To be able to criticize intelligently, however, he must be familiar with the various steps leading to the end result, he must know whether one method is superior to another. To do this he must be able to criticize intelligently, to evaluate work. He must know his materials and the methods. There is an orderly method of doing practically everything under the sun, there is a proper procedure. Effects are achieved with an economy of motion and material. The years have taught us that in the long run these means and methods are best, economical of men and material, and that the end product, whatever it may be, by the use of these methods and procedures, will stand up, will do what is required. The inspector, and this applies to any inspector, must learn thoroughly these methods and procedures. They are the efficient tools by which he does the job for which he is paid.

A Current Weakness

One great weakness in present-day inspection methods seems to be a general inefficiency in making reports. To determine whether an inspector is doing his job properly, to place his work in its proper perspective, to lay the foundation for the maintenance of records, and finally to protect the public and the property owner, it is essential to set up a proper system of records and reports and it is equally necessary to train the inspectors in their preparation and use. The installation of modern records has to a great extent reduced the amount of paper work formerly required of inspectors. Tabulated reports in which an inspector simply checks off in an appropriate column a "yes" or "no" has made much simpler what used to be a very onerous duty. It probably never will be possible, however, to eliminate completely the laboriously written reports that any well qualified inspector will make on the job, for his own protection and to get down in black and white what he has observed, to record it safely

Anyone who has ever been a witness in court will appreciate the value of having in his possession notes made at the time of an occurrence rather than attempting months later to recall what happened. In the building industry, for example, it is necessary to note the time of the inspection, the weather, the progress of the work, the number of persons employed, and any unusual circumstance.

Time and weather, for instance, are essential factors in the pouring of concrete. The failure of the member poured may not occur until some time later; it will be essential to know, however, when and under what circumstances the pour was made. The number of men employed may also be essential. A failure later may bring up the point of the number of persons who were engaged in that particular operation; were there sufficient men on the job to do it properly. The progress of the work at a particular date may also be essential, particularly in the case of an accident or a subsequent court case. It is needless to point out that an unusual circumstance may later turn out to have been of the utmost importance. If properly noted in the report the inspector may escape the imputation of being wise after the event.

Securing Compliance

The final phase of an inspector's duties is to secure compliance with his orders. On this one point hinges his effectiveness as an inspector. If he cannot compel—or better, persuade—persons to do what the law requires, his effectiveness is destroyed, his authority flouted, and he is an utterly useless employee. The most successful inspector is usually the one who rarely has to write a formal complaint and who seldom has recourse to the courts to enforce his mandates. An inspector who is properly qualified and trained, whose deportment is gentlemanly, who is sure of his facts and who knows how to present those facts to the public will not often have recourse to the courts. If he has a good reputation and is well trained, his evidence will be so palpably correct that it will be convincing to all but a small percentage of those with whom he comes in contact. A certain few persons are bound to cut corners. Some will want to save money at the expense of safety.

These few will require legal action to enforce the law. The inspector should take these steps only when every other remedy has failed. When, however, he takes the case to court he should press firmly and quickly to action. He should have a well-written report of the violation, he must see to it that adequate legal notice shall have been given to the violator, that this notice has been seasonable, that it contains a brief summary of the violation itself, the statute violated and, finally, the remedy. These last three points are essential to a proper legal complaint. He should buttress his case with a written statement of his findings at the time of the violation and the steps taken—or not taken—to remedy the condition. This report should be supported in most cases by photographs which will show more cogently than words precisely what is the basis of the complaint.

The courts usually are reasonable, the judges patient and desirous of knowing the facts. They have a natural reluctance to showing partiality, especially when a public servant is accusing someone of violating a law. The case, therefore, should be complete and tight. There should be no loopholes and, above all, the inspector should refrain from personal bias and prejudice. It is usually sufficient merely to recite the facts in the case, to present the evidence. The rest may safely be left to the court. It is a fact, almost invariably, that an inspector who goes reluctantly to court only after all other remedies have been exhausted will have, as time goes on, less and less difficulty in securing compliance with his requirements. He will gain in respect and stature, the violations will diminish and he will have trouble only with that small fraction of the citizenry that never wants to obey any law.

Upon assuming his duties the probationary inspector should be assigned to the office for a period of not less than two weeks. He should follow and become thoroughly familiar with the processing of applications, plans and complaints. He should have an adequate knowledge of the filing and recording operations. He should know where things are and why they are there, rather than elsewhere. He should work on the application desk, meet the public, listen to complaints, learn to be patient in getting the facts, and to be skillful in suggesting remedies. He should have at least a rudimentary knowledge of other departments and how their operations integrate with those of his home department. He should learn the "why" of doing things; it is not beyond the realms of possibility that he may see an easier and better way of doing something that previously had been done by routine. The impact of a fresh mind may sometimes work wonders.

After he has been thoroughly indoctrinated with office procedure, he should be sent into the field with an older and experienced inspector. He should be given an opportunity to view typical cases, varied in type and design, and he should be encouraged to ask questions, to seek knowledge. It is unlikely that he will be given one of the more important districts, but he should have an opportunity to see how they are operated. He should be given a chance to see the most elaborate forms of construction even if his inspection duties for some time to come will be on simpler types. In the acquisition of knowledge he should not be limited by his immediate prospects, he should take the larger view that no knowledge is wasted, it may "come in handy some day." Among the older and more experienced inspectors there are always some who will be natural teachers; to them should be entrusted the new men for a "breaking-in" period. It will be excellent training also for the new man to go to court with an inspector who is to prosecute cases. This will give him an opportunity to familiarize himself with court procedures, to gain a rudimentary knowledge of the process of law in enforcing code requirements.

It may reasonably be supposed that after two or three weeks in the office and five or six weeks in the field under the tutelage of an experienced man, the inspector will have learned his job, assuming that he came to it with some training and with proper qualifications. Nothing could be further from the truth. An intelligent and inquiring mind will never stop absorbing knowledge, a new fact can be learned every day. There will always be new methods and materials. The industry cannot stand still. There will always be new ways of meeting old problems. The construction industry, all industry in fact, is meeting new challenges every day. What is sensational today is commonplace tomorrow. Inspectors must be prepared to meet these constantly changing conditions.

Earlier I mentioned that a new inspector should know how the work of his own department integrates with that of other departments. This brings up the possibility of "cooperative inspections," a phase of municipal action that should be greatly developed. In investigations for the Urban Redevelopment Program we found that inspections by several departments could readily be made at the same time. This saved time, saved annoyance to the public, and secured a more efficient appraisal of the problems involved. We have scratched only the surface in this form of work. We should look into it more thoroughly and be prepared to develop the idea more fully.

In closing permit me to say that we are at the beginning of a new era for Boston. We have an opportunity to participate in something big for our city. Good inspection is the best safeguard for the city and its people. We can best get that kind of inspection by a properly trained and qualified corps of inspectors.

"THE ENGINEER"

By Frederick J. Garvin

Webster's dictionary logically, if cautiously, defines an engineer as one who practices engineering. A little further research into Webster reveals engineering as the art and science by which the properties of matter and the sources of power in nature are made useful to man in structures, machines, and manufactured products. For the purpose of my comments and with an apology to Webster, I would like to combine and simplify these definitions. I would describe an engineer as a person who efficiently uses material and knowledge in order to best serve his neighbor.

An Engineer's Obligation

In the service of the city are many engineers running the scale from trained experts to beginners. This diversified group, however great its difference in capabilities and responsibilities, has one common obligation. They can not be content to reach a plateau and then decide to rest on their laurels or, perhaps I should say, rest upon their civil service ratings. A man, especially a technically trained man, never completes his training. If he is a junior engineer, then in order to remain worthy of even that rating, he must improve by observation and study. This, of course, is the reason for having step rates in our pay schedules. Likewise the man at the top, civil service-wise, cannot indulge in the luxury of coasting. He must improve, keep abreast and even ahead of his time, in order to hold the respect of his fellow leaders and those whose work he supervises.

Departmental Workings

Our corps of trained engineers is relatively small in numbers but the result of their work is everywhere evident in our city. In order to throw a little light upon the variety of engineering duties required, it might be of interest to offer some general information about one complete department, namely, the Public Works Department. Also, it is helpful for all to get a glimpse of how the other fellow operates and to see what makes our city tick.

The PWD, as it is often called, was formed in 1911 by bringing about a merger of the Street, Water, and Engineering Departments. It consists of seven branches which, in alphabetical order, are the Automotive, Bridge, Highway, Sanitary, Sewer, Survey, and Water Divisions. Presiding over all of these is the Commissioner of Public Works and for each unit, a Division Engineer.

The Automotive Division has jurisdiction over all of the mechanical equipment which comprises over 450 vehicles of all kinds.

The Bridge Division has responsibility for eight drawbridges and forty-eight fixed bridges besides sharing the maintenance expense of a number of other bridges with railroads, neighboring towns, and the Metropolitan Transit Authority. In this division there are fourteen engineers.

The Highway Division, which oversees the construction and maintenance of streets and sidewalks, has 754 miles of streets in its charge. It controls our street lighting and each year issues thousands of street permits for street and sidewalk use and occupancy. Twenty-nine engineers are employed in this division.

The Sanitary Division supervises the collection and disposal of rubbish and garbage by contractors and, with city forces and equipment, does all of the street cleaning. Its engineering personnel consists of the Division Engineer and his assistant, the principal engineer.

The Sewer Division has built and keeps in working order 1,329 miles of surface drain and sewer pipes varying in size from 6-inch pipe to the Stony Brook Outlet measuring 13½ x 26 feet. In addition, they operated five pumping stations and the Moon Island storage and disposal system.

The Survey Division is in the nature of a service division. They make surveys and plans for new roads, changes in design of existing roads, sewer easements, and land takings for various departments. They also do all of the necessary engineering work for the Public Improvement Commission. This commission is an entity of its own, although most of its work is directly tied in with the work of the Public Works Department.

The Public Improvement Commission is composed of three members—a chairman, who is also the Commissioner of the Real Property Division, and two associates, the Commissioner of Public Works and the Traffic Commissioner. They hold public hearings and issue orders concerning new streets, changes called specific repairs and widenings, street and sewer assessments, and land takings. They also settle damage claims resulting from construction.

The Water Division has installed and maintains 1,100 miles of water pipe ranging from 4 inches to monsters of 48 inches. This division also has the care of 12,000 fire hydrants and 100,000 service lines into our homes and other buildings.

One hydra-headed creature that annually appears on schedule is the problem of handling the snow in the winter season. This becomes an all-department effort with engineers from the several divisions heading up the various snow districts. An endless amount of preparatory detail is necessary and, as has often happened, warm weather has started before all the aftermath problems of snow are disposed of.

Besides those in the Public Works Department, there are engineers in a number of other departments such as the Traffic, Park, Building, Assessing, and School Buildings Departments and also the Planning Board. In the interest of brevity, I am confining my remarks to the engineers of the Public Works Department with the belief that these comments concerning conditions and their possible improvement may equally well be applied to some degree to these other departments.

Present Conditions

In 1929, just 30 years ago, there were 138 engineers in the Public Works Department while today there are 111, a reduction of 20 per cent—this, despite the fact that, with the exception of fewer drawbridges, the department is faced with many more and varied responsibilities than heretofore.

At the present time there is no real planned training program for engineers within the department, other than what is absorbed by observation, the questioning of more experienced men and whatever effort is made by the individual to improve his lot.

Because of the fact that the rates of pay for beginners in engineering is higher in private industry and in the state service, the department has not been getting the trainees, the men in the lower grades. When the department does get a man with promise, our experience has been that after a short while he leaves for a better paying position elsewhere. Of course, the answer to this is obvious; raise the pay rates in all grades to the point of equalization with others.

In case this sounds simply like a pith to get more in salary all round at the further expense of our already financially shaken city, I hasten to add that not for one minute is this problem of proper compensation for services a one-way road.

Any and all deadwood must be revitalized or weeded out of the engineering ranks and to say that there is nobody in this category is denying reality. The old biblical saying that a man is worthy of his hire should and must apply but the man in this case must demonstrate his worth. Those in charge of men must see to it that they are kept busy on worth-while projects and that they keep businesslike hours. Careful planning and direction can produce the capable engineering force that is needed.

Suggestions to Follow

I would like to mention a few things that might help to improve output in the department. While each detail, in itself, may be insignificant, in total they should add up to noticeable results.

A man working on one phase of an engineering project should be informed as to what relation his particular assignment bears to the whole picture. This makes him part of a team, and teamwork is vital. The idea of teamwork can be expanded into a yearly department-wide meeting. At this time, those in positions of responsibility could review the happenings of the past year in relation to the department and outline the over-all program to come. The final phase of such a meeting could be a question and answer period to clear the air of any doubts or misunderstandings. Similar smaller division-wide meetings from time to time would be of advantage to promote the same teamwork feeling.

A good way to keep the employee acquainted with the whole picture, especially the man in the lower grades, is to occasionally exchange inside and outside men.

Speaking of the lower grades, up to and including junior civil engineer, I believe that consolidating all engineering work into one central engineering pool would help both the man and the department. Until a man reaches the upper grades of engineering he should not be labeled a highway man or a sewer man. Rather he should have some experience at all branches of departmental engineering and in this way he can best choose a specialized path to follow for more advanced work. This also should make coordination of the work of the several divisions more easily accomplished.

Since many heads are better than one, some form of the familiar suggestion box should be used within the department for ideas that might increase efficiency or save the city money. Along with this should go compensation for a good suggestion—if not financial, which might be difficult to arrange, then the granting of extra vacation or time off or a similar reward.

The rating of construction inspector should be eliminated in favor of an engineering rating for the same work. The work of this type of inspector is definitely engineering for the most part and he should have engineering training and the opportunity to advance in engineering grades as he qualifies. At present, the inspector is recruited from the ranks of the laborers and after reaching the title of inspector he is finished as far as further advancement is concerned except for the very few who become yard foremen or chief inspectors.

I have stressed equalization of pay and this will attract better men but since better men are first better youths, it is at this level that we should concentrate now to insure our future staff. We should get right into the high schools with literature and talks, aiming particularly at those schools which specialize in technical training. We should try to sell them the attractions of engineering as a career and especially the advantages of casting their lot with the City of Boston engineering service.

Finally in the line of little things to develop, we should expand our program of hiring teams of co-operative students from Northeastern University to work in our engineering departments. To a very minor degree, such a policy has been followed in the Highway Division for about ten years and I can vouch for the ability, drive and good example they show the other men. In order to employ these men, especially those who are not veterans, civil service would have to grant some sort of exception. It would seem logical to have civil service recognize that cooperative students are not likely to be on any list but that they certainly are qualified and as temporary employees and later, we hope, permanent employees, they would bring credit to the city.

Summing up these comments, it would be of mutual benefit to both the individual engineer working for the city and to the city as a whole, if concessions and changes were made by both for both. Better pay, certain improvements in working procedures and a feeling of belonging would keep the employee happier and more productive. The employee, in turn, must be a real engineer; he must produce first rate work and he must appreciate what he has and what he can attain and constantly work to enhance his city's reputation.

One of the great satisfactions to be gained from working as an engineer on any of the projects which make up the complex structure represented by our city is the knowledge that what we design and what we build is, for the most part, something of an enduring nature that, if done well, will serve our neighbor long after we have gone.

This satisfaction can be measurably increased if we, as engineers, always do nothing less than our very best. We then will have a feeling of pride in having contributed, even in a small way, to the growth of our wonderful city.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

January 5.

General Order No. 637.

A trial board, consisting of Captains Cornelius F. O'Brien, Dennis F. Dalton, and Herbert F. Mulloney, having heard by reference a complaint made by Joseph V. Saia, captain, commanding Division 14, against Patrolman John M. Ridge, Division 14, charging him with violation of the rules and regulations of the Police Department, has reported a finding of guilty, recommending punishment duty of 210 hours.

This recommendation is accepted, and it is ordered that the said Patrolman John M. Ridge perform 210 hours' punishment duty.

January 5.

General Order No. 638.

A trial board, consisting of Captains Cornelius F. O'Brien, Dennis F. Dalton, and Herbert F. Mulloney, having heard by reference a complaint made by John J. O'Keefe, captain, commanding Division 19, against Patrolman Francis J. Marszalek, Division 19, charging him with violation of the rules and regulations of the Police Department, has reported a finding of guilty, recommending punishment duty of 170 hours.

This recommendation is accepted, and it is ordered that the said Patrolman Francis J. Marszalek perform 170 hours' punishment duty.

January 6.

General Order No. 639.

Patrolman C. Joseph Celata, Division 14, is hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and is granted three days' additional vacation.

At about 1.45 on the morning of Thursday, December 31, 1959, while on a morning watch tour of duty and assigned to Routes 19 and 20, Patrolman C. Joseph Celata observed two youths cross Chestnut Hill avenue, from Embassy road to Chiswick road, then disappear from view. His suspicions aroused, Patrolman Celata made a diligent search of the area but was unable to locate them. He then stationed himself in the darkness near Chestnut Hill avenue and South street and kept the area under surveillance. At about 2 A.M., the two youths reappeared from behind a block of stores at Chestnut Hill avenue and Embassy road and not observing the officer hidden in the darkness, began to walk toward him. As they neared him, the patrolman ordered them to stop. They were identified as Michael D. Maguire, 18 years, single, of 111 Nottinghill road, Brighton, and Hayden S. Akerstrom, 18 years, single, 17 Gerald road, Brighton.

Observing that the pocket of the jacket worn by Maguire was bulging, the officer searched him and found a cloth bag partially filled with loose change, which the youth stated he had taken from his home. Not satisfied with this answer, the patrolman took the two subjects to the rear of the business establishments from the vicinity of which they had reappeared and found that the premises there had been tampered with.

After the above preliminary investigation, Patrolman Celata summoned assistance and the two subjects were removed to Station 14 for further questioning. After extensive interrogation, the two youths admitted that they had gained entrance to the Texaco Service Station at 303 North Beacon street by breaking a side window but that after searching the premises were unable to locate any money. They entered the Mobil Service Station at 211 North Beacon street through a rear unlocked window and there stole a moneybag containing about $9 in loose change. They then entered the Jenney Service Station, 480 Washington street, by breaking a window in a door. Here, after taking a sum of money from the cash register, they forced open the cigarette machine and removed about $23 in change and several packages of assorted brands of cigarettes. The J & S Service Station at 148 Chestnut Hill avenue was then entered by them. Here they gained entrance by breaking a door window and took from the cash register about $1 in pennies.

Recovered from locations where they had been hidden by the two youths were a brown paper bag containing the stolen cigarettes, a hacksaw with two blades, and the moneybag of change taken at the Jenney Station.

Michael D. Maguire and Hayden S. Akerstrom were arrested and booked as suspicious persons by reason of breaking and entering in the nighttime. Later on the same morning, December 31, in the Brighton District Court before Judge Charles J. Artesani, each was arraigned on four counts of breaking and entering in the nighttime and one count of having possession of burglarious tools, and held in $5,000 for the grand jury.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the devotion to duty displayed by Patrolman Celata in the above case. By his quick perception of the two subjects, his initiative in establishing surveillance, and his investigation of the area where he suspected they had been operating, this officer brought about the speedy solution of four service station breaks, with theft committed in three of them by two youths embarked on a career of crime.

BUILDING PERMITS HIT $92 MILLION IN 1959

The total value of new construction in Boston reached an all-time high of $92 million during 1959. The previous high year was 1925 when a total of $71 million worth of buildings were constructed.

Of last year's total $69 million is represented in permits issued by preliminary construction work on the Prudential Center. This left $22 million represented by other construction or alteration projects, the lowest total since the close of World War II.

Aside from the Prudential undertaking, four projects were started in 1959 which exceeded $1 million in cost. They were:

A public school in Roxbury, cost $1 million; a medical building for Boston University in the South End, cost $2.5 million; a library for Simmons College in the Back Bay, cost $1.6 million, and an apartment house on Beacon Hill, cost $1.7 million.

BOSTON RATED AS RELATIVELY SAFE AND HEALTHY

By comparison with other years, Boston was a relatively safe and healthy city during the year 1959.

Traffic deaths totaled fifty-two. This was two more than the number for 1958 when the lowest automobile fatality record in Boston's history was reported. The highest number of traffic deaths occurred in 1934 when one hundred forty-three persons were killed.

In representing a city which reported no deaths from polio last year, Mayor John F. Collins and his family were doubly grateful and proud this week in being named, on their own merit, the national "1960 March of Dimes Family of the Year." The Collins family went over to New York to receive the citation from Basil O'Connor, President of the National Foundation. The total number of polio cases in Boston last year was twenty-six. This was far below the annual average.

Tuberculosis, Boston's principal public health problem, was considerably arrested last year. The total was seventy-nine deaths as compared with one hundred eleven the year before, according to preliminary figures. In this connection, Dr. John H. Cauley, Boston's Health Commissioner, reports:

"The annual number of deaths due to tuberculosis has declined from four hundred ninety-nine in 1945 to seventy-nine last year. Even more encouraging is the fact that modern medicine has made it possible for most tuberculosis patients to live a normal life."

Preliminary figures further show that diphtheria and scarlet fever, once fearful killers of children, accounted for no deaths in Boston last year. Measles, typhoid fever, and whooping cough also chalked up zero totals.

Deaths from lobar pneumonia fell off to thirty-two from sixty in 1958. Fatal cases of bronchial pneumonia remained steady with three hundred ten in 1959, and three hundred twenty-four in 1958.

On the communicable disease chart, the only item to show an increase over the previous year was meningitis — seventeen deaths as compared with thirteen in 1958.

With all the recent talk about influenza, Boston reported no deaths from this disease in 1959 and only one death in 1958.

Commissioner Cauley's report further states:

¶ One of the city's proudest records has been its achievements in the field of maternal health. Although the birth rate is as high as it ever has been, deaths of mothers have consistently declined so that in recent years when more than 16,000 babies were born annually, only one or two maternal deaths are recorded each year. In 1957, for example, no deaths whatever from this cause were reported; whereas in 1945 there were twenty-five.

¶ Infant mortality has dropped considerably, but in recent years has remained consistent with approximately one death for every forty infants born. Of four hundred infant deaths per year, two hundred seventy-five babies die within a week of birth.

¶ The average Bostonian can expect a life span of seventy years, but more intensive effort is required to prevent accidental death or injury to children.

Nineteen fifty-nine showed the lowest number of traffic accidents reported in five years, the totals for the period being, 1959, 12,744; 1958, 13,205; 1957, 13,391; 1956, 14,701, and 1955, 14,058.

Among the fifty-two traffic fatalities last year, thirty-two were pedestrians, eight were operators of motor vehicles, and six were occupants. Personal injury accidents totaled 11,524 involving 17,153 injured persons. Pedestrians injured totaled 1,353 and the number of property damage accidents reported was 1,169.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEE BENEFITS SUBJECT OF PANEL TALKS

"Are municipal employee benefits equal or superior to those offered by private industry?"

This was the subject of the third panel discussion at the fourth annual Conference on Municipal Administration held on November 19 and 20 at the Boston Public Library Auditorium.

Moderator of the panel was William H. Eastman, Second Vice-President of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company.

The panelists were:

William V. Ward, President, American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO. Subject, Union Benefits.

Paul L. Carty, Executive Officer, Boston Retirement Board. Subject, Retirement Benefits.

Thomas L. McCormack, Workmen's Compensation Agent, Law Department. Subject, Workmen's Compensation.

David W. Frost, Blue Cross-Blue Shield Representative. Subject, Health Insurance.

Frank P. McDonough, Assistant Supervisor of Personnel, City of Boston. Subject, Municipal Employment Benefits.

REMARKS OF MODERATOR OPENING

Research into human behavior has shown repeatedly that 65 per cent of all we learn in life comes to us through our ears—in other words, by listening. Despite this, during our school years, most of the emphasis is on reading. And it is a poor school system in this day and age which does not have a "reading clinic" and remedial reading classes. So far as I know, none have "listening clinics" and remedial listening classes.

One of the current trends in business today (we have them at J. H.) is to offer classes in "speeded reading." These are designed to help busy management people get through the increasing volumes of paper work required of them. I am quite sure executives do not need a course in "speeded listening." In fact, this may be one of their problems. But I am equally sure many of us could learn a lot more about "How to Listen." And then, if we would only practice it—make ourselves more effective in our jobs,

FOURTH OF A SERIES

This is the fourth of a series of seven installments which will completely cover the two-day Conference sessions of 1959.

more effective in our interpersonal relationships.

Other psychological research has revealed that the average child of five or six years will ask approximately four hundred questions a day. I am sure this comes as no surprise whatsoever to any parents who may be present.

You see, this is how children learn, and at age five or six, literally the only means available to them. It would appear, if we believe the psychologists, the thirst for knowledge in the young is limitless—unending.

The innocence of youth allows for a ceaseless, uninhibited questioning of the wonderful world in which they live—so new to them, so old and tired to us. The young have acquired no prejudices, except possibly for spinach and apricots. They haven't learned yet that certain things are taboo, and that nice people just don't talk, and especially ask questions, about certain things.

So they go merrily on their way until parents, first, then teachers, then the whole world, it seems, resists their efforts to know "why." Resists to the point where so very many, so very often, no longer feel the urge to ask.

We must admit the blame cannot be placed all on one side. It is a perfectly normal human reaction for a hurried parent, after the 394th question (which incidentally just might be the most important one for that day) to say in exasperation: "Oh, for Heaven's sake, why don't you go watch television!"

Most of us, to begin with, are completely unaware when we do this that we are blocking a basic educational process. Then, too, we can easily rationalize it away by saying to ourselves: "The question was stupid anyway—everybody knows where babies come from, and if the little darling doesn't, he will learn soon enough." Or, as most of us do, plead: "I just haven't got time," or "I'm too tired."

But let's take a critical look. When you don't have the patience or the time, you have started the development of a process which never stops—the dulling of the desire to learn, to know, to find out just a few of the "whys" which surround us.

Next, by excusing ourselves on the grounds the question was stupid, we accomplish nothing more than the exposure of our own stupidity. Because what is perceived to be stupid to us as adults, may, in fact, be of major importance to a child.

It may seem unimportant to us to brush off one question of a child—especially that child who is standing at a bedside at 6 A.M. on a Sunday morning wanting to know what makes Daddy snore so loud and why don't people get up—it's light already. But if the parents, so inclined, are followed by a teacher here and there who answers questions by saying, "That's what the book says" and a boss here and there who answers questions with the statement, "You aren't paid to ask questions—just do what you are told"—we often have an adult who doesn't dare ask questions, who no longer thirsts for knowledge, who is willing to accept rumors, half-truths, and gossip as fact.

And don't think, ladies and gentlemen, it doesn't happen. Beyond any doubt, any one of you can recall a recent experience when you have been brushed off—pushed aside when you sought knowledge, or tried for understanding on a problem which however real to you was regarded by someone else as not worth answering. And then, if we are honest, we can also recall we did the brushing off ourselves when someone came to us.

Perhaps some of you are saying along about now, "That's good theory this guy is spouting up there, and maybe he's even right. But let's get practical. We just don't have time to answer all of the questions some of these stupid—er I mean—these enlightened citizens ask."

All right, let's be practical.
Let's take the child again.

What's the quickest, fastest way to satisfy his curiosity, prevent him from developing frustrations and inhibitions—but beyond all else, get him off the back of your neck? Answer the question. At least you will get a few minutes peace until he finds something else he doesn't understand.

But if you don't answer it, what happens? Well, let's take the illustration we used before and see what happens.

"Daddy, where do little babies come from?

Oh, for Heaven's sake, go watch television.

Why?

Daddy is tired.

Why?

Well,—I had a hard day at City Hall.

Why?

Oh, just because.

Because why?

Because my boss was mad, that's why.

What's a boss?

Ask your mother.

Is she a boss?

Are you kidding?"

I will spare you the remaining details, because madam wife heard the last four questions and answers and junior couldn't get a word in edgewise after that.

The point is, usually, it takes more time and you get into more trouble if you don't answer questions than if you do.

It is my firm belief that it is a heavy responsibility on all of us to answer as honestly and completely as we can the questions of those who come to us seeking knowledge and understanding. It is equally our responsibility to ask questions about those things we do not understand. Because unless we know, or go to the trouble of finding out, we create problems for ourselves and all those around us.

Dr. Herbert True, who used to teach at Notre Dame, says, "People who don't know and know they don't know, ask questions. But people who don't know and don't know they don't know—man—we'll have trouble with them forever."

Our speakers today will discuss with you a number of topics about which all of us ought to know more, I am sure. It is their job to inform. I believe it is yours, having listened to their remarks, to ask questions so you can walk out of this meeting better informed—and with a greater understanding of these areas of interest.

UNION BENEFITS

By William V. Ward

The history of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees AFL-CIO and its affiliated local unions of Boston city employees dates back to early 1942, when the employees themselves came to our organization asking to be organized. Other unions had existed in the city service prior to that time, but were only of short duration. Our organization has carried on for almost twenty years.

The conditions we encountered in Boston when we first organized were most discriminatory. At that time laborers were receiving a weekly wage of $30 and working a five and one half day week. Per diem employees in the labor service were given no sick leave. Further discriminations were revealed where favorites of the bosses were paid for absence because of illness, while those who were not in the good graces of the superiors were obliged to sacrifice their wages.

One of the first programs initiated by the union was to equalize the wages of all employees for comparable work. In other words, all who performed the job of laborer received the same wages. Through legislation at the State House, which required acceptance by the City Council and the Mayor, under the term of Mayor Kerrigan, both sick leave and more liberal vacations were granted, vacations being based upon seniority and length of service. Up to that time all employees received only two weeks. This was changed to give three weeks after ten years of service and four weeks after twenty years of service.

Conditions at the Boston City Hospital, Long Island Hospital, and the Sanatorium, where split shifts existed, were our chief problem, but through enabling legislation and further acceptance by the City Council and the Mayor, the work week was limited to eight hours in nine.

Prior to the existence of the union in Boston any overtime work was to be repaid by compensatory time, with no actual cash payment. Upon investigation we found some men who had worked on snow removal and who had accumulated hundreds of days, for which no reimbursement was being paid. Again, enabling legislation and further acceptance by the City Council and Mayor provided for overtime payments, so that now all employees receive wages or salaries for hours in excess of their regular work day or work week.

During the existence of the union in Boston many improvements have been made in the retirement and pension privileges. The 4 per cent plan, unique to Boston, was ineffective. Upon the adoption of the 5 per cent plan, such as for the state and its various political subdivisions, many people in Boston now receive greater benefits than were possible under the 4 per cent plan. In fact, some receive 100 per cent more than they would have received under the old pension system.

One of the greatest accomplishments by the union was the setting up of machinery for the processing of grievances which came to be known as the Mayor's Labor-Management Committee and under Mayor Curley, with the help of former City Auditor Charles Fox, a plan was developed where three department heads appointed by the Mayor and three representatives elected by the union would sit as a judicial body for any appeals that might be made to them relative to grievances that had not been settled at the department level. At the beginning many appeals were made to this Board. The Mayor was chairman ex-officio and only stepped in if there was a deadlock by management and labor. Only once did a deadlock of this kind develop and Acting Mayor John B. Hynes ruled in favor of the employee. This was the first Labor-Management Committee for public employees and was hailed throughout the nation. While it is still in existence the very fact of its existence has lessened the number of appeals before the Board. The department heads are now inclined to handle their problems in a much more equitable manner.

The local unions of Boston city employees, through the Boston Council and the Massachusetts State Council, have endorsed and supported every reasonable plan for economy. The union, after much deliberation and study, endorsed a plan under Mayor Hynes to reorganize the various departments. The union also accepted and endorsed a classification plan which resulted in more equity in the wages and duties of municipal employees.

The record of the union over the last eighteen years in Boston shows greater progress than was made in the three hundred years prior to the existence of the union. While the wages of per diem laborers in 1941 and 1942 was $30 a week for a five and one half day work week, under the latest increase this same group now receive $73.75 a week for a five-day week, with guaranteed sick leave of 15 days a year and more liberal vacations and pension system.

I report more gains than in the past three hundred years of Boston history. Even while we express our gratitude for progress that has been made, much more remains to be done. Boston lags behind, in wages and other fringe benefits, many of the metropolitan cities and towns, or contrasted to Brookline, where laborers receive $80 a week as to $73.35 for Boston. A good many others exceed $75. While we're closing the gap, those in private industry continue to obtain much greater benefits and gains and also fringe benefits. Our immediate objective in Boston is to try to obtain the acceptance of section 32b of the General Laws which provides for a combination life insurance and hospitalization program, one half to be paid by the city and one half by the employee, with dividends accruing to the city, so that the cost of such a program will be less expensive to the city than it will be to the employee. State employees now enjoy this and many cities and towns also have this additional fringe benefit which Boston lacks. In the face of constantly rising hospital costs, without such a plan or a program an employee of modest means would very well expend a lifetime's savings when faced with serious illness in his family.

Our union is a no strike organization. It merely presents an opportunity for employees of the city to get together among themselves, outline their grievances, set up their program, and through the orderly process of committee work bring their case to the Mayor and the City Council and the School Committee. Our relations with the Mayor and the department heads have been most cordial. While we have always tried to cooperate we have found that a similar degree of cooperation has been extended to our membership.

The value of unions of public employees is well established, but it requires constant vigilance upon the part of all the employees, the administration, and the department heads to keep ahead of the rapidly rising cost of our economy.

RETIREMENT BENEFITS

By Paul L. Carty

A sound contributory retirement system is essential to a progressive personnel policy in public employment or private employment. All bases of employment contracts between union and management depend largely on a beneficial pension plan. You can appreciate then, that a good retirement plan is of vital importance. It is generally agreed that we, employees of the City and County of Suffolk, have the most beneficial retirement system.

Unlike many other retirement systems, we are able to take advantage of an early retirement from age fifty-five and upward; or, if we are under age fifty-five and have at least twenty years of service, or if we have had thirty years of service, we are guaranteed a percentage of our salary, $33\frac{1}{3}$ per cent, plus an annuity which our own contributions with interest will purchase. Many members have taken advantage of these provisions and have then taken outside employment.

Investigate Your Status

However, these benefits I have just quoted apply only to members of the 5 per cent State-Boston Retirement System. Therefore, to those who are in the 4 per cent or Boston Retirement System and who are not veterans, we urge them to please contact the office of the Retirement Board concerning their potential benefits. There are about three hundred employees in the 4 per cent system who should be in the new system (5 per cent) since their benefits will be much greater in that system. No matter how good the retirement law is, if you do not take advantage of its benefits, you are likely to be disappointed in the amount of retirement allowance when you come to retire. This is especially true, concerning the new provisions for survivorship benefits should the member die before retirement. The widow and children of a 5 per cent member are covered generously by the provisions of this new law. In the new retirement system a major change was made in 1957, namely, the formula method for determining your retirement allowance. This law provides that a member who began employment at about twenty years of age may retire at sixty years of age with 80 per cent of his salary, with certain limitations. Before this change in the law was made, he first had to attain age sixty-five in order to receive a substantial retirement allowance. Now, his years of service are rewarded, notwithstanding his age. You can readily see that under these conditions, with all the deductions we now have from our salary for taxes and the expense of coming to work, your net income will be the same if you wish to take advantage of an earlier retirement.

If the city had not accepted the provisions of the State Retirement Law, we would be operating under the old 4 per cent system and would not enjoy the liberal retirement allowances we now have.

However, if too liberal benefits are provided without consideration to the cost of these changes, we might very well be the losers.

Recently, a Retirement Law Commission was established by the Legislature. This commission is required to process and make reports on all pending legislation concerning changes in the retirement law relative to the effect and cost to the state and city of these changes. The commission is composed of both governmental and private employees.

Status of Veterans

At this point, I would like to clarify one of the most misunderstood and misapplied provisions of the retirement law, the so-called Veterans' Retirement section.

If an employee is a veteran and his service with the City of Boston or County of Suffolk first began before July 1, 1939, whether or not he is in the 4 or 5 per cent system, he is eligible to retire as a veteran. However, he must first meet the following conditions: with thirty years of service he may retire and no certification of disability is required. He may also provide a survivorship allowance for his wife by reducing the amount of pension he would receive. He will also be refunded his contributions and interest from the Retirement System. In this connection, I urge all veterans to establish their record of employment with us or their own departments if they have not already done so. He may retire if he has ten years of service but less than thirty years, if he is certified by a panel of three physicians that he is unable to work any longer because of his physical disabilities. Under this provision of the law, he is not allowed to provide a survivorship payment for his wife, since he has less than thirty years of service.

Unfortunately, many veterans in the 4 per cent system are not eligible for any veteran benefits since their service began after July 1, 1939. I strongly urge that the personnel officers of their respective departments advise them to come to this office to check their status. Many notices were sent to these employees but I regret to state they have not responded to them.

In the 5 per cent system a veteran who began service after July 1, 1939, has special benefits concerning ordinary disability retirement provided he has ten years of creditable service. Further benefits on straight service retirements are provided for veterans up to $300 a year.

It is important that all members establish their service with the Retirement Board whether or not they are veterans.

Additional Annuity

In the new system an employee may supplement his regular retirement allowance by purchasing what is known as an "Additional Annuity." The amount of this annuity is based on the value of the funds at the time of retirement and the member's age.

A member who is under fifty-five years of age and is not a veteran can retire after fifteen years of service if he is physically unable to work. This is called Ordinary Disability Retirement. The member may not provide a survivorship payment under this type of retirement.

Accidental disability retirement is allowed if a member is physically disabled from employment by virtue of an accident or hazard undergone during his employment. The amount payable is two-thirds of his salary plus an annuity, and $312 per year for each child under age eighteen who is unmarried or over age eighteen if mentally or physically unable to support himself.

An accidental death benefit is payable in the case of a member who dies as the result of an accident incurred or hazard undergone in employment and the amount payable to the widow is two-thirds of his salary plus an annuity and $312 for each child under eighteen who is unmarried or over age eighteen if mentally or physically unable to support himself, plus a return to the widow of the member's accumulated deductions with interest.

May I earnestly urge all members of either system to come to or contact the Retirement Board, Room 30, City Hall, if you have any questions regarding pensions. Only by the employee taking an interest in his benefits can he be best protected, for himself and his family.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

By Thomas L. McCormack

The subject of Workmen's Compensation Insurance is rarely thought of except by some injured employee or some family who has had a member injured or killed at work.

Although we have thousands of employees in the country killed each year as a result of work accidents and many millions of workers suffering temporary incapacities for varying periods of time, few except the injured parties show any interest.

Back in the days of rural and agricultural life, serious injuries was relatively few. The relationship between worker and employer was closer. If the house servant was injured the master out of human sympathy often provided doctors, financial help, and a readjusted job. If the employer or master did not help the employee the only recourse was to sue the employer in the regular common-law courts. Here the employee would often wait two or more years for a jury trial and his lawyer would have to show negligence on the part of the employer. If the employer could show contributory negligence on the part of the employee or that the injury was caused by a fellow employee or that the employee had assumed the risk of employment, there was no recovery. The fellow servant defense by the employer was particularly harmful to workers. In those days it was usually a fellow worker who caused the injury, not the boss himself, so by staying away from employees the boss could avoid liability for all injuries to his employees.

It is understandable that 80 per cent of all cases were lost by employees and the few that did win were obliged to spend a substantial portion of the award for lawyers' fees, doctors' bills, and other expenses.

With the advent of the factory system and high speed industry, large numbers of workers were brought in close proximity with danger, and the workers and union representatives clamored for relief. The workers wanted an entirely new system to protect them when injured at work.

In 1884, Germany had evolved the idea of Workmen's Compensation legislation. Work injuries for the first time were compensated, not on the basis of negligence but on their relation to the job. In 1897 England had enlarged the German idea, and had abolished the common law and its amendments and established an entirely new theory—that of Workmen's Compensation. Liability depended not on who was at fault for the accident, but on whether it arose out of the employment, while the worker was engaged therein. English legal minds evolved the phrase "personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment" as the basis of awards. To laymen this simply meant that if the worker was injured at work because of his work he would obtain a certain percentage of his wages during periods of injury-enforced idleness, plus medical care at the employer's expense.

From 1902 onward many legislators worked for a similar change of law in this country. They argued that the mechanization of the country had made injuries inevitable; that industry and not charity or savings should pay for industrial injuries; that a simple justice required the abolition of the old common-law defenses for industrial injuries.

"Legislate as we may . . . for safety devices the army of the injured will still increase, the price of our manufacturing greatness will have to be paid in human blood and tears. To speak of the common-law personal injury action as a remedy for this problem is to jest with a serious subject."

A new system was needed, and one that would also help in accident prevention and rehabilitation. Commissions sprang up in many states to study the idea. Massachusetts debated the question for nine years, and finally passed its compensation law in 1911.

The Workmen's Compensation Act was a humanitarian measure enacted because of a belief that previous remedies had failed to give adequate relief to employees, for personal injuries arising out of their employment commensurate with risks demanded by modern conditions and to make the industry that was responsible for the injury, bear a major part of the burdens resulting therefrom. It meant to make liability dependent on the relationship to the job in a liberal fashion with litigation reduced to a minimum.

The Workmen's Compensation Law of Massachusetts became effective July 1, 1912, and was submitted to the voters of the several cities, counties, and towns of the Commonwealth as permissive legislation, by chapter 807 of the Acts of 1913, and was accepted by the voters of the City of Boston applicable to laborers, workmen, and mechanics employed by the city.

The Legislature, by permissive legislation (chapter 403 of the Acts of 1936), afforded opportunity to the political subdivisions of the Commonwealth to extend its acceptance of the Workmen's Compensation Law to include all other employees, except members of a police or fire force, regardless of the nature of their work, to such extent as the city, acting through the City Council shall determine, as evidenced by a writing filed with the then Department of Industrial Accidents, now the Division of Industrial Accidents under the State Labor Department.

The city accepted the provisions of the later statement on April 1, 1946, that now all employees of the city except uniformed members of the police and fire forces are subject to the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Law.

The obligations of the city to pay the benefits under the Workmen's Compensation Law have greatly increased since its original acceptance of that law by reason of two factors, namely:

1. The great increase in the amount of compensation payable and the unlimited medical benefits which must be provided or paid for; and

2. The city's acceptance of the law to include all employees permitted thereunder.

The original weekly benefit in 1913 was two-thirds of the average weekly wages, but not more than $10 a week for four hundred weeks and the medical benefits were limited to a period of two weeks except in unusual cases. There was no such thing as an unusual case in practical effect; the provision was purely theoretical. The weekly benefit has been increased by the Legislature from $10 through the years until it is now a maximum of $45 for temporary total incapacity and can even reach that rate for a temporary partial incapacity.

The original maximum was $3,000 as the entire money payment in any case. This maximum was successively increased to $4,000 in 1914, to $4,500 in 1927, to $7,500 in 1945, to $10,000 in 1946, to $14,000 in 1959, the present maximum; this applies only to a case which is less than permanent and total. The Legislature passed the permanent and total incapacity provision, chapter 364, Acts of 1935, so that today an employee who is permanently and totally incapacitated may receive compensation for life.

The payment of dependency compensation to the dependents of an employee who dies as a result of his injury have greatly increased. Originally the law limited them to $4,000, including what had been paid the employee during life. The weekly payments to such dependents have increased as well as the total maximum now payable. The present ceiling is a period of four hundred weeks or $14,000, whichever is reached first, but the $14,000 is not the absolute maximum. Today, after a widow has been paid her maximum benefit of $14,000, if it is found that she is physically or mentally unable to support herself she then may be entitled to compensation benefit for life. Payments are made for children until they reach the age of eighteen. A child who is physically or mentally incapacitated from earning may receive payments for life.

Originally the employee did not have the right to choose his own physician or hospital; he has had the right to make such choice since 1917. Physicians' fees have increased as well as hospital fees. The basis of hospital charges today is "the all inclusive per diem cost per patient," and the per diem rates today run as high as $35.

In addition to providing the benefits of Workmen's Compensation to injured employees this division also has a pre-employment examination of every temporary and permanent appointment for employment in the City Government. There have been a few instances in the past where the city has been obligated to provide Workmen's Compensation where it might have been avoided had physical examination been completed before employment.

In conclusion I should like to impress on employees the importance of filing accident reports when injuries occur. The Workmen's Compensation is a division of the Law Department established for the sole benefit of the employee, and the Workmen's Compensation agent and the employees of this division are vitally interested in the welfare of the employee.

As Workmen's Compensation agent I am obligated by chapter 152 of the General Laws, our Workmen's Compensation Act, to provide the benefits of this act to all City of Boston and Suffolk County employees, and to construe the act liberally and wherever there is a doubt to resolve it in favor of the employee. In order to do this we must have the cooperation of the department and division heads as well as other employees in seeing to it that reports of injuries, no matter how small or large, are promptly forwarded to us for investigation or action.

HEALTH INSURANCE

By David W. Frost

The prepayment concept for hospital-medical care originated in Dallas, Texas, in 1929, when a group of school teachers agreed to pay $6 a year, in advance, for full coverage of any bills which they might incur at the Baylor University Hospital. When this program proved to be highly successful, the prepayment idea spread rapidly, especially during the depression years. The Blue Cross-Blue Shield symbols were soon adopted to identify these non-profit community service organizations.

Massachusetts Blue Cross was chartered in 1937 and Blue Shield followed just five years later in 1942. From a very modest enrollment in these early years, Blue Cross-Blue Shield experienced a period of phenomenal expansion and at present more than two million residents are members.

The vast majority of the Blue Cross-Blue Shield members in Massachusetts are enrolled through a group plan where they are employed. Employers customarily include insurance coverage in their fringe benefit program and the employer who neglects to contribute at least part of the premium cost is at a decided disadvantage in today's highly competitive labor market.

More than 125 of the 351 cities and towns in Massachusetts now provide coverage for their employees through chapter 32B of the Massachusetts General Laws. Statistics prove that when a municipality shares equally in the cost of the insurance program, many employees enroll, who previously rejected the coverage because of the cost. State-wide, the over-all acceptance ratio is 92 per cent for those cities and towns with chapter 32B coverage. Compare this with an acceptance ratio of roughly 55 per cent in the City of Boston where the employees voluntarily subscribe and pay the full cost themselves!

Poor participation generally leads to higher rates because the ratio of insured poor risks to good risks is unusually high. Further, those people without coverage may well become a burden to the city, by seeking charity care at the City Hospital.

Chapter 32B has been widely accepted and it is anticipated that within the next few years virtually all municipalities will offer this fringe benefit to their employees. Compared to general salary increases it is particularly attractive in that the cost to the city or town is moderate.

* Of the more than 125 cities and towns which have coverage through chapter 32B all but five have selected Blue Cross-Blue Shield to cover the hospital-medical-surgical portion of their insurance program. They realize that Blue Cross-Blue Shield group coverage offers some very important advantages to their employees.

What Are These Advantages?

1. It Costs Less—The employee pays less for his coverage through a group, mainly, because he is not considered a risk by himself. The cost of a claim which he incurs is not applied to his own individual premium, but, rather is pooled with all claims sustained by members of the group, and then these claims are weighed against the premium paid by all members of the group. It is assumed that over a period of time there will be enough premium to offset the claims paid to those who required health care and in most groups this is true.

Another reason the employee pays less is that it costs Blue Cross-Blue Shield far less to sell, underwrite, and administer the plan through a group. For example, in billing alone there is a considerable saving. In a group of 10,000 people, only one monthly bill is required and this is processed routinely. If these same 10,000 people had individual policies, a separate bill would have to be mailed to each home and then processed individually.

2. Ease of Payment—The second advantage to the employee with group coverage is the ease of payment.

Those subscribers who have Blue Cross-Blue Shield on direct payment must pay on a quarterly basis. The $15 Blue Cross coverage with Plan "B" Blue Shield costs a family subscriber $40.75 per quarter and he must pay this either by check, money order, or a personal visit to the Blue Cross-Blue Shield office.

Compare this with the group subscriber who generally pays only $12.45 per month for the same coverage, and has this amount conveniently deducted from his pay check. Further, he does not worry about getting the money in on time, since the remittance is handled by the group. Many groups make it even easier for their employees by deducting on a semi-monthly or a weekly basis.

3. Broader Benefits—The third advantage enjoyed by the group subscriber is that he has broader coverage.

The nongroup subscriber is allowed up to forty (in some cases thirty) days of hospital or medical care, whereas, the group member is allowed up to one hundred twenty for these same services.

Further, the maximum coverage which a nongroup subscriber can carry is $15 Blue Cross and Plan "B" Blue Shield. The group member has a wide choice of plans, including $15, $18, $20, or more, per day toward hospital room and board charges. If his group qualifies he may also have either of two major medical plans—the Prolonged Illness Certificate or Master Medical Plan.

4. No Health Restrictions—The fourth advantage in having a group membership is that the applicant will be accepted without an examination.

It is not even necessary for a group applicant to complete a health questionnaire. The only conditions to acceptance are that he is a full-time employee, who works thirty hours or more per week, and that provisions are made for payroll deduction. The new applicant is eligible for many benefits on the effective date of the contract and receives the full benefits of the coverage after the membership has been established for twelve months.

Nongroup subscribers are required to complete a health questionnaire and may have a permanent restriction attached to their membership for a chronic or pre-existing condition.

5. Pension Benefits—The fifth advantage is that Blue Cross-Blue Shield can be retained in the group even after the employee retires, providing the group is of sufficient size and has a formal pension plan.

Why Blue Cross?

Since it can be readily established that group coverage is far superior to nongroup, the next question is that of selecting the right insurance carrier. Why Blue Cross instead of an insurance company?

We must first emphasize the point that Blue Cross-Blue Shield is not just another insurance company. It is a nonprofit community service, specializing in the field of hospital-medical-surgical protection. The basic tenet of Blue Cross-Blue Shield is to provide the best possible coverage, at reasonable rates, to the entire community.

Further, Blue Cross-Blue Shield has certain unique features which set it apart from the insurance companies.

Some of these unique features are:

1. Service Benefits—Blue Cross members who occupy a ward or semiprivate room are covered in full for most vital extra services, such as the operating room, medications, laboratory, X-rays, etc. The insurance companies generally assign a dollar limit to these extra services which would be used up early in an extended case.

Blue Shield members who earn less than a specified income level are guaranteed that the doctor will accept the Blue Shield fee as payment in full for most medical-surgical procedures. Other insurance companies can duplicate the fee schedule, but they cannot duplicate this coverage in full agreement.

2. Coverage Is Transferable—Blue Cross-Blue Shield can be transferred from the group plan to direct payment or to another group if the member should change his place of employment. Of primary importance is the fact that he is not subjected to additional waiting periods during these changes. To make it easier for the subscriber, Blue Cross-Blue Shield automatically bills him at home when notification is received that he has terminated his employment.

Most insurance plans cancel the employee's coverage when he terminates. Those companies which have a conversion privilege require the member to apply for continuation of the coverage in writing within thirty days of termination. The cost of the coverage which is offered is often prohibitively high, since, in most instances, it is based on the subscriber's attained age. The coverage is always cut back.

3. Coverage from Birth to Death—Blue Cross-Blue Shield coverage is available to a member all during his life. The coverage is never canceled because of age or sickness.

Insurance companies commonly exclude from coverage those conditions which appear in the first fourteen days following birth. As a general rule, their coverage is severely curtailed or canceled when the member reaches an age when he is no longer considered an acceptable risk.

4. Cost Control—Blue Cross-Blue Shield has certain cost control factors which work to the advantage of the member and the employer. As previously explained, the contractual arrangement with participating doctors assures the Blue Shield "service benefit" member that he will not have to pay an additional bill for covered services. The contractual arrangement with participating hospitals provides a formula whereby the hospitals are reimbursed at cost for the "paid in full" included extra services.

The patient who does not have Blue Cross coverage would have to pay billed hospital charges for these same extra services. Insurance companies always reimburse on the basis of billed charges.

In short, the subscriber who uses Blue Cross for hospital protection is purchasing the services, other than room and board, at cost, not billed charges.

5. Acceptance—Another unique feature of Blue Cross-Blue Shield is its ready acceptance by hospitals and doctors. No other plan can convey the feeling to the member that he has a "credit card" for required health services.

Rate Increases

The limited time which we have prohibits a deep analysis of any one topic. However, there is one more subject which should be explored briefly, that of rate increases and the reasons for them.

Rate increases fall into two categories:

(A) General

(B) Individual group surcharges

A. The general rate increase affects all subscribers equally. In Blue Cross these increases are generally the result of greater usage by the over-all membership plus higher payments to the hospitals. If Blue Cross did not adjust its payment formula to the hospital each year, it would not have been possible to maintain an adequate level of coverage. The rates charged in 1949 were based on the cost of hospitalization in that year, but certainly not for the year 1959. The most recent general Blue Cross rate increases were in 1952 and 1957.

Blue Shield rate adjustments reflect greater usage by the over-all membership plus an increase in the doctor's fee schedule. There has been no general rate increase by Blue Shield since 1952.

B. Surcharge—The surcharge is a temporary rate increase which affects only one specific group. An analysis is made each year of groups with more than seventy people to determine the ratio of premium collected to losses paid. If the losses paid approach the total premium, the group is surcharged to the level necessary to bring the loss ratio back to normal. If the experience should improve satisfactorily, the surcharge would be removed. Since these groups are taxed for poor experience, Blue Cross has a discount program to reward those groups who enjoy good experience.

Massachusetts Blue Cross-Blue Shield is recognized as one of the most progressive plans in the country, having pioneered in the field of major medical insurance with the Prolonged Illness Certificate and Master Medical Plan. Massachusetts Blue Cross-Blue Shield also has one of the lowest operating costs which means that about ninety-five cents out of every dollar is available for subscribers' benefits.

Yet, there are serious problems to be faced. The most important concern for the future will be how to maintain reasonable rates, while fulfilling the obligation of adequate coverage in an era of spiraling hospital-medical costs. This problem, with others which are similar, will have to be faced with courage and the conviction that the decisions reached are in the best interests of the whole community.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYMENT BENEFITS

By Frank P. McDonough

On the occasion of the First Conference on Municipal Administration in November, 1956, as a member of the panel on the Administration of Personnel Programs of a Large Municipality, it was my assignment to speak on the advantages of a classification and compensation plan.

The plan was described in detail and an explanation was given of the various benefits provided, such as a uniform salary grade schedule, annual increments and longevity credits, benefits which were not previously granted.

Today, I would speak further on this matter, as well as on other subjects concerning personnel provisions.

Since their establishment, the various Classification and Compensation Plans have undergone considerable adjustments in the form of amendments to the rules, creation of new classification titles, deletion of obsolete titles, and, of course, revisions in the pay schedule, due to the two general salary increases, one of which became effective September 4, 1957 ($4.75 a week), and the other on July 1, 1959 ($6 a week).

Plan for Nurses

A new plan was established for the nursing personnel of the Hospital Department, to provide a more equitable arrangement for this group of employees whose services are so important to the efficient operation of the Boston City Hospital, Sanatorium, and Long Island Hospital.

Police and Fire Plans

The plans covering the uniformed forces of the Police and Fire Departments were amended as a result of a general salary increase for those employees in January, 1959. In addition to an increase amounting to $790 a year, the two plans now provide for a maximum salary for fire fighters and patrolmen after two years of service, a liberalization of the previous plans which called for two annual pay steps and two longevity steps, one after seven and one after eleven years of service.

Pay Steps for Lower Grades

On September 4, 1957, the general plan, in addition to the general increase of $4.75 a week, provided for accelerated pay steps for all salary grades below No. 11. The employees in these lower grades now receive increments after six months, one year, and two years of service, and longevity steps after five and seven years of service. We anticipate that this will provide a more attractive picture for prospective employees.

Interpretation of Rule 10

An interpretation of the provisions of Rule 10 of the general compensation and classification plan was approved by the Mayor, effective February 4, 1959. This reads as follows:

"Employees with twenty-five years of service creditable under the Compensation Plan, shall be compensated on promotion (permanent only), at a rate specified in Column VI, the maximum salary of the grade to which he is being promoted."

One can readily see how this proved beneficial to employees with long service. For many, the promotion could possibly be the last they might anticipate in city service. Immediate adjustment to the maximum salary after permanent promotion instead of a wait of from one to three years, creates a much happier result for employees in this category.

The merits of the Compensation and Classification Plans have been debated, pro and con, from time to time, and in all sincerity one can appreciate the viewpoint of individual employees who feel that the system has not proved too attractive in their cases. But, more equitable solutions of individual problems should prevail as administrative experience increases. It has become evident that the establishment and operation of the plans have provided employees with more benefits, more opportunities, and a more definite assurance of advancement than existed previously. From time to time there will, no doubt, be other amendments which we hope will improve the plans. With the proper attitude and consideration of the many personnel problems continually facing the city, a closer approach to perfection can be anticipated.

Sick Leave

A few remarks regarding sick leave benefits might be in order at this time. I presume all are quite familiar with the provisions of the rules governing sick leaves as specified in the Mayor's Circular Letter No. 15, dated June 15, 1956. These benefits are fair and liberal and, I feel sure, compare favorably with those allowed in outside industry.

An employee who, to the best of his ability, allows his sick leave to accumulate from year to year, builds up protection for himself in the event of serious and extended illness. The employee, however, who makes it a practice to use these privileges indiscriminately, finds himself in difficulty when unfortunate illness occurs and his name is dropped from the payroll.

Employees who abuse the privileges granted under sick leave should consider the effect of their frequent absences on their fellow workers who are obliged to assume extra and unfair burdens in order to maintain departmental efficiency.

Continual abuses by a minority may eventually bring hardships to the many who sincerely endeavor to abide by the rules. Changes which would allow less liberal privileges could be the result. A much happier atmosphere would prevail if consideration for fellow employees, as well as for the interests of the city which pays our salaries, could be maintained.

Vacation Leaves

The General Laws provide for a mandatory two weeks vacation during each calendar year, for every permanent civil service employee as well as every person classified as a common laborer, skilled laborer, mechanic, or craftsman, if he has actually worked for the City of Boston for thirty weeks in the aggregate during the twelve months preceeding June first in such year. Provisional or temporary employees, except those classified as laborers, mechanics, or craftsmen, have no statutory vacation rights.

The granting of an additional week's vacation after completion of nine years and five months, and two weeks in addition after nineteen years and five months, is at the discretion of the appointing authority or department head.

When an employee's service is terminated, due to retirement, resignation or death or by dismissal through no fault or delinquency on the employee's part, the employee, or in case of his death, his estate, shall be paid as provided by law an amount in lieu of such vacation; provided that no monetary or other allowance has already been made therefor.

The Personnel Division office is frequently called upon to clarify this rule. In simple words it means that an employee who wishes to take advantage of his full vacation allowance in excess of the mandatory two weeks, must do so prior to date of termination of his employment. Vacation pay in lieu of vacation can only be granted for the mandatory two weeks or any unused part thereof.

To summarize my remarks, let me state that good compensation and classification plans and fair, liberal sick leave and vacation rules have been established. All that is necessary for maximum results is the honest and efficient operation of and compliance with their provisions.

Moderator's Closing Remarks

For many years, and even today, the pension programs, the insurance programs, and the hospitalization programs which employers, whether public or private, provide for their employees, have been referred to as "fringe benefits." Possibly in the dim past, these were just what the word says, "fringes." But today, they have become much more than that—they have become, in fact, almost "conditions of employment" in the eyes of both management and employees.

Those of us who interview prospective, or in some cases prospecting employees, hear over and over again questions relating to our benefit programs. And, believe it or not, these questions frequently precede those about salary.

For instance, we advertised recently for a person with a particular skill. Among the several candidates was one young lady who, from her application, seemed to be eminently qualified for the position. After returning the interviewer's "good morning," however, her first question was: "How much vacation do I get?" When told she would be entitled to two weeks, her immediate response was: "I wouldn't consider a job where I didn't get at least a month." The interviewer then said "goodbye" to her as she stomped out in high dudgeon.

It seems to me anything as important to people as benefit programs appear to be cannot realistically be referred to as "fringes."

They certainly are not looked upon as "fringes" by employers—but represent a major cost of doing business. For instance, the cost of J. H. Benefit Programs was exactly 30 per cent of payroll costs in 1957. At the same time, a survey across the nation revealed this cost to manufacturing industry at 20.3 per cent of payroll, and in nonmanufacturing business at 24.2 per cent. There is little question but what the 1959 survey will show increased costs, because the trend in recent years has been in the direction of enlarged plans with more and more liberal provisions.

It is my conviction that most people, unless they have had dramatic proof of the value of benefit programs, such as an extended hospital stay, an expensive operation, or a retirement in their immediate family, fail to appreciate what they have. And at least one of the reasons is our persistence in referring to them as "fringe" benefits. The word has unfortunate connotations and overtones which tend to make people unappreciative of a vitally important part of their total compensation.

In like manner, employees, unless or until they have need of them, tend to be unappreciative of and lack essential knowledge about Workmen's Compensation, the compensation and classification plans they work under, and retirement programs until often it is too late to take advantage of many of their provisions.

Last, but not least, and, by the way, I have never heard membership in a union referred to as a "fringe" benefit, I am sure union executives will agree too many of their members know too little about the organizations which represent them and consequently fail to participate at meetings, to ask questions, to express opinions. In other words, too many sit back and "let George do it" rather than help George in the doing.

What I am saying, I hope, is that I believe each of us has a very real responsibility to be as completely informed as possible about every aspect of our jobs, because only then can we appreciate what we have and know the direction we must take if we want more.

You know I sometimes get to wondering what in the world we Americans would do with all of our spare time if a moratorium were declared on "griping,"—if suddenly it was against the law to find fault with anybody or anything.

Isn't that a frightening prospect though? But seriously, we usually gripe most about things we know the least, or those people about whom we know very little. Often, when we ask questions to learn more, or get to know someone better, we don't have much left to complain about.

Now, I would like to invite you to question the members of this panel, or myself, on any aspect of their talks.

January 18.

General Order No. 643.

Detective Third Grade Daniel L. Crowley and Patrolman George W. Curley, Division 10, are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

At about 8.15 A.M., on Saturday, January 9, 1960, as the result of a radio call that there had been a breaking and entering at Konner's Chevrolet Company, Inc., 812-814 Huntington avenue, Roxbury, the Sector O car with patrolmen of Division 10 and the spare car with Detective Crowley and Patrolman Curley responded to the scene and observed a broken plate-glass window, measuring 10 feet by 5 feet, in the entrance to the premises. Lying on the sidewalk in front of the broken window was an office-type swivel chair and a ball-peen hammer. Officers later learned that both the chair and the hammer were used to smash the plate-glass window by an unknown man fleeing the scene.

Upon examining the premises, the officers observed that the file cabinets in the front office were forced open and papers thrown about the floor. Lying on its back on the floor of this office was a 3-foot by 2-foot safe, with the combination knocked off and punch marks around the face behind the combination of the safe. Strewn about the floor near the safe were the contents of a complete set of burglarious tools, including sledge hammer, pickaxe, punches, chisels, and hammers, which had been used in an attempt to force open the safe.

Further investigation by Detective Crowley and Patrolman Curley disclosed a witness who had seen an unidentified man, no description, hurrying from the scene and in an attempt to apprehend this subject, the officers started a routine search of the area. They drove up Parker Hill avenue and when opposite Robert Breck Brigham Hospital observed in the parking lot leading down to Iroquois street a man dressed in olive-colored three-quarter length jacket, no hat, green corduroy trousers, and a scarf wrapped around his neck. This man was leaving the parking lot, downhill toward Iroquois street and proceeded on foot along Iroquois toward Parker street. The officers circled the block separately in a plan to converge on him. At Calumet and Iroquois streets he saw them approaching and fled, running up Parker Hill avenue to the parking lot at Iroquois street, down Iroquois to Calumet, then to Hillside street. Here, after a desperate struggle and at gunpoint, the suspect surrendered. After being handcuffed, he was searched for a possible weapon and found to have in his possession coins, wrapped and loose, amounting to $54.95, one craftsman's punch, twenty-one white pills, and four sections of the same type of pill. He was brought to the station where he was identified by the witness as the man he had seen flee Konner's after throwing the chair and hammer through the window.

The prisoner, one Robert William Davis, twenty-two years, single, of 33 Gray street, Boston, stated that he had been employed by Konner's for a short period of time but had been let go because he had no license to operate a motor vehicle. He further stated that he broke into Konner's with another man, whose name he refused to divulge and who left the scene of the crime in an automobile, leaving Davis on foot. It was noticed by the officers that Davis was limping and he explained that the safe in question had tipped over on his right shin while he and the other man were attempting to open it. He stated that they had used a sledge hammer, a pickaxe, punches, chisels, and hammer in this attempt.

Detective Crowley and Patrolman Curley checked the files at the Bureau of Records and spoke to various persons, to determine associates and friends of Davis. They obtained information on the address of a girl friend of Davis and she was brought to Station 10 for questioning. Although cooperative, she was unable to be of any help.

On Sunday, January 10, 1960, continuing their investigation of twenty-four consecutive hours, Detective Crowley and Patrolman Curley went to 11A Hanson street, Boston, and there arrested without a warrant on suspicion of the above break, one Saverio Louis DiCresce, twenty-one years, married, of that address. DiCresce made a signed confession involving himself and Davis in the above case.

Davis and DiCresce were arraigned in Roxbury District Court on Monday, January 11, 1960, on charges of breaking and entering in the nighttime; destroying a depository; possession of burglarious tools; and unlawful possession of narcotic or harmful drugs (the pills found on Davis when arrested). A continuance was requested, pending analysis by the state chemist of these pills.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the alertness and devotion to duty displayed by Detective Crowley and Patrolman Curley in this investigation and the promptness with which they brought about the capture of Davis and DiCresce, both of whom have long criminal records.

MAYOR COLLINS TACKLES URBAN REDEVELOPMENT

Mayor John F. Collins this week assumed front-line leadership of Boston's urban redevelopment activities. He announced that the City Council will be asked, in its deliberations on the 1960 budget estimates, to approve a $30,000 salary item for a top-flight development administrator, to be responsible to the Mayor for directing all renewal projects and for coordinating activities of the City Planning Board, the Boston Redevelopment Authority, and all other agencies concerned. If the Council is unwilling to approve the $30,000 salary item, which is 50 per cent more than the amount paid the city's chief executive, Mayor Collins says he intends to call upon private business interests in the city to make up the difference. The Mayor says the proper man for the job could not be obtained for less than the salary he stipulates, and he would much prefer to have the amount required to hire a competent director paid entirely by the city.

The Mayor is prepared to appoint to the job Edward J. Logue, thirty-eight-year-old development administrator for the city of New Haven, who has gained a reputation of being one of the nation's top experts on renewal. During the five years Mr. Logue has directed urban renewal in New Haven, that city has received the highest per capita federal assistance money in the entire country, and stands sixth highest among all U.S. cities in total federal cash received for urban renewal.

Mr. Logue is keenly interested, he told the Mayor, in availing himself of the opportunity to come to Boston, but, before making a decision, he must review his obligations and commitments in New Haven. The Mayor offered him the further opportunity to assume his duties in Boston on a part-time basis, over a period of months, rather than abruptly sever his relationship with New Haven. Mr. Logue says he will make a final decision on the offer within a week or so.

On January 30, Mayor Collins tackled another vexing problem besetting the city's redevelopment program—the business of hammering out a firm agreement with the General Services Administration on the location of the federal building in Boston's planned $100 million government center. The Mayor flew to Washington for a conference with Franklin G. Floete, head of the G.S.A. The meeting was arranged through House Majority Leader John W. McCormack. The city's plea for an early decision on the location of the federal building has the backing of practically the entire New England delegation, Mayor Collins has been informed.

Preliminary plans for the state office building are proceeding on schedule, but the planning for the new city hall is slowed up while the federal authorities make up their mind where the United States government building should be located.

On January 21, at a conference in the Mayor's office, the way was cleared for financing of the first segment of the West End development project. John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company announced its investment of $55 million in financing the undertaking. The Mayor disclosed that the city has an agreement with Charles River Park, the John Hancock Company, and the F.H.A., under which the first $11 million complex will produce a real property tax of at least $225,000 annually. The tax agreement, it was learned, will allow the developer a seven per cent return on the investment plus depreciation. The agreement further provides that if the developer realizes higher profits than at present anticipated the city will benefit further by increased real estate taxes.

Announcement of starting date on construction of the first complex of the West End project is expected to be made within a week.

DOES THE BOSTON TAXPAYER GET HIS MONEY'S WORTH?

FIFTH OF A SERIES

This is the fifth of a series of seven installments which will completely cover the two-day Conferama sessions of 1959.

"Are Costs of City Services Commensurate with Taxes Paid?"

This was the subject of the fourth panel session discussion at the fourth Annual Conference on Municipal Administration held on November 19 and 20 at the Boston Public Library Auditorium.

Moderator of the panel was Joseph S. Slavet, Executive Secretary, Boston Municipal Research Bureau.

The panelists were:

Assistant Chief John E. Clougherty, Fire Department, who spoke on "Fire Protection."

Capt. William J. Taylor, Police Department, whose subject was "Police Protection."

John M. Sheehan, Hospital Finance Officer, Hospital Department, who discussed "Boston City Hospital—Past, Present, and Future."

John J. McCall, Division Engineer, Bridge Service, Public Works Department, whose subject was "Public Works Operations."

Dr. George Kahn, Chief of Bureau of Disease Control, Health Department, whose topic was "Health Protection."

REMARKS OF MODERATOR

A city government is designed to serve people—to provide them with those daily and basic needs that they cannot conveniently and economically meet by themselves—needs that are not readily purchasable through private enterprise.

The prime function of city government is service. When a government fails to fulfill this prime function, it stops justifying its existence.

Service in itself is a very general and often a very elusive concept. Service means different things to different people. For example, few people these days would deny the public responsibility of furnishing education for children from Grades I through XII. But there are many educational service questions which would prompt widespread argument and disagreement—whether kindergartens and nursery schools are basic to a public school program; whether free summer schools are absolutely essential; and whether golf instruction should be part of the school physical education program.

A major reason for wide areas of disagreement over service is the inextricable relationship between service and taxes. Service and taxes are like love and marriage. You know—they go together like a horse and carriage; and you can't have one without the other. It is precisely this relationship which forces a city to place a practical limit on the quantities and qualities of service which it provides. The shortage of money forces it to pick and choose among services.

We can easily forget that high taxes can retard the economic growth of a community. Restrictions on growth, in turn, mean restrictions on tax income available to pay for services. Taxes can reach a point of forcing deep reductions in service levels.

Many of us overlook the fact that the great variety of services and high quality of services in Boston developed as the city grew and matured. Boston's services reached their peaks of development, as a matter of fact, as valuations in the downtown sections of the city thrived.

The city's valuations have been declining steadily for ten years. This means to me that there is a greater need than ever before for reviewing city, county, and school services in considerable depth.

To tackle this problem, we need a thorough cataloguing of city, county, and school activities. This would classify all activities into their primary purposes and their secondary and contributory elements. For example, education for school children covers not only classroom teaching, but many other activities such as school hygiene, library services, cafeterias, gardening, military drill, physical education, transportation, maintenance of buildings and grounds, etc.

Thus, the central purpose or function of any activity is always extended in many directions. Certain of these extensions are less essential than others and some are likely to become unnecessary or at least marginal. In some cases, the activities eventually get out of date.

Then there are the conflicting and duplicating activities, particularly between the subactivities of different departments or even between the subactivities of the same department. Separate photostat units in two divisions of a public works department is a case in point.

"Free service" is another cause of expanded activities and expenses, as when municipal golf courses experience sizable deficits in operations.

What I am trying to show is that some city activities are essential, some highly important, some useful, some extravagant, a few useless. Some are desired by a large public; some by a small pressure group only; some only by those who run the activities.

While this kind of classification of activities is partly a matter of political philosophy and policy, it is still generally possible to evaluate activities from a management standpoint on the basis of input and output in order to raise the issue of marginal utility. The management expert cannot always determine whether a school cafeteria should or should not be operated, but he can show what it costs and how this cost compares with an expansion of the school library. The failure to make such reviews of activities and subactivities from time to time will inevitably result in the retention of activities, long after the reason for their existence has passed.

"FIRE PROTECTION"

By Assistant Chief J. E. Clougherty

Gentlemen, the fourth conference on municipal administration in which we are participating has required a little research on the part of myself and my staff in providing you with some figures on certain aspects of the Fire Department.

I feel certain that some of you must have had a few moments of doubt as to just what was being sought precisely. However, after some cogitation it became apparent to me, as it must have to some of you, that some phases of this inquiry are in fact answerable only in a general sense. Please accept mine on this basis. The foundation is the year 1958—the fundamental sources of values are official answers to my inquiry—the equations, since I am not aware of a prior handling or accepted method to follow, are my own.

You must be aware that the City of Boston has an approximate "nighttime" population of just under 800,000 which swells to an estimated 1,300,000 during the normal hours of employment.

This half million difference between day and night represents a percentage of between 35 per cent and 40 per cent. In the Fire Department our premise and policy must be based on providing fire safety for the maximum number so a reasonable assumption should be that 35 per cent to 40 per cent of our effort can be allocated to furnishing this service to non-residents or persons not usually considered domiciled here.

Value of Boston's Property

Further, extension of the assessed worth of the city brings to light that Boston is valued at $2,290,947,400; of this assessed worth, $838,378,400 is nonassessed or nontaxable property. To assist some of you, the difference or what we call taxable property, is $1,452,569,000. Coincidentally, the non-taxed property in relation to the whole is approximately 35 per cent to 40 per cent.

What should be realized at this point is that we have been speaking of "assessed" values which do not accurately reflect the true worth potential of this property. I feel that a reasonable assumption, for want of a complete and accurate breakdown of this true worth potential, or as known in insurance circles, "sound value," is that the assessed value times 1.5 might be nearer in keeping with the true worth potential—or if I must again assist you people without pencils—$3,436,421,100.

Department Operations

Setting aside values for a moment let us consider department operations in round figures. There were a total of 17,500 responses by the department. A breakdown of these figures is as follows:

Building fires	2,200
Outdoor fires	1,500
Outside service	1,300
No loss, grass or rubbish	4,000
False, accidental, needless	5,000
Emergency service	3,500

None of the above are considered with the exception of the last item titled "emergency service." Based on our "night" and "day" population differential of 40 per cent it can be assumed that 1,400 calls for emergency service were necessitated by people not domiciled in Boston.

No value is given here for this service to nonresidents, but with figures to be furnished, it may be possible to arrive at a total for this service. With this in mind, it follows that if the 1958 operating cost of the Boston Fire Department was about $11,000,000 and the total number of runs 17,500, on the basis of pure division, each response would cost about $628 which, at first glance, appears excessively high—yet mathematically, that is the answer.

However, for the purchase of fire protection, let us approach it from another direction.

Earlier, I placed a "modest" sound value on the city of $3,436,000,000 plus; the ratio that this bears to the cost of fire department operation—namely, $11,000,000—is approximately one three-hundredths of 1 per cent, which for fire protection is negligible for when you compare it to the cost of fire insurance it is actually a bargain.

Domestic insurance companies licensed to do business in the state offer as the absolute minimum rate for a one-family nonhazardous residence a charge somewhere in the vicinity of 16 cents per $100 per year. For what might be termed an "extremely" hazardous risk, Lloyds of London might require 5 per cent of the face value of the policy charge—that is, $5 for every $100 dollars worth of insurance per year.

Cost of Fire Protection

The Boston Fire Department furnishes fire protection as I stated before on the basis of one three-hundredths of 1 per cent or—expressing it in dollars and cents—fire protection is furnished at a cost of approximately 3 cents per $1,000 of value per year.

Gentlemen—when we try to break down cost, you can see that if we approach the problem with the thought that we are protecting real property at a cost of 3 cents per thousand per year—that if we add the worth of building contents, such as stock, furniture, merchandise—using what might be termed accepted insurance practices, we shall still further reduce this cost to an insignificant amount.

Fire departments are fire protection, fire insurance is for fire protection. I am not intimating that these terms are interchangeable, but that both have a common purpose and both should be measured by the same rod.

"POLICE PROTECTION"

By Capt. Wm. J. Taylor

In order to properly discuss the subject "Are Costs For City Services Rendered Commensurate With Taxes Paid" as it relates to the Police Department, it is necessary at the outset to make a few observations regarding crime in general and modern police administration.

The primary responsibility of every police department is the prevention and repression of crime, and in order to carry out this mission it is necessary to maintain a strong, efficient, uniformed street patrol. The presence of the uniformed police officer and the utilization of well-marked police patrol cars is still the greatest deterrent to the commission of crime, as it reduces the opportunities for criminal activity to a minimum. It is also understandable that there exists a considerable variation in crime problems from neighborhood to neighborhood, and that the need for police service in a large cosmopolitan area is much greater than in communities where the population is less diversified. It is also well established that the quality of protection furnished to the public is directly in proportion to the number of officers deployed on vigilant patrol duty.

Crime in U. S. Up 56%

There are those who say that in the face of a rising tax rate Boston can no longer afford the same quality of protection. The truth of the matter is that Boston cannot afford less than the best. We who are charged with the responsibility for the police protection of our city view with apprehension the mounting statistics showing a nationwide upsurge in crime, especially in crimes of violence. These disturbing figures indicate that crime in the United States has increased 56.2 per cent in the past eight years and continues to increase four times faster than our population growth.

Tide of Hoodlumism

Every large city is plagued with a rising tide of hoodlumism, the direct outgrowth of our serious problem of juvenile delinquency. We are all familiar with the situation in New York City which has been given widespread publicity. After dark in many sections of this great metropolis, savage gangs prowl the streets and racial and social tensions erupt violently in vicious attacks on persons and property. New York is presently recruiting and training 1,000 additional police officers to meet this problem.

Similar conditions exist in other cities in varying degrees and the pattern indicates a long-term upward trend. In San Francisco as a result of a sharp increase in crimes of violence, city authorities recently placed in effect what they termed "Operation S," providing for the saturation of trouble areas with extra police, while in Washington, D. C., Congress has been asked to strengthen the present force of 2,500 by the addition of 500 more police officers to combat the increase in crime in our national capital.

This war against crime and the criminal element is never over—never won. It is a continuous, endless battle and in this struggle there is no substitute for manpower—and manpower in this day and age is an expensive commodity.

Police Costs

This brings us to the costs of operating the Boston Police Department. For the current year our payroll costs will total $17,000,000. All other departmental expenditures—communications, automotive, maintenance of buildings and equipment, administrative—everything that goes into the operation of a modern police department will total less than $1,000,000. It is readily apparent that our principal and most necessary expenditure is for personnel.

Per capita computations are often used comparing costs of operation in Boston with other cities in a similar population bracket. These do not offer a fair comparison as Boston is the core of the sixth largest metropolitan area in the country. Within a radius of 30 miles there resides a population of more than 3,000,000 persons, the majority of whom are entirely dependent for their economic, social, and cultural sustenance on the City of Boston. They enter our city to earn their livelihood, to attend schools and colleges, to seek medical care and professional services of all kinds, to visit our great retail shopping area, to utilize the financial and investment facilities established here, to enjoy the concerts, theaters, night clubs, sporting events, and other entertainment found only in a big city. There is also a great transient population, temporary guests of our city, on business or pleasure. While all these persons are within our gates they must be provided with police protection and service.

Extra Services

For example, Boston police ambulances responded to more than 20,000 calls to aid sick and injured persons during the past year and no question was raised as to whether the victim was a resident or nonresident before providing this essential service. During the past year a total of 99,929 persons were arrested in this city and of this number 29,409, or about 30 per cent, were nonresidents. During this same period a total of 572,617 parking violation notices were processed, and of these offenders some 60 per cent were nonresidents. We are also told that 40 per cent of Boston's real property is now tax exempt; however, police protection must be furnished as usual. It is obvious that the full burden of providing this degree of police service is falling unfairly on the owners of taxable property in this city and a solution must be found which will provide sufficient funds to maintain adequate police protection for all, and yet distribute the costs equitably among the recipients of such service.

During the past two years, under new and energetic leadership, the Boston Police Department has undergone a vital transformation. Every principle of sound police administration has been instituted to insure the most effective utilization of manpower and equipment in order to provide maximum protection and the multitude of services required by this community.

A policy of consulting with police officials in other jurisdictions having similar problems has been initiated with a resultant interchange of valuable information, new ideas, and modern methods.

Crime Reporting

A most modern and comprehensive crime reporting and recording system has been installed. With the aid of electronic computers every complaint of crime and request for police service is tabulated giving for the first time an accurate picture of our crime problem and measuring police effectiveness in dealing with it.

A public information program has been instituted to improve morale and efficiency within the department and to establish in the public mind a better understanding of police problems and of the competence of our Police Force.

A domestic relations unit was organized to cooperate with and assist the city public welfare authorities in the investigation and prosecution of frauds committed by persons not properly entitled to public assistance. This unit proved an immediate success and has been responsible for the restitution of many thousands of dollars to the city treasury. The existence of this unit and the publicity resulting from its activities will serve as a deterrent to any future fraudulent applications for welfare aid.

Consolidation of Stations

Our present Police Commissioner has advocated the consolidation of certain station houses and the construction of smaller, one-story structures efficiently designed to meet current requirements rather than those prevailing a generation ago. Many of our present station houses are old and outmoded and are becoming increasingly more expensive to maintain.

The Crime Prevention Bureau was reorganized and provided with additional personnel to develop a constructive program to suppress Juvenile Delinquency. Although only a small proportion of our young people are involved, we are all seriously disturbed at the decided increase in serious crime among youthful offenders. On a local level, without the necessity for drives or crackdowns, we have managed to stay on top of this problem by steady, persistent, day-to-day police activity.

Law enforcement is growing continually more complex and every experienced police official faced with the everyday realities of police duty is well aware of this fact. However, the police must leave the determination of the causes and origins of our crime problem to the sociologist. The police area of responsibility is to maintain law and order, to make the way of the transgressor as difficult as possible and to retain Boston's reputation as an unsurpassed community in which to live and work.

"BOSTON CITY HOSPITAL—PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE"

By John M. Sheehan

A good deal has been written, even more has been said, on the subject of whether the City of Boston should be in the hospital business. The Hospital Department is one of the larger divisions of the city and, as a natural consequence, the expense of its operation is regarded questioningly in the light of the current tax rate. Like all other functions of the city, the Hospital Department is—and rightfully ought to be—susceptible to minute examination from the point of view of whether its continuance is justifiable, and if such be the case, whether its over-all efficiency is consistent with similar privately-operated institutions. This, in general, is the subject of my portion of our panel discussion.

The Hospital Department is literally everybody's business, because it affects all of us to a greater or lesser extent as potential patients, medical students, student nurses, employees, or taxpayers. Since we all have a stake in the department, then we all have the responsibility to assure that the decision to continue or conclude its operation is the most efficacious for the greatest proportion of our citizens. There are many facets to the proposition, not the least of which are tradition, precedent, education and, frankly, the basic elements of Faith, Hope, and Charity—picturesque terms, perhaps, but they define fundamentals too vital to be decided by insufficient study, snap judgment, or political expediency.

Recent Survey

There has recently been completed an exhaustive study of the City Hospital Department by an independent group of nationally recognized hospital analysts who examined it with the dispassionate scrutiny of a surgeon. After months of observation and research this group has concluded that there is both a place and a need for a municipal hospital in our community, based upon the assumption that we raise our operational efficiency to the standard we have planned for ourselves in our long-range thinking. They have made suggestions based upon their wide experience with similar problems in similar institutions elsewhere in the country. We know our problems better than anyone else, and we know at least one solution for each; but because we cannot work with sick patients very long before acquiring a deep-rooted humility, we are grateful for the opportunity to sit down with qualified individuals and benefit from their observations. This, incidentally, means you—if your forte is one from which we can derive advice and help, for such is the basic principle underlying these seminars.

Let us accept the premise that the City Hospital will continue to function and let us define what the Hospital Department really is. It comprises three divisions: Long Island Hospital, Mattapan Sanatorium, and the Main Hospital, including the South Department for Contagious Diseases. The total annual budget is $20,000,000 offset with an income of $5,600,000 or a net expenditure of $14,400,000 which is slightly less than only 12 per cent of the total city and county budget. Because of the limitation of time, we will confine ourselves to the Main Hospital which is the area of greatest expense and, naturally, greatest controversy.

General Description

The Main Hospital comprises the equivalent of five city blocks and includes thirty-five buildings. There are 1,528 beds, in which 33,564 patients spent somewhat over 1,000 years of time in 1958. The Out-Patient and Accident Floor facilities provided service for over 1,000 patients per day during the same year. Remember these figures in contemplating the absorption problem the other Boston hospitals would face in the event the City Hospital should ever close its doors.

The Hospital has national accreditation—both as a patient care hospital and as a teaching institution. It is affiliated with three renowned universities, Boston University, Harvard, and Tufts. Its medical excellence is recognized all over the world as witness the fact that patients have been sent here from such faraway places as Peru and South Africa for extraordinary treatment. The list of physician applicants desiring to further their education at the City Hospital far exceeds our ability to accept them and contains home addresses such as India, Korea, Brazil. Because of our teaching status, our patients benefit immeasurably from the high degree of excellence demanded in a teaching institution and many, if not most of our patients, would be sorely pressed financially if they were required to pay for the service rendered without charge by some of the most capable, highly respected, universally recognized medical authorities in the country.

I might add in passing that the financial status of the patient does not reach the ward. There is no segregation or separation of patients based upon ability to pay. All patients are treated exactly alike with one common purpose—restoration to full and normal health.

In order to view the City Hospital from an operational point of view, I think we might spend a moment to put it in proper perspective with hospitals generally.

During the past quarter-century the hospital business (if we may term it such) has grown to become the fifth largest national industry. The amazing advances in medical and surgical knowledge, technology and accomplishment—the fruits of ceaseless patience and research—are pretty generally known because of the widespread publicity attendant upon this type of progress. The corollary, of course, was the increased need and subsequent creation of expanded hospital facilities, constant modernization of medical and surgical equipment and the rapid enlargement of both professional and nonprofessional staffs. All this was aided and abetted by the advent of a new concept in hospital payment, Blue Cross, followed in more recent years by the stepped-up competition of commercial insurance carriers entering the hospital field.

Expenses Up Sharply

At this seminar last year, you will remember, Dr. Dean Clark, General Director of the Massachusetts General Hospital, presented an analysis of the causes of increased hospital costs and I refer you to the Conference Report, if you wish to review this subject in more detail. My point is that the sharp rise in hospital expense was unavoidable if hospitals were to keep abreast of scientific advances in the field of medicine. Unquestionably, the cost of operating a modern hospital is high; but so, too, is the price of a human life.

It was natural and it was proper that during this development period the emphasis be placed on medicine rather than business but, as a consequence of this emphasis, business techniques and machinery lagged considerably behind medical advances until within the last decade the inevitable occurred—expense so far exceeded income that voluntary contributions no longer were adequate. It was obvious that rates would have to be raised, and they were, but so abruptly and to such an extent that an uninformed citizenry angrily demurred. Consumer goods they could refuse to buy, but with hospitalization they have no choice—one doesn't elect to be sick or meet with an accident—no choice other than to demand a reasonable correlation between cost and charge. Hospital rates were compared unfavorably with hotel rates, despite the fact that less than one third of the hospital expended dollar is comparable to hotel operation.

Hospitals began to pioneer in the field of hospital business administration, leaning on the schools and their industrial counterparts for guidance. Business machine manufacturers, seeing the need, entered the hospital field and spent much time and money in the development of office machinery adapted to the peculiarities of hospital billing, payroll, inventory, and accounting. Businesswise, hospitals are now on their way to overtake and match their medical efficiency.

These, then, are the problems of hospitals generally, and the Boston City Hospital in particular.

Obsolescence

In addition to all this, we at City Hospital have another problem common to many business enterprises in our old and venerable city—obsolescence. Our newest building is over twenty-five years old and our eldest may conceivably have a beam or two taken directly from the Ark. Every penny given us by considerate administrations has been spent in the modernization of the diagnostic and treatment equipment necessary to the care of the patient just as was being done in hospitals elsewhere across the country; but the physical plant was reluctantly relegated to a program of critical urgency and there was no money left for preventive maintenance. There was no money, either, for modernization of business equipment. No one knows this any better nor deplures it any more vigorously than we do. I am happy to say that within the past three months the financial wherewithal to do something about it has been made available to us by the cooperation of his Honor the Mayor, the Legislature, the City Council, and the wheels have begun to turn.

During the past eight years the annual income level of the Hospital has been increased to the extent of $2,200,000 largely by virtue of increased rates, a larger percentage of insurance-covered patients, higher allowances for welfare patients and a more prompt financial classification of the patient on admission. This is merely the beginning. Addressograph equipment has already been purchased and partially installed—equipment that will not only permit but will also assure that all charges (some $3,000 to $4,000 daily) will be recorded for all services rendered because the charge slip is an automatic carbon copy of the request of the physician and the instruction to the service.

As far back as 1955 we planned in intimate detail for punched card operation. The obstacles at the time were money and space; the former no longer insurmountable, the latter in the process of solution. This equipment will not only revolutionize our billing and accounting operations but the machines will also have time available for the accumulation of statistics necessary to the proper evaluation of our expenditures and our allocated costs. For the first time we will be able to accurately conform to the standards of the American Hospital Association uniform system of hospital accounting required of us by law for the mutual protection of both the hospital and its patients.

The business divisions of the hospital are in a somewhat delicate position. Because we are a municipal hospital, all of our patients are sick taxpayers. We must maintain a balance between the Golden Rule on the one hand and the Seventh Commandment on the other—a balance between a sympathetic understanding of the physical and financial problems of the patient on one side, and a strict and responsible accounting to the taxpayer on the other. The former, we are proud to say has long since been a matter of tradition; our dedication to the latter we hope to demonstrate even more conclusively in the immediate future.

"PUBLIC WORKS OPERATIONS"

By John J. McCall

The subject question may be considered in two parts as follows:

First: Are the services being provided at a reasonable fair cost?

Second: To what extent does this cost provide the services required?

In answer to the first question, it may be stated broadly that the cost is made up of the direct (more or less fixed) charges covering departmental personnel, plant, equipment, materials, supplies, etc., plus the supplementary cost of procuring contractual services to execute work which is beyond the scope or capacity of the departmental forces.

Regarding contractual services, it is the general policy of the department to advertise for bids on all major work, to invite bids for minor work, and to award contracts to the lowest responsible bidder—the work, in practically all cases, going to the lowest bidder. Only in emergencies, or when special conditions or requirements dictate, are contracts negotiated or awarded without advertising.

In connection with the so-called fixed cost of operating the department, it may be said that in view of present-day conditions involving reduced personnel quotas, low pay scales, and reduced budget appropriations, it becomes increasingly difficult to provide the necessary services in a complete, efficient manner; and it would be practically impossible to provide them at further reduced cost without serious curtailment of service.

Therefore, considering present-day budget restrictions, highly competitive bidding, and ever-increasing prices, it is evident that the cost of providing services is as fair and reasonable as can be expected.

Concerning the secondary question as to what extent services are provided, it is suggested that we first consider the scope of services provided as well as the area and extent of communities and population served.

Brief Description

To clarify the scope of services furnished by the Public Works Department, a brief description of the department follows:

The department consists of a Central Office and seven divisions, namely, Automotive, Bridge, Highway, Sanitary, Sewer, Survey, and Water Divisions.

The functions, operations, and services provided by the various divisions are readily identified by the name of the division.

For the purpose of this discussion, a breakdown of the cost of providing the subject services is treated herein in composite form, showing, for each division, the cost of the following items, where they apply:

1. New Construction and Major Repairs.
2. Routine Maintenance and Ordinary Repairs.
3. Operation.
4. Street Cleaning and Snow Removal.
5. Street Lighting.
6. Disposal of Rubbish and Garbage.
7. Miscellaneous Items and Administration and Engineering not included in the other items.

It should be noted here that inasmuch as the Water Division is operated and maintained by the income derived from the sale of water, the cost of operating this division is not reflected in the tax rate; and is, therefore, excluded from this discussion.

The figures given herein are based primarily on the expenditures made in the year 1958; and for the most part represent a typical year of operation under present day conditions. For brevity, all figures have been rounded off.

Departmental Costs

Referring now to the previously-mentioned items of cost, we find that the entire departmental cost is made up as follows:

Per Cent	Item	Highway	Sewer	Sanitary	Bridge	Survey	Automotive	Central Office	Total

Of this $16 million total, approximately two thirds is provided through direct taxation, and the other one third raised by means of bond issue loans to be amortized over a period of years in accordance with the city's regular fiscal policies.

The figures shown herein will help to illustrate the scope of services provided through the Public Works Department; and are representative of the city's cost in maintaining such services. Further—

WELFARE BOOST REFLECTS MEDICAL COSTS

Following is a summary of the Welfare Department's report for December, 1959:

¶ Expenditures for public assistance for December, 1959, amounted to $3,397,345. Medical expenses exceeded those of any previous month, reaching an aggregate of $1,322,522. However, an extensive drive was conducted for the processing and paying of all medical charges within 1959. Compared to November, medical expenditures rose $289,100 or more than 27 per cent. Direct payments to recipients remained fairly constant. The combination of these payments resulted in an average monthly cost per case of $127.95.

¶ There were 966 applications approved for assistance and 912 cases closed resulting in a caseload increase of 54. The departmental caseload at the end of month was 26,016. Slight caseload increases were noted in Aid to Dependent Children and General Relief; decreases occurred in Old Age Assistance and Disability Assistance. An additional 289 requests for assistance were either rejected by the department or voluntarily withdrawn by the applicant.

¶ For the calendar year 1959, the department expended $37,008,439, an increase of $1,410,559 or almost 4 per cent. Although direct payments to recipients increased moderately during 1959, costs for medical care almost doubled. In 1958 these costs amounted to $6,865,925 as compared to $12,552,947 for the current year. The average monthly cost per case increased from $113.03 in 1958 to $115.44.

¶ During the year there were 14,452 applications processed of which 10,846 were approved and 3,606 rejected. The caseload carried over from 1958, plus the number of applications approved shows that 36,982 cases were aided by the department in 1959. The monthly average number of cases aided was 26,614 for 1959.

more, it is felt that these services are being rendered as extensively and efficiently as available funds will allow.

Concerning the extent of communities and population which may be said to be deriving benefit from the services rendered by the City of Boston, it is difficult, of course, to accurately define this extent. Nevertheless, certain factors which are familiar to all of us stress the fact that these services must be provided to serve a much greater population than is found in the City of Boston as a resident population.

Naturally, the position which Boston holds as the center of a metropolitan area imposes on the city the task of maintaining, for instance, adequate highway and bridge facilities to accommodate a much greater traffic burden, including the heaviest types of commercial traffic, than would otherwise be the case.

Similarly, the so-called daytime population of the city, generally conceded to be approximately 50 per cent greater than the resident population, requires more elaborate facilities to be maintained by the Sewer, Sanitary, and Water Divisions.

Drawbridge Operation

The operation and maintenance of certain of our drawbridges is borne by the City of Boston to the almost exclusive benefit of other communities such as Cambridge, Everett, Chelsea, and Revere.

A full, detailed report covering the extent of communities and population benefiting from the services rendered by the City of Boston is not within the scope of this discussion. Nevertheless, it is quite evident that the entire metropolitan area, to some degree, derives benefit.

Accordingly, in the knowledge that the tax burden covering these services is assumed entirely by the City of Boston, it might be argued that the cost of service is not commensurate with the taxes paid; but on the other hand, measured against the extent of communities and population deriving benefit from these services, the cost is more than commensurate.

In either case, it should be noted that the services referred to in this discussion account for less than $6 of the current $101 tax rate, and as previously stated, it would be impossible to reduce cost without seriously impairing the service.

"HEALTH PROTECTION"

By Dr. George Kahn

The Boston Health Department in 1958 spent about $2,100,000 of tax-collected money in doing the work of the department as the health agency of the City of Boston. The Registry of Births, Deaths and Marriages consumed $171,000 of this total, the Weights and Measures Division, $90,000, and the Health Division the balance of $1,843,000.

The functions of the Registry Division and the Weights and Measures Division are obvious and I shall discuss them no further. The Health Division does the tremendous job of protecting, to the best of its ability, the health of the inhabitants of the city, its non-resident workers, and transient buyers and visitors.

The Health Division is subdivided into four sections according to function as follows:

Administrative Services

The section of Administrative Services spends about $150,000 annually and covers the over-all administration of the division. This includes over-all planning, evaluation, and control; ordering of supplies, materials, and services; book-keeping and accounting, vital statistics, health education, and many other functions which go into general administration.

Local Services

This section controls the health units, the school hygiene program for the parochial schools, and the services given in the health units to the individual, whether he be infant or adult. So this section manages the well-baby clinics, the dental clinics, the immunization clinics, the health examination clinics, and others. This section spent approximately $575,000 in 1958.

The Medical Section

This section contains the Bureau of Laboratories, the Bureau of Nursing, and the Bureau of Disease Control. It spends about $700,000 annually—about one third of the whole budget.

The Bureau of Laboratories does many different bacteriological examinations for the hospitals, clinics, and private physicians of Boston, such as stool cultures, throat cultures, sputum examinations, etc. The Bureau also does Wassermann testing and other serological tests.

The Bureau of Nursing supplies the nurses for public health activities. These nurses staff the well-baby clinics, the immunization clinics, the tuberculosis clinics, and others. They are the school nurses to the parochial schools of Boston. They do the home visiting for the reported cases of communicable diseases, including tuberculosis; they visit the homes of the patients from the well-baby clinics; they visit the prematures and make many other types of home nursing visits. This is a very busy bureau.

The Bureau of Disease Control manages the control of the common communicable diseases, including tuberculosis, and the less common ones like typhoid and paratyphoid fever, parrot fever, rabies, etc. This Bureau also has some functions in the prevention of mental disease.

Foods and Environmental Services

The section of Foods and Environmental Services spends about $415,000 annually.

The food portion of this section has the supervision of restaurants, groceries, fruit stores, butcher shops, and all establishments connected with the storing, selling, preparing, and serving of food. They have supervision of the milk and water supply. They have their own laboratory for the chemical examination of food, milk, and water, and use the Bureau of Laboratories for bacteriological examinations of the same.

The environmental services portion of the section enforces the code for minimum housing standards and has supervision of the demolition of buildings unsuitable for human habitation. It has control over all public health nuisances, whether they be rodents, insects, odors, smoke, or any other nuisances, and the legal authority to abate them. It is also involved in the supervision of hospitals, nursing homes, convalescent homes, boarding homes for children, day nurseries, and many other such institutions.

I have now outlined very sketchily the Health Division and its activities. I want to spend the balance of the time allotted me on some subjects of special interest.

Polio Program

The polio program of the Health Division has cost the city very little. The polio vaccine was supplied by the federal government through the State Health Department, and the Health Division had the locations and the personnel to give the inoculations. Our Health Commissioner, Dr. John H. Cauley, despairing at the apathy of the public in getting polio inoculations with the polio season coming on, put on a low-cost polio immunization program in May and June of this year. Each recipient of an inoculation was asked to contribute $1, but nobody was refused who claimed inability to pay. As a result, over 57,000 inoculations were given at no cost to the city and there was even a substantial balance left in the treasury to be used for future polio programs. In addition, the publicity associated with this program stimulated many polio inoculations by private physicians. To date in 1959, we have had 26 cases of polio—a low incidence year for which we hope the polio programs were in part responsible.

Tuberculosis Program

For very adequate reasons which I do not have time to discuss, Boston has always had a major problem in tuberculosis, more so than most other large cities in the United States. The Health Division has tackled this problem courageously and has made considerable progress in improving the situation. In 1949, 378 people died from pulmonary tuberculosis in Boston. In 1954, five years later, this number had been cut to 195 deaths—about one half the number in 1949, and in 1958 to 106, or about one half the number in 1954. As the number of cases of pulmonary tuberculosis becomes fewer, they become more difficult to find, so the problem of cutting the deaths still further becomes progressively harder. We still have a considerable tuberculosis problem in Boston, but we shall continue to attack it aggressively.

Costs

The cost of running the Boston Health Department amounts to about $2.50 per capita of population per year. Adequate health department service, like adequate medical care, is expensive. The Boston Health Department spends $425,000 annually for nurses; $210,000 for maintaining the health units; $200,000 for dental services to the people; $415,000 for the control of food and the environment; $160,000 for the control of tuberculosis, etc. These funds are good investments in health, and it seems to me the taxpayer is getting a good return for his money.

Moderator's Summary and Observations

Our five panelists have given you broad outlines of the services and costs of departments which involve over $67 million in yearly expense. The net costs of these agencies add up to over $40 in the tax rate.

There is one common thread running through most of their discussions. This is the conclusion that varying numbers of nonresidents benefit from the basic services provided by the City of Boston and that this accounts for a considerable portion of the high expense of these services.

Chief Clougherty presented an interesting approach to measuring the value of fire service in Boston. He related the cost of city-provided fire protection and prevention to the market value of all property in Boston and concluded that in these terms the cost was far less than the cost of fire insurance.

Captain Taylor emphasized that the war on crime required manpower, an expensive commodity, and that the police payroll would reach $17 million this year. His solution to the problem of high police costs leaned toward an equitable distribution of police expense among recipients of police services.

Mr. Sheehan pointed out that the major problem of the City Hospital was to raise its business techniques and machinery to the high level of medical efficiency. He illustrated progress along these lines which was steadily improving the income side of the hospital ledger.

Mr. McCall stated that the cost of providing public works services in Boston is as fair and reasonable as can be expected in the face of reduced personnel quotas, low pay scales, and reduced appropriations.

Dr. Kahn explained that the $2.50 per capita for public health in Boston was a good investment in health and that the taxpayer was getting a good return for his money.

After ten years of experience on the Boston scene it is my own observation that blaming the high cost of service on Boston's metropolitan uniqueness is overdone. Almost every large city in the country has sizable metropolitan populations which benefit from its services. The point remains that because of Boston's exorbitant tax rate, and the important relationship between taxes and services, there must be persistent review of services and the development of solutions which will mean lower costs.

I'd like to conclude by raising and leaving with you some provoking questions on basic issues of city services:

1. Is the lack of balance between fire prevention and fire protection one of the reasons for high costs of fire service?
2. Is the use of uniformed men in the Police and Fire Departments in nonprotective duties a significant factor in police and fire costs?
3. Does the changing character of the City Hospital require changes in its role which will bring large reductions in hospital expense?
4. Has the city a complete catalogue of city services which are

URBAN RENEWAL BOOKLET DEALS WITH FINANCING OF HOME IMPROVEMENTS

Mayor John F. Collins recently announced the publication of the second in a series of Urban Renewal Information Booklets, titled: "How To Pay For Your Home Improvements."

The booklet, which contains valuable financing advice for Boston home owners, is the second in a series of booklets published by the Boston College Seminar Research Bureau, under a grant of the Sears Roebuck Foundation, in co-operation with the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce.

An introduction to the booklet reads in part: "Greater Boston's first urban renewal operations are large-scale redevelopment projects such as The Farm in Brookline, Riverview in Cambridge, and the West End in Boston.

"An equally important phase of urban renewal is the program to improve existing houses and neighborhoods. Now, Boston and many suburbs are planning local improvements to make our residential neighborhoods more attractive.

"You can safeguard the value and appearance of your property by planning your own home repair and modernization programs."

A printing of 25,000 copies of the booklet are available free for home owners and property owners. Quantities of the booklet will be distributed to neighborhood improvement committees. Individuals may obtain them by writing the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce or the Boston College Seminar Research Bureau.

Copies are still available of the first booklet in the series—"Home Improvements You Can Make With No Tax Increase"—describing repairs that will not bring increased assessments.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

The Rules and Regulations of the Police Department are hereby amended as follows, effective Friday, January 22, 1960, at 7.45 o'clock A.M.:

RULE 36—PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

On page 53, section 1, insert after paragraph 1(d) the following new paragraph:

(e) Vacation periods will be granted in each calendar year as follows:

January 22.

General Order No. 645.

Detectives First Grade Joseph F. Denney, William T. Eunson, and Thomas J. McGuire, all of the Detective Bureau, and detailed to the Robbery Squad, Bureau of Criminal Investigation, are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

After the arrest on November 28, 1959, and arraignment on December 1, 1959, of one William A. Baranow, now being held for the grand jury, for numerous larcenies and breaking and entering charges, including several at the Cumberland Farms Stores, on December 6, 1959, robberies started again and at the same store located at 2065 Washington street, Roxbury. These crimes were repeated on December 20 and December 26, making a total of five in number at the above location, with another being committed at the Cumberland Farms Store at 129 L street, South Boston, on December 12, 1959. The above subject, Baranow, could not have been implicated for the reason that he had been returned to State Prison for violation of his parole and is awaiting grand jury action.

About December 7, 1959, the above-named detectives received information relative to a car which could have been used in these crimes, the first letter and numerals F-36 with the last numerals unknown. Armed with this meager information, they spent night after night on their own time checking registrations in the F-36 series at the Registry of Motor Vehicles in the hope of recognizing a name or an address that might assist in their investigation.

In the meantime, crimes of violence were being committed and witnesses when shown photographs of known criminals were of the opinion that a person recently escaped from the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Walpole could have assaulted and robbed them. This information and partial identification did not satisfy these detectives and no attempt was made to secure process as a result of same. The identification had to be positive because they were of the opinion the person responsible for nine robberies from December 1 to December 26, 1959, could be a young man who had no police record.

About 3 P.M., December 29, 1959, Detectives Denney, Eunson and McGuire observed a young man operating an automobile in Tremont street, near Springfield street, accompanied by an eight-year-old boy, bearing Massachusetts Registration F-36058. They stopped the automobile and found the operator to be one James J. Zupkofska, age nineteen, male, single, date of birth June 23, 1940, of 679 Sea street, Quincy, Mass. Upon searching the automobile, they found a .32 caliber one-shot pistol on the back seat. Zupkofska was taken to Police Headquarters with his brother and later taken to 2065 Washington street, Roxbury, the Cumberland Farms Store, where he was positively identified by Edward Hannon, the manager, as the young man who robbed him on two occasions. Zupkofska insisted he knew nothing of any robberies and stated that he was never involved in any crimes.

He was returned to the Bureau of Criminal Investigation where, after lengthy questioning, he finally admitted that he did rob Edward Hannon twice, but these were the only crimes in which he was involved. Not being satisfied with his story, Detectives Denney, Eunson, and McGuire continued their questioning of Zupkofska until 4 o'clock in the morning of December 30, 1959, during which time he admitted the commission of the following crimes:

1. That on December 1, 1959, he being unarmed, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from George Rayberg $25 in U. S. currency at the Clifton Variety Store, 30 Clifton street, Roxbury.

2. That on December 6, 1959, he being unarmed, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Thomas Foley $80 in U. S. currency at 2065 Washington street, Roxbury, the property of the Cumberland Farms, Inc.

3. That on December 8, 1959, he being unarmed, did assault with intent to rob one John Salvadone at the Liberty Market, 255 Norfolk avenue, Roxbury, but was resisted and ran away without stealing any money.

4. That on December 8, 1959, he being armed with a .22 caliber pistol, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Jack Sipulkin, $6 in U. S. currency at Jack's Variety store, 76 Norfolk street, Dorchester, the property of Sipulkin.

5. That on December 12, 1959, he being armed with a .22 caliber pistol did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Thomas O'Keefe $55 in U. S. currency at 129 L street, South Boston, the property of the Cumberland Farms, Inc.

6. That on December 20, 1959, he being armed with a .22 caliber pistol, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Edward Hannon, $70 in U. S. currency at 2065 Washington street, Roxbury, the property of the Cumberland Farms, Inc.

7. That on December 15, 1959, he being unarmed did assault with intent to rob one Norman Rotman at the Clifton Market, 30 Clifton street, Roxbury, but fled from the scene without stealing any money when the clerk threatened him with a knife.

8. That on December 22, 1959, he being armed with a .22 caliber pistol did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Josephine Supple $40 in U. S. currency at the J. & J. Market, 38 East Cottage street, Roxbury, the property of the said Supple.

9. That on December 26, 1959, he being armed with a .22 caliber pistol did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Edward Hannon $50 in U. S. currency at 2065 Washington street, Roxbury, the property of the Cumberland Farms, Inc.

The parents of the said James J. Zupkofska were notified as was his attorney, Arthur Charney.

Zupkofska was booked as a suspicious person, to wit: suspicion of robbery while armed, fingerprinted, photographed, and remanded to the City Prison. He appeared in the Daily Lineup later that morning, December 30, 1959, at which time he made a complete statement, and he was identified by several witnesses as the person who had assaulted and robbed them during the previous month.

On December 30, 1959, he was arraigned in the Roxbury District Court before Judge Philip Tracey and through his attorney, Arthur Charney, pleaded not guilty, waived a hearing in that court, and was held in bail of $10,000 for the grand jury.

The Police Commissioner is pleased to recognize the outstanding police work performed by Detectives Joseph T. Denney, William T. Eunson, and Thomas J. McGuire in this case. These officers after successfully bringing to justice a subject now awaiting grand jury action for fifteen crimes of armed robbery, proceeded immediately on the investigation of other crimes being committed. Due to their perseverance and devotion to duty without regard to hours, they took into custody this individual who if permitted to continue in his life of crime could have resulted in the murder of one of his victims.

FIRE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

January 20.

General Order No. 5.

I. JAMES P. WALSH.

It is with deep regret that the Fire Commissioner announces the death on January 13, 1960, of Fire Fighter James P. Walsh of Engine Company 42. Fire Fighter Walsh collapsed during a fire at Box 2255, about 9:51 p.m., January 12, 1960. He was appointed to the Fire Department on January 12, 1944.

The funeral was held from the O'Connor Funeral Home, 1558 Tremont street, Roxbury, at 9:00 a.m., Saturday, January 16, 1960, followed by a Solemn High Mass of Requiem in the Mission Church, Roxbury, at 9:45 a.m.

The chief of department made the customary detail to act as a funeral escort and members of Engine Company 42 were excused from duty in order to attend the services.

II. HIGH COMMENDATION.

At 1:27 a.m., December 21, 1959, Ladder Company 21 responded to Box 6214 for a fire at 119 McClellan Highway, East Boston.

Upon arrival, members of the company found a well-developed fire involving the entire one and one-half story building. Blood stains running down the front of the building from a second-story window indicated that someone had smashed the glass and had tried unsuccessfully to smash through the window. Ladder Company 21 immediately raised an aerial ladder and Fire Fighter Leo M. Myott ascended the ladder, broke through a storm window and inside window and frame, entered the building, groped around and succeeded in locating a woman lying bleeding and unconscious on the floor where she had collapsed after breaking a window in a futile attempt to escape. He succeeded, after considerable effort, in bringing the victim to the window where he lifted her into the hands of other fire fighters on the ladder.

During the rescue work, the room was heavily charged with heat and smoke. Fire was racing across the ceiling of the room below and extending up inside the walls to the low-studded, pitched ceiling overhead. It had broken through the plaster at this location in several places.

Because Fire Fighter Myott performed this rescue work without regard for his own safety and under very dangerous conditions, the Fire Commissioner is pleased to commend him highly and his case is referred to the Board of Merit for further consideration.

January 26.

Chief of Department Leo C. Driscoll.

The following retirement, in accordance with section 6, chapter 32 of the General Laws, as amended, which became effective at 8 a.m., December 30, 1959, is hereby announced:

IV. DISCONTINUANCE OF A.D.T. SIGNAL.

Notice has been received from the American District Telegraph Company that the following signal has been discontinued:

Signal 515, Thomas Diab, 155 Berkeley street, Boston.

V. 1960 MARCH OF DIMES.

His Honor, Mayor John F. Collins, has appointed City Collector-Treasurer James E. Gildea chairman of the City Employees' Drive for the 1960 March of Dimes Campaign. His Honor is deeply interested in the success of the campaign, inasmuch as he knows from personal experience the tragedy that the onslaught of polio can bring upon a family.

The appeal is part of a nationwide effort to fight polio and other viruses, arthritis, birth defects and disorders of the central nervous system.

During 1959, the national foundation spent thousands of dollars in Suffolk County on old polio cases for hospitalization, physiotherapy, orthopedic appliances, clinical checkups, etc. Since the 1955 epidemic, during which families of several Boston fire fighters were aided by this foundation, there have been over 1,000 new cases causing an expenditure of over $1,000,000.

Polio can still strike as it did in Detroit's epidemic of 1958, when over 650 persons contracted the disease. It is therefore urgent to build the depleted polio fund to an amount equal to the needs of any future emergencies that we will have to meet.

Voluntary contributions are being solicited. Company commanders and heads of branches are asked to interview all members of their commands and accept any contributions that may be offered.

Members contributing should fill in their names and addresses on the stub end of the pledge card and also the amount contributed. The company commander, or other person collecting the money, shall give the large portion of the card to the person contributing as his or her receipt.

Please place the company number on the front right-hand corner of the stubs which are to be returned with the money to Principal Clerk and Stenographer Ruth P. McDonald in the Headquarters Division. Contributions and stubs will be received from 9 A.M. to 12 o'clock noon on each week day, except Saturday, and all contributions should be delivered on or before January 29, 1960.

TEMPORARY UPGRADING OF TWO LICENSING BOARD PERSONNEL

Director of Administrative Services John P. McMorro has approved the following:

DEAR SIR:

In reference to your communication dated January 12, 1960, please be advised that the change of status of two employees indicated on list accompanying said communication, was the result of upgrading temporarily two career Civil Service employees (Rita A. White and Gertrude A. Burke) until a promotional examination is held. These promotions became available as the result of the Board's appointing the head clerk to fill the vacancy of the late Joel L. Miller, secretary. Another career employee was temporarily upgraded to head clerk prior to the Lane Duck period.

The one recent provisional appointment of senior clerk (Robert Range) was a continuation of a series of three-month appointments for a period of about two years to an employee who is now awaiting results of Civil Service examination to fill a permanent vacancy of senior clerk and typist.

This is indeed a small department with only a quota of twelve Civil Service employees which could not stand a further cut in personnel without affecting adversely the efficiency of this department. It is respectfully requested that the above change of status appointments be ratified and the provisional appointment of Robert Range be authorized by yourself and the Supervisor of Personnel immediately, so that his pay will not be unduly delayed.

Very truly yours,

CLARENCE R. ELAM,
Chairman.

OFFICIAL CHRONICLE OF BOSTON MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1960

No. 6

ALL OUT EFFORT TO "HOLD THE LINE" ON TAX RATE

Mayor John F. Collins, on February 1, submitted to the City Council his City-County budget estimates for 1960.

A total of $123,937,143 allowed for 1960 expenditures is approximately $2.4 million less than last year's departmental appropriations. These reductions were made despite the fact that an additional $1 million must be provided for salary increases granted in 1959 but which were in effect only during a portion of last year.

Mayor's Pledge

From the 1960 budget requests submitted by department heads at the close of 1959, Mayor Collins cut $13.7 million.

In this connection the Mayor said:

"Such a reduction in departmental requests, which is, I am informed, the largest of its kind in the city's history, reflects the desire of this administration to adhere to the 'no hire' policy in every possible way so that substantial reductions in operating expenses can offer our beleaguered Boston homeowners and rent payers some relief from the staggering burden they now bear.

"The specter of the $9.7 million increase in fixed charges, which includes an increase in the MTA deficit, increases in pension costs, and pay increases granted during 1959, will be met squarely by this administration. We shall continue our efforts to offset this amount with economies in the operating budget, so that, at present, there is good reason to hope that there will be no substantial increase in this year's tax rate. So confident am I of this possibility that I feel I can forecast with some degree of accuracy today that elimination of at least twenty of the twenty-two-million-dollar increase, a "nightmare" which confronted us on January 4, may be expected shortly. We shall do everything humanly possible to hold the line on Boston's tax rate. I renew that pledge to our Boston citizens today.

Hour of Crisis

"In all candor, I desire to point out that I am also aware of the fact that the elimination of many desirable capital improvements may be thought to be merely postponing the day of reckoning, but I feel that our obligation in this hour of crisis must first be directed toward the preservation of the city as an independent governmental unit.

"Failure to recognize the dire financial position in which our city now finds itself would have far more serious consequences. It is not an exaggeration for me to state that the very existence of our beloved city depends upon our ability to eliminate from our budget every single item representing waste and extravagance or unessential expenditures, and, also, upon our willingness to learn to live within our means. It is imperative that we cut the cloth to fit the purse and each and every department or agency receiving an appropriation must begin from this moment on to exercise the very admirable virtue of self-control."

The 1960 budget estimates of the School Committee total $36.8 million. This is more than $2 million more than last year's appropriation. The Mayor is at present studying this budget. Where the amount exceeds the $22 million statutory limit, the Mayor and City Council have the power to make reductions.

Details of Budget in Next Issue of "City Record"

Editor's Note.—Details of the Mayor's 1960 budget estimates were made part of the minutes of the City Council for the February 1 meeting. These minutes will appear in the "City Record" issue of February 13.

WHO SHOULD PICK UP THE TAB FOR SUFFOLK COUNTY?

"Should Expenses for Suffolk County Government Be Absorbed by the State?"

This was the topic discussed in the fifth panel session of the Annual Conference on Municipal Administration held November 19 and 20 at the Boston Public Library Auditorium.

Moderator for the panel was Associate Justice Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr., of the Probate Court for Suffolk County.

The panelists were:

John A. Daly, Executive Secretary, Supreme Judicial Court.

Edward V. Keating, Assistant Clerk, Superior Court for Criminal Business.

City Councillor Joseph C. White, who by virtue of office is a County Commissioner of Suffolk County.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The text of Mr. White's remarks will be published next week, following the seventh and last installment of the Conferama series.

REMARKS OF THE MODERATOR

The purpose of today's first panel is to discuss the question "Should Expenses for County Government be Absorbed by the State?"

As to that the City of Boston is in a most anomalous position.

In the first place, except for Boston and the town of Nantucket, the cities and towns of the Commonwealth have no direct control over the costs of the counties in which they happen to be situated. The State Legislature determines the amount a given county may spend each year, and then apportions the cost among the constituent cities and towns in the form of the so-called county tax. There is no apportionment for Suffolk County, since by law the City of Boston pays virtually all Suffolk County costs, nor for Nantucket which is the sole municipality in Nantucket County.

The City Council of the City of Boston, with the Mayor, acting as County Commissioners, appropriate items in the so-called Suffolk County budget, a major part of which is composed of court costs.

SIXTH OF A SERIES

This is the sixth of a series of seven installments which will completely cover the two-day Conferama sessions of 1959.

Budget Comparisons

For purpose of comparison, the total city budget for 1959 was $114,233,230; the county budget made $8,144,455 additional, a figure which represents $4.20 out of the $101.20 total tax rate.

What are the chief items in this total county budget of $8,144,455?

Personal services comprise $5,900,265, or about three quarters of the total.

Maintenance and operation of county buildings alone aggregate $3,048,349, despite the fact that the state has already assumed 30 per cent of the maintenance of the Pemberton Square Court House incident to the construction of the so-called new Court House.

Not only does the City of Boston pay all Suffolk County expenses, in a county which comprises the cities of Chelsea and Revere, and the town of Winthrop, as well as the City of Boston, but a very substantial portion of court business conducted within the County of Suffolk is by State Courts—not merely our so-called municipal or district court—and including the Supreme Judicial Court.

Traditionally and actually all the courts of our Commonwealth, called by whatever name, are state courts. They are all part of the judicial branch of our state government, with all judges appointed by the Governor, with the approval of the Governor's Council.

Boston's Share

Traditionally each county, including Boston acting for Suffolk County, has paid the cost of maintenance of all court house buildings and the cost of operation of all courts geographically located within each respective county, just as our cities and towns once appear to have carried the cost of the pauper and the less fortunate found to be legally resident in each city and town. And yet today both federal and state governments have apparently found it more advisable and equitable to assume the major share of that burden which for Boston in 1959 will exceed $25,000,000. At present the city actually now pays 14.9 per cent of Old Age Assistance; 21.7 per cent of Aid to Dependent Children, and 25 per cent of Aid for the Totally Disabled, or about 20 per cent overall; the balance has been assumed by the federal government and the Commonwealth.

Certainly with even greater logic the Commonwealth should recognize and be responsible for the housing and operation of the judicial branch of our state government, most especially in the County of Suffolk where such a substantial part of litigation in the state is concentrated.

Courts A State Responsibility

Whatever may be the preference in the other thirteen counties as to disposition of this county government problem, time would now seem to have proved for Boston that the assumption of all Suffolk County costs, in return for so-called "control" of Suffolk County affairs, is a doubtful and costly privilege. And the word "control" itself may well be a misnomer when we consider that the members of more than one City Council in Boston, acting as County Commissioners, have in the past been warned that actually there must be annually appropriated just about whatever the various courts may claim is required for continued and efficient operation.

In other words, in the final analysis, the Courts of this Commonwealth are the Judicial Branch of our state government, and as such should logically be supported financially by the state.

MASSACHUSETTS COURTS AND THEIR EFFECT ON LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

By John A. Daly

The subject of my part in this next period of panel discussion is our court system in Massachusetts, with particular reference to its effect on local governments in the state. In view of your official positions in the government of the City of Boston you naturally are interested in the impact of the courts on the city. Necessarily, in the time available my discussion must be somewhat summary, but I will try at least to cover the more important features.

Taking up first the court system itself, we in this state are fortunate in having a relatively simple organization. We have seven courts; four of these we of the legal profession think of as courts of general trial or appellate jurisdiction and the others as specialized courts, dealing with some limited field of judicial activity.

Supreme Court

Our highest court is the supreme judicial court. This is the court to which appeals from other courts are taken for final decision. It has a chief justice and six associate justices. It is also charged under the law with general supervision of the other courts, and my office of executive secretary has as its function the helping of the court in this supervision. Its importance as an appellate court is not limited to deciding the appeals one way or the other. It must also render these decisions in written opinions. These become the precedents by which future cases are to be decided, and, of equal importance, by which lawyers are to be guided in advising their clients. While the hearing of appeals is by far the most important part of this court's activity, it still has a considerable amount of original jurisdiction. Formerly it was a very active trial court; some of the greatest opinions by the earlier judges, particularly the famous Chief Justice Lemuel Shaw, were given at original trials. To this day the court still has this original jurisdiction, and in practice still exercises it in a number of types of cases. The most generally used of these are what are called the prerogative writs, such as habeas corpus, mandamus. Once a week a single justice of the court sits to hear these original cases. It should be of interest to you that in a quiet room on the tenth floor of the Pemberton Square court house a judge of our court, without any fanfare, guarantees to every citizen the greatest of all his civil liberties, the right to be free from arbitrary arrest, by hearing the petitions for habeas corpus writs. These are the writs by which any person holding another in custody can be summoned before the court and be required to justify the detention. If he does not justify it on grounds good under the law, he must free the prisoner and the court will so order.

Superior Court

Next we have the superior court. This has been well called the great trial court. It is the only one which sits with the constitutional juries of twelve; also it is the only one with general equity jurisdiction, except the supreme judicial court itself. It alone can hear all accusations of the commission of crimes from the most petty to the most serious, and with and without juries. The magnitude of its work can be seen from the fact that in any year it will have between 35,000 and 40,000 civil suits and 12,000 to 14,000 criminal cases of one kind or another. It is a state-wide court, whose writs, as we lawyers say, run in every county. The judges travel around on circuit in the fourteen counties. The court has a chief justice, who is its very important administrative head, and thirty-seven associate justices. Its administrative office is at the Pemberton Square court house in Boston.

Lower Courts

I next mention our third and fourth courts of general trial jurisdiction. These are the district courts and the municipal court of the City of Boston. We can conveniently consider them together, as their jurisdiction is similar, although they are two separate courts. The Boston municipal court has a chief justice and eight associate justices, all of whom devote their full time to the court and do not practice law. Its territorial jurisdiction is the downtown area of Boston, the west end and the south end in general. There are seventy-two district courts scattered through the rest of Suffolk County and the other thirteen counties. Four of these courts have two judges each, so there are seventy-six district court judges in all, the others having one apiece. Forty of the courts are, like the Boston municipal court, full-time courts, in which the judges devote all their time to their judicial work and do not maintain law offices. In the others, which are the smaller districts, the judges may practice law, and many of them in fact do so. Except for a few special matters they do not have any equity jurisdiction, but have unlimited civil jurisdiction concurrent with the superior court at law.

On the criminal side their jurisdiction is extensive, including all charges on which a sentence up to five years in State Prison can be imposed. This is undoubtedly the widest criminal jurisdiction of any lower court system in the country. The district courts other than the Boston municipal court are organized under the control of an administrative committee of five of the judges. I consider these municipal and district courts a triumph of common sense, realism, and progressiveness in the state. This does not mean that they are perfect and, as far as I am concerned, I hope to see further progress made. They have been brought a long way from petty police courts, which they were as recently as about forty years ago. Why do I refer to the system as a triumph? It is because their organization is so simple, their jurisdiction so clear-cut and well defined, and at the same time so extensive and because in no way directly or indirectly does the compensation of any judge depend on fees. Throughout the country you will find that the greatest failure of court organization and administration is the local court. Nearly everywhere you will encounter a myriad of petty courts, generally independent of each other, often overlapping each other both in their territorial and judicial jurisdiction, almost invariably with only petty criminal jurisdiction and even smaller civil jurisdiction, where they have any. There is usually a most confusing system of appeals, many judges are paid only from fees collected, and many of these petty tribunals are still presided over by laymen. In most states they cling tenaciously to these antiquated types of courts. As you can well imagine, they form a very powerful vested interest.

Our district courts do not have juries. Therefore, in criminal cases, to ensure the right to trial by jury, defendants have an absolute right of appeal to the superior court. In practice only a small fraction of the cases are appealed—in the year ending June 30, 1958, about 4,000 out of a total of over 235,000. Giving the present broad jurisdiction to these courts about thirty years ago was a master stroke, and so was the making of the larger courts into full-time courts in 1956. In my office we consider the ideal to be the eventual elimination of all part-time judicial service, and bring about the situation where every litigant, civil or criminal, will have his cause heard by a man who is a judge only and not even to the lease degree a lawyer. Our lower courts have rightly been called the people's courts, for the ordinary man, living a normal life, will never have occasion to meet any of the others. You can easily see that it is a matter of prime importance that none of these courts must ever be allowed to bog down. Should any of the others get clogged or become inefficient, it is a matter of regret, calling for remedy, but we could endure it, but we could never endure a failure of the district courts.

Specialized Courts

Now coming to the specialized courts. We have a system of probate courts. These, as indicated by the name, deal with wills, distribution of estates, handling of trusts, adoptions, guardianships, and similar matters. In addition to their function of hearing disputes these courts have also the important administrative function of keeping records, evidencing the ownership of property or the establishment of personal relations. In Massachusetts there is more to the probate courts than this probate work. They also have a wide jurisdiction in domestic trouble cases, such as petitions for legal separation and libels for divorce. About the divorce jurisdiction, there is a curious story. Around 1923 the superior court was in a seriously clogged condition and cases were not being heard promptly. At that time it alone had jurisdiction over divorce. Some genius got the idea of giving the probate courts concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court, on the theory that at least some part of the divorce cases would be shifted to the probate courts, to the relief to that extent of the superior court. The idea was passed by the Legislature. Tradition has it that a goodly part of the then probate judges wanted no part of divorce business, but it was thrust on them. If ever there was a successful move to relieve congestion in the superior court this was it. Within a few years, except in one county, the probate courts had taken over the entire divorce business. Today there are many lawyers who do not know that the superior court still has concurrent jurisdiction and if they heard of it would regard it as an amusing bit of antiquarian lore. Alone of all the courts, the probate courts are strictly county courts, with one in each county, manned by a total of twenty-two judges. This is not by any means a happy situation. The difference in the volume of work is naturally very wide between the larger and the smaller counties, and there is a differential in the rates of pay. This remains true, even though since 1937, all the judges except those on the islands of Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard are forbidden to practice law. The courts were created just after the Revolution, in 1784, and it can correctly be said that their organization or lack of it remains the same today, although their jurisdiction has been enormously increased.

Land Court

I next describe an institution entirely peculiar to Massachusetts. This is our land court. We have the Torrens system of land registration; this is a complicated law by which title to land can be judicially determined, or registered, and is thereafter unassailable; once registered it can be conveyed only by the registered land system of transfers and recording. To administer this system, to adjudicate titles to land and to hear controversies concerning such titles we have the land court. It is a court of state-wide jurisdiction. Its office is in Boston, but it can hold sessions anywhere in the state. It has three judges, all appointed on a full-time basis. As might be expected a great part of its work is administrative rather than litigious. In connection with its business there is a curious manifestation of how the profession operates. In many, perhaps even the majority, of petitions brought in the land court in which there is a controversy, the defendants, called there the respondents, have an absolute right to trial by jury. Yet a claim of jury is so rare as to be a curiosity when it happens. The land court itself has no jury, but is empowered to refer jury claims to the superior court for trial of the issue. Yet in the superior court at law the large majority of the cases are tried before juries. The explanation is that two entirely different types of lawyers practice in the two courts. In the land court we have the experts on the abstruse subject of land titles, used to meticulous examination of records and their correlation, in the superior court we have most cases handled by the general trial men, to whom trials before juries become second nature, fluent in speech, animated by a spirit of competitiveness, enjoying matching their abilities against equally keen opponents.

Juvenile Court

Our last court is the most specialized of all. This is the Boston juvenile court. It has power to hear cases against juveniles or against people who commit criminal offenses against juveniles. It is an important tool in the effort to reduce juvenile delinquency and to have our youth grow up into useful citizens rather than weaklings or scoundrels. Actually it is primarily a sociological rather than a judicial institution. It has one judge.

All of our judges, without any exception, are appointed by the governor with the advice and consent of the governor's council to serve during good behavior, commonly called life tenure. In this life tenure Massachusetts and Rhode Island are alone in the country, although there is a marked tendency to extend judicial tenure in many states. Some almost in actual practice approach life tenure.

Effects On Local Government

Thus having briefly described the high lights of our court organization itself, we consider how it affects local government. This establishment costs money. In my office we undertake each year to calculate this cost and to see how it is divided. In the last reporting period, which for the state is the fiscal year ending June 30, 1958, and for Boston and the counties the calendar year of 1958, the gross cost was $18,500,000. After deducting receipts such as fees and fines, of which more is said later, the net cost came to $15,747,000. I should mention that others making this calculation might well arrive at a slightly different figure. For instance, these figures include a part of the expense of the district attorneys' offices, on the theory that part of their duty is to assist the courts in the hearing and disposition of criminal cases. Others might plausibly enough say that the expenses of the district attorneys belong under the heading of law enforcement rather than court work. A warning about these figures. There is one important item for which no records of any kind are available. This is the very real item of depreciation and obsolescence of court house buildings owned by the public. It appears not to be customary in public accounting to make allowance for these items. After all, they do not have to pay income taxes. Here is a serious gap in public bookkeeping, which those of you who are in record-keeping and accounting offices could well consider. Private concerns can devise methods of recording depreciation. Why not public corporations?

Court Costs

There is one thing about our figures which would strike a visitor from out of state familiar with court operations as quite strange. This is the small difference between the gross and the net. While our gross cost, considering the complexity of the state and the services demanded of the courts is undoubtedly very moderate in comparison with analogous communities, the proportion of net cost to gross is very high; it may well be the highest in the country, and certainly is the highest among the states where compilations of court costs have come to my attention. This is explained by the fact that Massachusetts is traditionally a state in which it is believed access to the courts should be made easy and cheap. Thus to bring a case in the superior court only the nominal fee of $5 is required for filing, $10 if an injunction is asked; for this the litigant will get all the services of the superior court, including trial by jury if the case is one in which this is a right of the parties. It has been estimated that, making proper cost allowances, it costs on a conservative basis $650 a day to maintain a jury session in operation. If a loser wants to appeal to the supreme judicial court he has to pay the cost of preparing the record, but to enter the case it again costs him only $5. For this he gets the attendance of five of the seven judges at the argument of his case and the filing of the judge assigned to write the opinion, to say nothing of the clerical expense involved in preparing the lists for argument and the opinion for publication. In the district courts he pays only $2 to enter the case. In the probate courts the fees vary according to different kinds of petitions; all are nominal except the divorce fee which is $10. Once paid, the parties get all the services of the court for no further expense. Just for illustration, compare the divorce fee with that in Connecticut. There it cost $16 to file the case and $50 to record the decree, without which the decree is worthless. So it costs $66 for the same thing costing $10 here. I am not advocating general or drastic increases in fees, or a change in our policy that approach to the courts should cost practically nothing. In passing, we might add that in the land court alone are the fees more than nominal. It recovers about 30 per cent of its costs in the fees paid to it. Our fines also appear to be more moderate and our judges more lenient than is customary in other states, particularly in traffic cases.

Archaic Methods

Who, then, pays all this money?

If I have had much praise for our court organization itself, I have none for our financial methods of handling the costs. A more archaic, confused, unjust system could hardly be imagined. The state assumes a part, roughly about a sixth, the City of Boston pays about three tenths, and the counties outside Suffolk pay the rest. For examples of capricious and illogical applications of the law I could go on almost indefinitely. I will take the time to mention just one, and by no means the most ridiculous. As already stated, the probate courts alone of the seven courts are strictly county courts, independent of each other. One might expect that if any expenses at all were to be paid by the counties, it would be the cost of these courts. But we find nothing as sensible as this. The state pays the salaries of the judges, the registers and the assistant registers and most of the office expenses of the registers. Thus by far the larger part of their costs is paid by the state. The counties furnish the court premises and assume a trifling part of the office expenses, allocated, curiously enough, to the preservation of records. Making the records is paid for by the state but preserving them, whatever that may mean, is at the cost of the county.

The allocation of fines paid in criminal cases almost baffles description. I will not attempt to burden you with it in this short discussion. It is enough to say that they get divided between the state, the counties and the cities and towns under a capricious formula, bearing little or no relation to reality.

Effects On Boston

You have been waiting to hear how the City of Boston comes into the picture. It is a complicated, and for you, as officials and citizens of Boston, a very sad story. To begin with, by two statutes passed in 1820 and 1830 Boston assumed all the expenses of Suffolk County, including courts, and exonerated Chelsea, then including what is now Revere and Winthrop, permanently. Chelsea gave up any interest in county property, ownership of which is, of course, a liability rather than an asset. It may well be suspected that the actual motive of the then city fathers in making this apparently bad bargain was to get all the county patronage and not share it with Chelsea. However that may be, the trade was made. It must also be remembered that while Boston from very early days was the largest and most active town in the colony and later the state for a long time its economic and political greatness did not tremendously exceed that of some of the other communities, like Salem in the heyday of the China trade or New Bedford in the whaling days. But as the decades went on Boston steadily became far and away the most important political, business, and banking center, not only of the state but of all New England outside the orbit of New York. It may be that only now, with the creation of the great superhighways and the decline of the railroads we are seeing the dispersion of some of this economic concentration. As a necessary consequence Boston became not only the great political and economic center, but the leading legal center. By a date not long after the Civil War all the great law firms had concentrated in Boston. It continues to be the most important legal center by a wide margin to this day. It is not surprising that more equity cases are tried in Boston than in all the rest of the state put together. These are apt to be long cases. The disparity is not so pronounced in the jury cases, but is nevertheless substantial. Except for a week in the western counties the supreme judicial court sits only in Boston. Thus the expense of operating courts in Boston, particularly the two highest courts, is far out of proportion to the population, assessed value, or any other standard that might be used to measure it. With one minor exception every bit of this expense falls on the city. Within recent years the state has arranged to pay 30 per cent of the maintenance cost of the Pemberton Square court house. This is only the physical upkeep of the building and involves no credit for cost of the structure or services of city offices or any other matters of expense which go into the cost of acquiring ownership and of keeping track of it. Thus it results that the city, with less than a sixth of the state's population, pays close to a third of the court costs. Last year it amounted to something over $4,500,000. This means close to $3 on the tax rate; perhaps it will be even more when the next total valuation is calculated. All in all, a sorry story for the city and its taxpayers.

Other Municipalities

The other municipalities also feel the weight of court costs, in a more indirect way. The method of meeting county expenses is that they get a budget approved by the Legislature each year, which includes their court expenses, and after crediting expected receipts are authorized to levy a tax on the cities and towns in the county to pay it, the so-called county tax. This is not billed to the taxpayers but is levied on the municipalities, proportionately according to their formula under a 1945 act of apportionment, and in turn the assessors include it in their levy. Thus the cost both in Boston and in the other cities and towns is actually borne by the real estate taxpayers. It can readily be seen that the county commissioners and the Boston officials are sensitive about tax rates and therefore sensitive about costs of running courts. This has, perhaps unconsciously, resulted in a reluctance to make any unusual expenditures on courts, no matter how badly needed. I have been very disagreeably impressed with the physical accommodations of many of our courts. New or remodeled court houses are badly needed in many places. We have one horrible example of wretched court accommodations right here in the old wing of the Pemberton Square court house. The Roxbury court house has been long since outgrown. But, unfortunate as these situations are, we shall never have any coordinated program of improvement as long as we continue with the present system of divided responsibility. We will get spasmodic improvement here and there, depending on how vigorous local bar associations are and how disagreeable they make themselves, but that is all.

Frank Criticism

In my reports I have criticized the existing condition of the law regulating court expenses. To be frank about it. I will admit that I have been quite unpleasant about it. I make no criticism of any county commissioner, past or present. The mediocre results are the inevitable results of the archaic and impractical system. I have not been content merely to growl about it but have advocated the transfer of all court costs to the state once and for all. There is plain logic to this as well as justice. It is the obligation of the state to see to it that justice is administered and that courts are made available to the citizens. It is not a matter of indifference to you here in Boston if justice should break down in some other part of the state. It is grotesquely unjust that a function such as court administration should be at the cost of one limited class of taxpayer, meaning the real estate owner, instead of those who pay state taxes; this is a much broader class, even if only the income tax is thought of, and if a sales tax should eventually be passed, would be still broader.

It is only being realistic to say that however illogical, unjust, and indefensible the present scheme is, it is also one of the most firmly rooted vested interests in the state. In one way or another court costs represent year in and year out something around 35 per cent of all county expenses. Few administrators ever want to give up voluntarily the power and prestige involved in handling an important public activity. Also to be realistic, another vested interest is the advantage now enjoyed over Boston by the other communities under the present system. True, they suffer from it, but Boston suffers more, so why equalize the misery? They may no doubt sympathize with Boston for its plight under the weird law, but it is something else when it is suggested that they assume a larger part of the burden, no matter how indirectly.

I have tried to cover a very large subject in a very small space of time. I hope that, even though the treatment of the subjects has had to be sketchy and summary, it has been of interest to you and has added to your store of knowledge of governmental functions and operations. When the question period comes along I will be glad to try to answer any questions on my special subjects. Please remember our time is limited. Please make them questions and do not base them on statements of fact which I might not concede, and above all please make them short and pointed, so that short and pointed answers can be given.

AN APPRAISAL OF COURT COSTS

By Edward V. Keating

In approaching a discussion of this question, I think it would be wise to determine at the outset what is meant by county government, its historical significance and its place as a governmental unit at the present time.

Bouviere's Law Dictionary states that in English Law, the word county signifies the same as the word shire, county being derived from the French and shire from the Saxon. Both these words signify a circuit or portion of the realm into which the whole land is divided for the better government thereof and the more easy administration of justice. There is no part of England that is not within some county; and the Sheriff was the governor of the province under the Count.

It would appear from the foregoing, that the specific function of county government at its inception was for the enhancement of better government and the easy administration of justice. Most of the early settlers of New England had immigrated from England and it was natural that they not only adopted the English Common Law for the governing of the colonies, but should also bring with them certain forms of government which were deeply imbedded and accepted as the form of government known to them in the land of their forefathers.

Origins of Counties

In the early days in England, having in mind that there were no modern highways or rapid means of transportation or communication that it was necessary for the efficient administration of government to divide the country into districts or counties with the Sheriff as its head, and so in the early days of our country it followed that we, too, should have a governmental unit known as the county which in Massachusetts were the aggregate of a number of towns joined together.

It is admitted that the purest form of democratic government is the New England town meeting where each citizen has the right to make known his views for the administration of town affairs and I think it is agreed that the further away we get from the town meeting form of government the more centralized and impersonal our government becomes, and as a consequence becomes less responsive to the will of the people. In the formation of the structure of our government, on a national scale, some of the great debates were held on the question of whether or not we should have a strong federal government, or a government in which states rights should be predominant and while it is agreed that a strong centralized government is a necessity in dealing with certain aspects of our welfare, such as the conduct of our foreign affairs, there are many who feel that in other phases of our government, control should be exercised by the states, for example in the conduct of our school systems, all, of course, within the framework of our federal constitution. This difference of opinion over a strong federal government as against a strong state government still continues down to the present day and is ever present in the conduct of our affairs. It is conceded by many that states should be supreme except in those areas where state government is inadequate for the problems at hand and where the national welfare and safety and interest of the whole people are concerned. In my time, I have witnessed the advent of the most serious depression in our history and were it not, I submit, for the measures taken and the enactment of certain laws by a strong federal government, many of which appeared to be an invasion of those rights and duties reserved to the states, I would hesitate to predict the future welfare of our country. Many of the laws passed at that time, although bitterly opposed both on the floors of Congress and by proceedings in courts to test their validity and constitutionality, are now accepted by a majority of our citizens and these laws have not only been approved by the opposition party, but were later extended and enlarged by the opposition party when it came into power in the federal government.

One might well ask at this point what has all this to do with the question at hand, but before taking up that question, I would like to digress for a moment to discuss and to bring up to date the functions of county government.

Suffolk County is Unique

As a citizen of Boston at the present day, one does not think of or appraise our Suffolk County government in the same way that a citizen of any other one of the other thirteen counties which comprise our state. So-called county government in Boston is vastly different in that Suffolk County, which consists of Boston, Chelsea, Winthrop, and Revere, is exclusively controlled by the City of Boston. Since the early part of the nineteenth century, by virtue of an agreement between the foregoing cities and towns, Boston assumed all the costs of Suffolk County government and in return Chelsea, Winthrop, and Revere gave up their control of county affairs. While many of our citizens contend that this arrangement is unfair and costly to the City of Boston, I submit, that if Chelsea, Winthrop, and Revere were to share in the cost of county government in accordance with their population the amount they would contribute would be insignificant in relation to the total cost and would not, I feel, materially help the City of Boston in its present dilemma.

Boston's Role Also Unique

In Suffolk County, the Mayor and the City Council of the City of Boston are the county commissioners. The City Treasurer and Auditor are the county treasurer and auditor, so that for all practical purposes the County of Suffolk is the City of Boston and as a result, Suffolk County has lost its original significance as a county. The concept of county government is entirely different in the other thirteen counties and county affairs are in the hands of the County Commissioners and County Treasurer who are elected by the citizens of the county. The total expenditures of Suffolk County are made for the maintenance of the superior and district courts, the sheriff's expenses, for maintenance of the Charles Street Jail, for a part of the expenses of the District Attorney's office, for a part of the maintenance of the Registry of Probate, for the expenses of the Registry of Deeds, and for the major part of the maintenance of the court house in Pemberton Square, Boston, the state having agreed and passed a law at the time that the new wing of the court house was built, to assume the payment of 30 per cent of the cost of its maintenance. In the other thirteen counties, the county expenditures not only include the cost of maintenance of the court and jails and so forth, as in Suffolk County, but they also include the cost of maintaining roads in conjunction with the state and federal government and the maintenance of hospitals and sanatoriums.

Importance of the Hub City

Boston, it is agreed, is the principal city not only of the Commonwealth, but also of New England. Here one finds a concentration of business, both commercial and banking, the offices of the majority of large law firms and also here one finds the great tax-free colleges and museums. It contains the tax-free Federal Reserve Bank which not only serves Boston but the entire New England states, together with our great Federal Building and our Central Post Office buildings serving Boston and the whole metropolitan area. It further contains a majority of the great hospitals of the state and its reputation as a medical center of the country is unsurpassed. Contained within it is a large Police Force and Fire Department, which in time of need benefit the so-called fringe cities and towns.

It is recognized that Boston is faced with a serious financial problem. Pressed against the sea by fringe communities, the city is deprived of the possibility of geographical expansion and it now has a tax rate which is one of the highest in the country with a promise of a further increase next year. Its tax base is shrinking and its costs are increasing and unless it can find new sources of revenue or reduce its spending, the predictions for the future of Boston are not very bright. Many thousands of people although living in towns and cities outside of Boston work in our city and use its many expensive facilities.

Boston's Heavy Cost Burden

As First Assistant Clerk of the Superior Criminal Court for the County of Suffolk, I am familiar with some of the court costs in the administration of justice which do not all properly belong to nor should be entirely borne by the County of Suffolk. I shall mention only a few. The supreme judicial court of the Commonwealth although a state-wide court, with the exception of a very short time when it sits for the hearing of cases in one of our western counties, transacts practically all of its business in Boston. The Appellate Division of the Superior Court, which sits from time to time in Boston only for the hearing of certain appeals for the review of sentences imposed in certain criminal cases, is a branch of the superior court, which is a state-wide court. The Appellate Division hears appeals not only in cases originally tried in Suffolk County, but also hears appeals in cases which originate in any other county of the Commonwealth. The entire expense of this procedure, with the exception of the judges' salaries and the salaries of the district attorney and his assistants, are borne by the County of Suffolk which, as I have already pointed out, is actually the City of Boston.

Out-of-Towners Benefit

As I stated before, most of the large law firms and lawyers are concentrated in the City of Boston and, as a result, they bring actions of law or in equity in the county most convenient for them for the conduct of their business, and as the statutes allow in many instances a choice of counties within which actions or proceedings may be brought, we find in Suffolk County many actions and proceedings entered in our superior court, the parties to which are strangers to the City of Boston and, of course, it follows they are not taxpayers and do not share in the cost of maintaining our court system in Suffolk County. A prime example of this situation happened only a short time ago and was reported in our daily newspapers. The news item informed the public about the first labor dispute under a new statute that involved the Berkshire Street Railway Company and the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America. The proceedings were originally brought before the superior court in Pittsfield, but the trial thereof had to be transferred from Pittsfield to Boston because as reported in the newspaper, only one court room and only one judge was available at Pittsfield. In order to provide the required three judges in Boston, three regular sessions of the superior court had to be suspended so that the cases that would normally be heard by these three judges had to await the finish of the labor case or were referred to other judges of the superior court sitting in Suffolk County, already carrying an overburden of case work. It is readily apparent that in this instance none of the parties involved were taxpayers of the City of Boston and therefore do not contribute to the cost of these proceedings. I do agree, however, that the state does pay a small part of the total cost because the judges' salaries are paid by the Commonwealth. The fact still remains that this trial, which could last a great many court days or weeks, could cost the City of Boston conservatively speaking $500 per day or $2,500 per week and if the trial lasted a month could cost $10,000 or more. Multiply this and similar situations many times over in the course of the year and you would be adding greatly to the county budget. Further, many equity cases are transferred from a great many outside counties to Suffolk County for the speedier dispatch of court business and for the convenience of the lawyers and parties involved. In fact so much business of outside counties is conducted in Boston that it became necessary many years ago to enact a law giving to the court power to appoint an Assistant Clerk of the Superior Court for Civil Business to act also as Equity Clerk for the Commonwealth. To be sure, the Commonwealth pays a small part of his salary but the balance of the cost of handling these outside cases with the exception of the judge's salary is paid by Suffolk County.

Reappraisal Needed

The right to live under a democratic form of government can indeed be expensive, but I do not feel, in spite of its cost, that we are ready to give up any of our precious rights granted to us under our Constitution. The foregoing points up in no small degree the problems facing the City of Boston and does, I feel, give credence to the claims of those who cry out for help in meeting the expense of the administration of justice in Suffolk County.

I feel that my statements here today justify the taking of a new look at our county government and a reappraisal of the structure in the light of present-day events having in mind that our state, since the original laying out of county boundaries, has virtually shrunk in size because of our present-day rapid means of transportation and communication.

We have come a long way from the horse and buggy days and our means of transportation has advanced even more rapidly in the past 25 years than it did in the previous 100 years. I can well remember when I first used our new Massachusetts Turnpike. I reached the westernmost part of our state in a matter of a few hours, much to my amazement. I know that in days past, many of our judges of the superior court who live in Boston when assigned to outlying counties were compelled to live in the county to which they were assigned because of the great distance they had to travel to their homes, whereas, at the present time, many now return to their homes nightly because of our fast means of transportation.

Archaic Boundaries

The question arises does the county unit as a form of government serve its original purpose at the present time for the better government thereof and the more easy administration of justice? Are our county boundary lines archaic and unrealistic in these times? Do they serve the purposes for which they were originally intended?

There are many well-thinking citizens who feel that our county form of government should be overhauled and amended to meet the demands of our modern society in order to keep abreast of ever-changing conditions. On the other hand in those counties which do not have problems as great as those confronting the City of Boston, there are those who are satisfied to carry on as heretofore feeling that the problems of the City of Boston and Suffolk County are the problems of its citizens only, and while their feelings may be understandable, they do not take into account, as herein pointed out, that Boston is the principal city not only of the Commonwealth but of the whole of New England and that Boston's illness could well affect a large portion of the state causing a creeping paralysis which would eventually affect the well-being of the Commonwealth.

State Assistance Needed

I think the situation can well be likened to our own physical body, having in mind that when one part of it is affected by illness, all parts are thereby impaired. I am not a Utopian or an idealist, however, and I am not one of those who believes that the citizens of the other counties are as yet willing to give up their control over county government, having in mind the large patronage, control, and the vested interest which it involves, together with its power and influence in our State Legislature so that the problem of Boston in relation to its county government expenses will not, I feel, be solved by attempting to change the county as a governmental unit. I do not believe that the other thirteen counties are willing at the present time, nor November 16, 1959. It is proposed to clear about 90 buildings presently on the site after some 250 families have been relocated. The proposed re-use plan provides for three high-rise apartment buildings; each one will house about 270 families. The new construction will be undertaken by private limited dividend corporations, operating under Chapter 121A of the General Laws. The success of this project is expected to stimulate a series of similar efforts aimed at meeting the demand for new rental housing for families of moderate income. An agreement to lease one third of the area for development has been executed with the Beacon Redevelopment Corporation. Negotiations are being completed for the execution of leases with two other responsible redevelopers for the remainder of the area.

The Authority has completed title searches in the project area. Engineering surveys are being made in preparation for an eminent domain taking which is expected to take place in the middle of the year.

Washington Park

In May, 1959, an application was submitted to the Housing and Home Finance Agency for a survey and planning advance covering the so-called Washington Park area in Roxbury. The proposal is aimed at rehabilitation and conservation, with but 15 per cent to 20 per cent clearance. The area contains about 186 acres and is bounded by Warren street, Townsend, Washington, and Dudley streets in the Roxbury district. The Authority has received the wholehearted support of many civic groups in Roxbury on this undertaking.

Government Center

The planning for the Government Center was completed by Adams, Howard & Greeley for the Boston City Planning Department in 1959. The Authority is presently preparing a redevelopment plan and an application for federal financial assistance. The plan calls for the clearance of about 50 acres of land in the Scollay, Dock, Bowdoin,

LEGISLATORS HEAR MAYOR'S PLEA FOR LIMITED SALES TAX

Appearing before the Legislative Committee on Taxation in Gardner Auditorium, State House, on February 1, in support of a limited 3 per cent sales tax as proposed by Governor Foster Furcolo, Mayor John F. Collins spoke as follows:

You are in the process of hearing the most important matter affecting Boston and the other cities and towns—certainly in this legislative year and perhaps in decades.

Its effect on the capital city will, when added to the policy of stringent economy presently in operation in Boston, replenish our tax base, and result in a building boom of unprecedented proportions. An old city, Boston, will then be able to compete more favorably with Philadelphia, New York, New Haven, Newark, and other east coast cities for urban renewal funds and for the investors' dollars so vital in an era of expanding economy. New jobs, new opportunities, and a new competitive spirit will be the inevitable by-product of the passage of this most important piece of legislation.

The budgetary requests being submitted to the Boston City Council will be several million dollars less than the amounts appropriated for these same departments in 1959. This in a period of rising prices and increased salary schedules as a result of pay increases granted in 1959 but provided for only a portion of that year.

Fixed charges, i.e., MTA deficit increases, disability pension increases, etc., nevertheless threaten to impose an additional burden on the already overburdened real estate taxpayer. Every city and town faces a similar dilemma.

During the past ten years Boston's property tax levy has skyrocketed by 50 per cent. Property owners are now paying almost $50,000,000 more a year than in 1950. Boston's property tax burden amounts to over $200 for every man, woman, and child in the city.

Further, Boston received less in 1959 from state-shared taxes than it did in 1950.

A home owner with a $6,000 assessment is paying about $235 per year more now than he did ten years ago. Obviously the shrinking tax base makes apparent the fact that a new source of revenue is mandatory.

Boston's share of the receipts from the limited sales tax is estimated to be in excess of $24,000,000. At least 75 per cent must be used to reduce the tax rate. If it were all used for that purpose the rate could be reduced by seventeen dollars per thousand.

The benefits to property owners and home owners are obvious. It should be borne in mind however that rent payers have a vital stake in stabilizing or reducing the tax rate. Each substantial tax increase has seen a simultaneous or subsequent rash of rent increases. Through the process of price competition a tax reduction is bound to result in rent reductions or increased services and better maintenance.

I can promise you, moreover, that the city will keep a vigilant eye on landlords who fail to roll back their rents, once the tax rate is reduced. It is certainly not the intention that the benefits of this bill shall become a source of unjust enrichment to anyone. This careful scrutinizing by the city's various departments, including the Assessors, will supplement the efforts of the State Department of Standards, and the "Watch Dog Committee" to be formed by the Governor. If circumstances render it advisable such a committee will also be created within the City of Boston.

I am convinced, as one who served in the Legislature for eight years and thus possesses some awareness of your problems, that no member of the Legislature need fear reprisal on the part of any element of the voting public if he helps enact the limited sales tax.

REDEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY ISSUES REPORT FOR 1959

February 1, 1960.

The year of 1959 marked the second full year in which the urban renewal and redevelopment program in Boston has been under the direction of this Authority.

Since its organization in October, 1957, the Authority has brought about a much better public understanding of the urban renewal program and has gained the public support of all responsible elements of the community.

His Excellency, Governor Foster Furcolo, in his annual message to the General Court, emphasized the need of state financial aid to cities and towns in carrying out programs for urban redevelopment and renewal. His Honor, Mayor Collins, in his inaugural address, expressed his intention of taking immediate action to obtain additional funds from the federal government for urban renewal purposes.

The Authority has made considerable progress in carrying out projects previously commenced and has made impressive strides in completing plans for new projects to be carried out and in commencing planning studies for future projects.

New York Streets Project

Boston's initial urban redevelopment project had its first major building completed and opened for business in June. The Boston Herald-Traveler Corporation's new publishing plant, containing some 210,000 square feet of floor area, built at a cost of about $5,000,000, has every modern facility for handling an intricate system of communications and daily newspaper publication. Another two-acre tract is being developed to provide a new office and plant for the Graybar Electric Company. This building is being scheduled for completion in May, 1960. A third tract of land, approximately 90,000 square feet, is under option with the Westinghouse Electric Company, which plans to build a new facility for the distribution of their products. In a period of less than three and one-half years, this project has witnessed the relocation of several hundred families, demolition of over 300 tenement buildings, installation of new streets, sewers and utility systems, and the disposition of 80 per cent of the cleared land for new construction. The success of this project is indicative of what may be accomplished toward a renaissance of the City of Boston if other renewal projects, presently under consideration, may be handled expeditiously by all agencies responsible.

West End Project

In the past twelve months, large strides were taken in this project. Less than 10 per cent of the 2,900 site occupants remain in the area. Demolition of the 876 buildings is over 60 per cent completed and well ahead of schedule. Despite the pace with which both relocation and demolition have taken place, the Authority has been extremely conscious of the need for carrying out relocation as humanely as possible. A full-time social worker was added to the Site Office staff to assist both families and small business establishments in facing up to the many and varied problems inherent in displacement. Above all, it is gratifying to note that the majority of families relocated have moved into better housing than they had occupied in the project area.

A revised redevelopment plan was adopted in 1959, eliminating all interior streets in the area and providing much wider periphery streets. Under this plan, the new residential buildings in five groups will be set in a park-type area with greater emphasis placed on the pedestrian and landscaping rather than the automobile. A leasehold agreement with the redevelopers, Charles River Park, Inc., was entered into in December, 1959, for all residential and commercial land in the area. New construction is scheduled to start early in 1960 on the first group of apartment buildings, to contain about 500 dwelling units. Ground breaking is scheduled for a new seven-story building for the Retina Foundation, a renowned institution dedicated to research and investigative work on the human eye. This building will occupy a 35,000-square-foot tract of land abutting on Staniford street.

Mattapan Project

The Authority has completed final plans for the development of approximately seventy acres of predominantly vacant land in the Mattapan area for development by an experienced New York realty firm for this area. After FHA feasibility for re-use is obtained, the Authority will seek the necessary City Council and State Housing Board approvals and proceed to carry out the plan which should provide about 800 new privately-built rental dwelling units. This land is the last sizable tract of undeveloped residential land in Boston and its proper development will do much to meet the increasing demands for rental units, plus stabilizing a desirable residential neighborhood.

Castle Square Area

In the fall of 1959 the Authority undertook surveys and plans to develop an industrial redevelopment project for the so-called Castle Square area, about twenty-five acres of land bounded by Castle, Washington, Dover, and Tremont streets. A redevelopment plan will be ready early in 1960 and submitted to the Mayor and City Council. Execution of this plan would be a large step toward achieving the objectives of the city's over-all general plan.

Whitney Street Area

In August the Boston City Council and former Mayor John B. Hynes approved the Authority's proposal for the redevelopment of a seven-acre tract of land, bounded by Longwood avenue, St. Alphonsus, Tremont streets, and Huntington avenue, in the Roxbury district. The State Housing Board approved the project on

On the contrary, I believe that a grateful public will show its appreciation for such a vote. The public, which pays the bills, is becoming increasingly watchful and impatient with unnecessary delays and inaction at whatever level of government they may occur. In that connection, this committee is to be complimented for the prompt assignment of this bill for a public hearing.

Most of the features of this bill are so well known as to require no elaboration.

Let us discuss them briefly in the light of the multitudinous sources of taxes available to cities in other states. Philadelphia with its 1½ per cent payroll tax, gross receipts tax, and at least five so-called nuisance taxes, plus a share of the state-collected 4 per cent sales tax. New York City already has dozens of existing local taxes and Mayor Wagner has requested the imposition of about twenty more. Contrast our local cities and towns, with the highest property tax in the nation upon which we depend for about 70 per cent of needed revenue.

Briefly:

(1) Another very important feature of the 3 per cent limited sales tax bill is the new distribution formula. On the desirability and equity of this new formula, there is general agreement. Tax authorities of both parties, liberals and conservatives, are in agreement on this. The new formula takes into consideration such factors as the welfare burden, school age population, total population of each city and town. It does not rely on outmoded valuations of machinery and assessments of property.

(2) Family exceptions are increased from $400 to $600 per dependent.

(3) Costs of collections in this type of sales tax are nominal—collections are made by the retailer who will be reimbursed for the cost of additional bookkeeping.

(4) The saving to such a family would be as follows: decrease in real estate taxes ($5,000 at $17 per M), $85. Decrease in state income tax (two dependent children at $6.15), $12.30. Total saving, $97.30.

Less limited sales taxes paid, $34.50. Net saving, $62.80.

From the point of view of citizens of low or moderate income, the limited sales tax is therefore the most proportional, democratic and nonregressive solution possible.

(5) Finally the voter for the first time has an effective voice in controlling the tax rate. Two-thirds vote of the council is required to raise the rate and a referendum may be had with 5,000 signatures.

In conclusion, may I point out that the passage of this tax measure designed as it is to broaden our tax base and to derive some revenue from tourists and visitors will be a welcome indication that Massachusetts is preparing in an intelligent manner to face the challenge of the critical sixties.

The times cry for a nonpartisan, nonpolitical, nongeographical approach to the solution of the problems of our municipalities. I hope, gentlemen, that for the economic rebirth of our municipalities, you will report this bill favorably.

Adams Square areas. The land will be used for new city, state, and federal buildings, integrated with private commercial structures. This project will be one of the major efforts made to revitalize downtown Boston and its successful execution is deemed essential to maintain values in the central area.

Other Activities

The members of the Authority and the staff have continued throughout the year in working with city-wide civic and neighborhood groups, informing them of the various aspects of the urban renewal program. It is hoped that one or more demonstration projects may be put into execution in 1960. At the request of the Authority, the City of Boston has filed an application for Section 221 (FHA) certification. The liberal provisions of this law providing relocation housing have not been used in the Boston area, principally due to the $9,000 per unit limitation that was in effect prior to September, 1959. Under the new law, FHA mortgage insurance is available up to $12,000 per unit, with a 40-year mortgage. Several builders who have used Section 221 in other states have expressed an intention of proceeding in Boston when certification is made by the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

in the foreseeable future, to make any change in county government whereby Boston may obtain much-needed relief from the expenses of carrying on Suffolk County. I do suggest, however, in view of the fact that a precedent has been established when the Legislature undertook to pay 30 per cent of the cost of the maintenance of the Pemberton Square court house at the time the new wing was built some time ago, thereby recognizing that it had an obligation to help Suffolk County, that it might be wise and expedient to advocate the extending of the principle embodied in that legislation and work for the passage of laws whereby the Commonwealth would undertake to pay the whole or share in the major cost of Suffolk County government. In other words, in so far as obtaining relief for Boston is concerned, I feel that the chances of success are greater if Boston makes out its case for relief separate and apart from the thirteen other counties of the Commonwealth.

I submit these comments to you for your consideration.

AREA-WIDE WAR ON RATS

The New York Board of Health is planning to adopt a regulation requiring property owners of entire sections to take measures against rat infestation four times a year.

Rather than order eradication in just individual buildings, the plan is to order extermination in entire blocks and groups of blocks.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

January 27.

General Order No. 648.

Patrolmen John J. Lyden, Jr., and Michael J. Kovalski of Division 10 are hereby commended for meritorious police work and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

On January 10, 1960, the Martin Liquor Company, Inc., located at 1139 and 1141 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, was broken into, and Patrolmen John J. Lyden and Michael J. Kovalski, in plain clothes, were assigned to the investigation. After going over the case, it was the opinion of these officers that the method used in this break was comparable to others committed during the previous months and that the same person or persons could be involved.

At this time, information was received that there was a possibility of one Matthew Drayton being in on this break, but he was unknown to every person interrogated.

Previously, on January 4, 1960, the Ideal Spirits and Wine Company, 950 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, was broken into and as the result of a partial fingerprint being found at this location, Patrolmen Lyden and Kovalski started a search for the owner of the print, one Charles E. Robinson, on parole at the present time. His last known address, 29 Sarsfield street, Roxbury, proved to be a three-story vacant house and he was unknown to the people in the neighborhood. These officers then visited the General Alloys Company, in South Boston, where he was alleged to be employed, but it was learned from an official at that company that Robinson had terminated his employment. Inasmuch as he was on parole, the Parole Office was contacted and arrangements were made to have Robinson in that office on Thursday, January 14, at which time Charles E. Robinson, twenty-two years, single, was taken into custody as a suspicious person, to wit, breaking and entering in the nighttime.

As the result of questioning by Patrolmen Lyden and Kovalski, Robinson implicated one Matthew R. Drayton as being involved with him in the break at Martin's Liquor Store on January 10, 1960. Further information was received that Drayton had done some boxing and in order to identify this subject, these officers obtained a picture of him from the office of the Boxing Commission, 1010 Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

On Friday, January 15, 1960, another suspect, one Peter Williams, twenty-two years, single, of 12 Windsor street, Roxbury, was named, and at 12.40 that morning, Williams was picked up at his home.

At 120 that same morning, January 15, information was received that a person fitting the description of Drayton was seen entering a building at 82 East Lenox street, Roxbury, and Patrolmen Lyden and Kovalski immediately went to that address and arrested without a warrant as a suspicious person one Matthew R. Drayton.

Further interrogation of these three suspects, Charles E. Robinson, Peter Williams, and Matthew R. Drayton brought about the arrest of two additional men as having been involved with them in the various breaks and larcenies. They were Edward Drayton, twenty-two years, single, of 21 Wakullah street, Roxbury, a brother of Matthew Drayton, and one Paul Clark, twenty-one years, single, of 5 Highland place, Roxbury. Patrolmen Lyden and Kovalski questioned these five men individually and together and they finally admitted participation in the breaks and larcenies on Divisions 10, 9, and 4, as follows:

Division 10.

September 23, 1959. Matthew Drayton, Clark, and Williams. Mac's Diner, 742 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, by breaking a rear window, tearing a telephone from the wall, and taking $45 in cash.

November 14, 1959. Matthew Drayton and Clark. Gray's Specialty Shop, 1971 Washington street, Roxbury. Entered by breaking a front window. Theft of a record player.

November 28, 1959. Matthew Drayton and Clark. Ray's Linoleum Shop, 2141 Washington street, Roxbury. Entered by climbing a waterspout to a vacant house roof adjacent to the rear of 2141 Washington street, and forcing three doors. $25 in cash taken.

November 28, 1959. Matthew Drayton and Clark. Roxie's Market, 2143 Washington street, Roxbury. Entered by cutting a hole in the wall from 2141 Washington street, Roxbury. The safe was tampered with but not entered. $20 in cash taken from a drawer and two electric razors.

General Order No. 650.

Patrolmen Thomas P. Kineavy and Edward H. Worthy of Division 4 are hereby commended for meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 3.55 A.M., on Thursday, January 14, 1960, the No. 400 wagon with Patrolmen Kineavy and Worthy while cruising in Tremont street, near Appleton street, observed a 1949 Ford sedan, Mass. Registration H19-967, traveling in a southerly direction in Tremont street, which aroused their suspicion. The officers followed the Ford in the No. 400 wagon at a distance. The Ford turned off Tremont street into Montgomery street and came to a stop halfway down the street at a location between Clarendon and Dartmouth streets. The officers parked the wagon still keeping the Ford under observation and when no one alighted from the Ford after five minutes had elapsed, the officers approached the car in the No. 400 wagon. At this time the Ford sped off taking a left turn into Dartmouth street, a left turn into Tremont street, a right turn into Upton street, and a right turn into Shawmut avenue, with Patrolmen Thomas Kineavy and Edward Worthy in pursuit. Coming abreast of the Ford at the intersection of West Dedham street and Shawmut avenue, the Ford was forced to a halt.

The officers, observing there were three persons in the Ford car, approached the vehicle, one on either side. Upon questioning the operator, one Wayne Smith, eighteen years, single, of 144 Quincy street, Quincy, Mass., he stated the Ford was the property of Francis Wright, twenty years, single, of 143 Harvey street, Quincy, Mass., his companion in the front seat. Francis Wright produced the registration which proved the ownership of the Ford. Sitting in the back seat was one Joseph Smith, nineteen years, single, of 144 Quincy street, Quincy, Mass., a brother of the operator of the vehicle. When questioned as to their being in that vicinity at that hour of the morning, all three stated they were just riding around with nothing particular on their minds.

Patrolmen Kineavy and Worthy ordered the three out of the car and on searching same, they found hidden underneath the right front seat a green-colored money bag marked "Guaranty Trust Company, Waltham, Mass.," which contained a quantity of nickels and dimes. When questioned about the money, Francis Wright, the owner of the car, stated they had broken into a bowling alley in Norwood, Mass., previously. Wayne Smith, Joseph Smith, and Francis Wright were then placed under arrest, without warrants, as suspicious persons, to wit, suspicion of breaking and entering in the nighttime.

With the assistance of the 4-L sector car, the prisoners were taken to Division 4 for booking and then to Police Headquarters for fingerprinting and pictures where it was learned that Wayne and Joseph Smith had previous records for breaking and entering and larceny of a motor vehicle.

On their return to Division 4, Patrolmen Kineavy and Worthy proceeded with the interrogation of these individuals and it was learned from Francis Wright that he, Wayne Smith, and Joseph Smith had entered the bowling alley in Norwood by way of a flight of stairs at the rear of the building where they removed a screen from a window with a screw driver. After ransacking the office and finding no money, they then broke into pinball and coke machines removing the coins therefrom. During this time, Joseph Smith remained in the car and acted as a lookout. After Wayne Smith and Wright returned to the car with the money, they drove to Quincy, then to Boston where they were apprehended by these officers.

The screw driver used to remove the screen from the window of the bowling alley was found in the glove compartment of the Ford sedan.

The Norwood Police Department was advised of the arrest and after investigation by that department, Lieutenant Edward Hamilton of Division 4 was notified that the Rollaway Bowling Alley located on Route 1 had been broken into and entered, as described by the prisoner, Francis Wright.

On Thursday, January 14, 1960, Wayne Smith, Joseph Smith, and Francis Wright appeared in the line-up at Boston Police Headquarters and as they were not wanted here, all three were delivered to the Norwood police along with the money bag, $148.50 in coins and the screw driver to be used as evidence.

The prisoners were arraigned in Dedham court by the Norwood police on Friday, January 15, 1960, for breaking and entering in the nighttime and each was held in $2,500 bail for appearance before the grand jury in Norfolk County.

The Police Commissioner is pleased to commend the alertness and devotion to duty displayed by Patrolmen Thomas P. Kineavy and Edward H. Worthy in this case which resulted in the apprehension of three individuals and the solution of a crime committed in another community before its authorities had knowledge that such an offense had taken place.

January 28.

General Order No. 651.

Patrolman John F. Chenette of the Traffic Division is hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and he is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 3.15 P.M., Sunday, January 24, 1960, Patrolman John F. Chenette of the Traffic Division, who was assigned to a paid detail for the Boston Edison Company, near the intersection of Cambridge and Charles streets, Boston, was informed by an unidentified male that a young lady had been assaulted by a man in the "pedestrian passageway," under Charles street, and that she was then on her way to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Patrolman Chenette made an immediate and diligent search of the area but was unable to locate either the attacker or the victim. He telephoned the information to Division 3.

The officer returned to his assignment and about ten minutes later a young woman who refused to identify herself, came to him and informed him that she had been assaulted in the same "pedestrian passageway" by an unknown person whom she described as a male, about nineteen years of age, wearing a tweed jacket, which he had thrown over her head while he attempted to wrestle her to the ground. She stated that she had been able to successfully resist the attack by employing a knowledge of judo.

Patrolman Chenette sought and received permission from the Boston Edison Company foreman to absent himself from the detail while he procured civilian attire on his assumption that the wanted man was somewhere in the vicinity and would hesitate to put in an appearance while an officer in uniform was present. He returned to the intersection so attired and began a search for the culprit. Some fifteen minutes later his efforts were rewarded when he observed a young man who answered the description of the attacker loitering in front of the nurses' home of the Massachusetts General Hospital at a position from which he commanded an unobstructed view of both entrances to the "pedestrian passageway."

Patrolman Chenette approached the young man, identified himself as a police officer, asked his reason for being present in the area and accused him of attacking the young women. He readily admitted his guilt and pleaded with the officer to let him go on his promise that he would never bother anyone again. He was placed under arrest and removed to Station 3 where he was identified as Wilson Snowden, seventeen years, single, of 20 Riverside avenue, Danvers, Mass. At the station he confessed to another assault on a young woman at her residence, 128 Chestnut street, Boston.

Complaints of assault and battery, indecent assault and attempted rape were applied for at the Central Municipal Court on Monday, January 25, 1960. Jurisdiction was declined and Snowden was held for the grand jury in bond of $2,500.

If the price of any item appears to the Commissioner to be abnormally high or low, or the bidder neglects to bid on each and every item, it may lead to the rejection of the proposal containing such price. The rate per hour of the wages to be paid to mechanics, teamsters, chauffeurs and laborers in the work to be performed under the contract shall not be less than the rate of wages in the schedule determined by the Commissioner of Labor and Industries of the Commonwealth, a copy of which schedule is annexed to the form of contract referred to herein. Copies of said schedule may be obtained, without cost, upon application therefor at the office of the Commissioner of Public Works. Before commencing performance of this contract, the Contractor shall provide by insurance for the payment of compensation and the furnishing of other benefits under chapter 152 of the General Laws (the Workmen's Compensation Law so called) to all persons to be employed under this contract and shall continue such insurance in full force and effect during the term of this contract.

MAYOR COLLINS REORGANIZES "FOR REAL"

Mayor John F. Collins moved forward on two fronts this week in his plans to further streamline departmental formats and procedures in city government.

Management and personnel studies will be made in many of the more complex city departments, the cost to be borne by funds contributed by the Civic Foundation for Boston. This group of businessmen has pledged its support to the Mayor in his efforts to introduce better business procedures into municipal government. The city will benefit, not only from financial contributions, but from the services of several experts employed by private business in Boston.

The first phase of the program began in the Assessing Department this week. Organizational and methods analysis, made available by Boston firms, are now working side by side with personnel of the Administrative Services Department who, by participating in the survey are receiving "on the job" experience to enable them to move into other departments utilizing their newly acquired skills.

The group also has the services of William Dinsmore of Edward & Hay Associates of Philadelphia, who worked with the Philadelphia Municipal Research Bureau and the City of Philadelphia in helping them to develop aggressive personnel practices and improvements in city government which won two national awards. The study here will take about sixty days. The cost is estimated at $30,000.

Public Works Shake-Up

Acting on his own initiative, and calling upon his own experience as a career man in the city service, Public Works Commissioner James W. Haley this week launched a wholesale reorganization of the far-flung public works operations of the city. This is the most drastic realignment, he said, since that department was first established in 1911.

The present changes being wrought by the Public Works Commissioner are more functional than administrative, although he plans to abolish the Bridge and Automotive Divisions.

Replacing thirty-four separate districts, spread out over four divisions of the department, ten Public Works districts will be set up. Yards and other facilities in Charlestown, South Boston, North End, Roxbury, Egleston Square, Jamaica Plain, and Dorchester will be closed down or abandoned. Commissioner Haley pointed out that the past twenty years have seen the department drop from 3,200 to less than 1,800 employees and that much greater efficiency can be achieved with fewer installations.

Engineering now performed by the Bridge, Highway, Sewer, Water, and Survey Divisions will be centralized in a new Engineering Division. Permits and complaints for all divisions will be handled through a single Permit Bureau in the direct charge of the commissioner. A new Maintenance Branch responsible for all plant, buildings and yards as well as all automotive equipment will be headed by the former director of transportation, Timothy J. O'Leary. The new Engineering Division will be placed in charge of John J. McCall, former Engineer of the Bridge Division.

Centralized Engineering

The Public Works Commissioner claims that the reorganization will allow, within the next two years, the conversion of the present seven substantially independent divisions into a completely integrated and unified department. He said the functional independence of the old Street, Sewer, and Water Departments had never been really eliminated as was intended when the Public Works Department was set up almost fifty years ago.

The centralized Engineering Division, Commissioner Haley says, has been a long time coming. In 1935 a survey by Mayor Mansfield recommended one, and more recently, the Griffenhagen survey of 1954 proposed a city-wide Engineering Department.

Already engineers are at work preparing a four-year program of 12 to 15 million dollars in new highway construction as well as extensive sewerage and water works. Street lighting and traffic intersection improvements will be included in the highway program.

TEN YEARS OF REORGANIZATION IN CITY GOVERNMENT

A review of Boston's progress under the administrations of Mayor John B. Hynes was the subject of the sixth and final panel session of the Fourth Conference on Municipal Administration held in the Public Library Auditorium on November 19 and 20.

Moderator of the panel was William F. Keesler, Senior Vice-President, First National Bank of Boston.

The panelists were:

FRANCIS X. LANE, Administrator, Boston Housing Authority, who spoke on "Public Housing."

EARLE R. BARNARD, Assessor, City of Boston, whose subject was "Equalized Assessment Administration."

SEWARD WEBER, Chief Planner, City Planning Board, who outlined "Progress in City Planning."

THOMAS F. O'DAY, Editor, City Record, whose topic was "Reorganization under Mayor John B. Hynes."

REMARKS OF MODERATOR

The major purpose of these conferences instituted by Mayor Hynes four years ago was to institute a more businesslike approach to operation of municipal government.

It is a worthy purpose and these conferences have been constructive.

Quoting Arthur Reilly, in 1958 he said, "Therefore it may be seen that these Conferences are not just vehicles for speechmaking."

Practical application has been made from suggestions and ideas developed at these meetings.

It is only fair to recognize that businesslike approach to many problems of municipal government is not easy.

The day-to-day decisions of management in a private enterprise are generally assumed by stockholders to be in their best interests. Stockholders not confident of the management can generally sell their stock. A vote of confidence is generally expressed each year at annual stockholders' meetings. In the meantime the management team—directors, executive committee, officers (President, Mayor, etc.)—has full authority to make even major decisions in the usual course of operating the business.

LAST OF A SERIES

This is the seventh and final installment of a series which completely covers the two-day Conference sessions of 1959.

In a municipality, the authorities are not always so definite and the same degree of "home rule" does not exist.

The administrative officers of a municipality have not only to decide what is good for the city and its citizens, but many times have to spend a lot of time selling or defending their decisions before being able to make them effective—to say nothing of votes at next election.

Part of this is a normal educational process, with various political bodies and constituted committees which must be convinced. Part of it, and, too much, as a matter of fact, is politics.

This naturally slows up the accomplishment of many things needed and worth-while. At the same time, it demonstrates the need for support of public opinion and the press, to get full cooperation from all political bodies involved to expedite what is needed and what is right.

It is a crying shame that petty politics and personal interests should delay action on some things that a city like Boston, hanging on the ropes, needs for survival.

Our panel represents, as its members very ably do, a cross section of municipal activities. The conference is intended to be informative rather than controversial. Its purpose is to take a look at some of those things that show encouraging accomplishment under Mayor Hynes' administration, as well as activities which we must know about if those activities are to have further intelligent support.

PUBLIC HOUSING

By Francis X. Lane

Boston, as we know only too well, is an old city, settled in 1630, and incorporated as a city in 1823.

Housing for its inhabitants or settlers was of first concern.

Public housing, as we know it today, is a relatively new concept. It received its first great impetus with the passage of the U. S. Housing Act of 1937, which was signed by the President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in September of that year. Last year it came of age.

Just prior to the passage of that Act, the United States government itself, through the Federal Emergency Administration of the Public Works, constructed some fifty-two housing developments throughout the United States. Boston was chosen as the site of one of these original developments, Old Harbor Village arising on made land in South Boston.

The reason for being of a housing authority can best be explained and reiterated by citing you the following:

First from the U. S. Housing Act of 1937, as amended:

Declaration of Policy

"SECTION 1. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to promote the general welfare of the nation by employing its funds and credit, as provided in this act, to assist the several states and their political subdivisions to alleviate present and recurring unemployment and to remedy the unsafe and insanitary housing conditions and the acute shortage of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings for families of low income, in urban and rural nonfarm areas, that are injurious to the health, safety, and morals of the citizens of the nation," and again from the Massachusetts Housing Authority Law, signed in 1938:

Statement of Emergency

"SECTION 26X. It is hereby declared that substandard and decadent areas exist in certain portions of the commonwealth, and that there is not in the commonwealth, within a reasonable distance of the principal centers of employment, an adequate supply of low-rent housing for families of low income; that in certain portions of the commonwealth, decent, safe, and sanitary housing cannot be provided for families of low income in rural areas at a cost which would warrant private enterprise in the locality or in the same general area to provide an adequate supply thereof; that this situation tends to cause an increase and spread of disease and crime and constitutes a menace to the health, safety, morals, welfare, and comfort of the inhabitants of the commonwealth and is detrimental to property values therein; that this situation cannot readily be remedied by the ordinary operators of private enterprise; that a public exigency exists which makes the clearance of substandard and decadent areas and the provision of housing for persons of low income a public necessity; that the clearance of substandard and decadent areas and the provisions of housing for persons of low income, or either, constitute a public use for which private property may be acquired by eminent domain and public funds raised by taxation may be expended; and the enactment of sections twenty-six J to twenty-six NN, inclusive, is declared to be a public necessity."

Public Housing Over the Years

In the City of Boston the Housing Authority came into being because the city government, as represented by its Mayor and City Council, determined that such a body was needed, because of the housing conditions existent and to do the job envisioned by the federal and state laws.

Now let me bring you up to date on the Boston program. It was twenty-one years ago last May first that the first tenants were moved into Old Harbor Village, which on that day came under the jurisdiction of the Boston Housing Authority, under the terms of a lease and management program with the then United States Housing Authority, representing the federal government.

Many things have happened since then with the result that the Authority now is landlord to some 13,837 families with a population approximating some 55,000 persons.

Since the Authority houses many large families, about one half of its population is under twenty-one years old.

The Authority early in 1938 learned by experience the need for quarters for large families. In Old Harbor Village, the federal planners provided only one-, two-, and three-bedroom apartments, which meant that, at the generally maximum rate of two persons per bedroom, only families with not over four children could be housed.

The Authority immediately reacted to this problem by instructing its architects to plan for four-bedroom size apartments in its new developments then under design. Even those instructions proved inadequate, and in subsequent plans the Authority had to provide five-bedroom apartments.

Public Housing Today

The 13,837 apartments operated by the Authority consist of twenty-five separate developments. Fifteen of these developments are federally aided, and contain some 10,156 apartments, while there are 3,681 apartments in the state-aided program.

From 1950 to the present, first tenancy has taken place in seventeen of these twenty-five developments containing 7,652 of the total 13,837 apartments.

An interim program under city-state auspices, and built under Chapter 372 of the Acts of 1946 to house returning war veterans and their families, was liquidated in 1954-1956. This program for which the city floated bonds to cover 90 per cent of the cost housed some 1,306 families. These properties are now all privately owned.

The Authority has presently on the planning boards another six developments for housing aging persons or families, and containing some 400 dwellings. Three of these developments will be of the two-story flat-over-flat, row-house type, with the remaining three in elevator-type multiple units. These apartments authorized by the Mayor and City Council under an extension to the federal program will contain special features to serve aging persons. An Advisory Committee, appointed by the Mayor at the request of the City Council, is working with the Authority in the implementation of this program.

State Aid in Housing

The state-aided program came into being through Chapter 200 of the Acts of 1948, as a veterans' program predominantly. The first tenants in this program moved into the development on West Broadway, South Boston, in 1949.

The cost of the federally-aided program approximates $90,000.00. The state-aided program cost about $50,000,000, with a total cost of the two programs approximating $140,000,000, which includes the cost of slum clearance.

The city contains some 229,652 dwelling units, and on this basis the Authority owns some 6.03 per cent of the total units in the city.

Contrary to the belief of some, the city is not required to make any cash contribution to the building of either the federal or state-aided programs. Developments built by the Authority are financed by money borrowed for the great part from private investors, usually bank syndicates, as evidenced by the issue of notes and bonds of the Authority itself. The Authority is an autonomous body politic and corporate, and the city in no way is responsible for its financing.

Running Expenses

The operation of the developments is financed from the rents received from the tenants, and an annual contribution or subsidy from the federal or state government. It is in the sphere of operation that the city contributes indirectly to the developments, inasmuch as all properties of the Authority are by law exempt from real estate taxes, and the city accepts a payment in lieu of taxes.

The program of the Authority started out as a complete slum-clearance program, which, I think all will agree, is wise and the essence of the low-income housing venture. In its initial post World War II program, the Authority was forced to vacant land because of the housing shortage, but in its later years, the program again reverted to at least partial slum clearance. There is ever so much virtue to slum clearance inasmuch as building in clearance areas helps the city by making use of the old facilities and utilities.

Boston is a built-up city with the tendency toward an outmigration of people and industries. The program of the Authority has tended to decelerate that movement by providing homes within the city limits.

Rent Payers Four-to-One

Boston has four rent-paying families to every home-owning family.

There is, in my opinion, a pretty general misconception of the part played by taxpaying homes in the city economy. Repeated studies have shown that in our city at least very few homes pay their own way. In Boston three downtown wards produce 50 per cent of the personal and real estate tax income, with the remaining nineteen wards, which are the great residential areas, producing the remaining fifty per cent, although the heavy city outlays particularly for schools are in these wards. There are wards in the City of Boston where the total revenue to the city is less than that produced by two or three buildings downtown. The average slum dwelling in Boston being assessed for about $1,400 produces at a $101 tax rate about $141 a year. The cost of educating one child for one year in the city averages about $346.

About the only dwellings in Boston that pay their own way in taxes are on Beacon Hill, in the Back Bay, high-value apartments and some one-family homes in the outlying districts. The big bulk of homes in the three-decker, heavily-populated areas do not pay their way. That this is true is amply evidenced by the rapid trend in the suburbs to zoning that increases lot sizes in an effort to keep out low-priced homes and their attendant high costs for services, chiefly for schools.

How Boston would have solved its housing program for returning veterans without public housing, I do not know. The plain fact is that it would not have been solved as private industry economically could not do it. Boston's population increased less than 4 per cent in the decade from 1940 to 1950, but its new families increased at about four times that rate in the same period, chiefly due to marriages of young veterans on the one hand, and longevity of the oldsters on the others.

Savings Through Housing

The savings accruing to cities from erection of public housing developments is well known to all of you, but bears repeating:

1. The savings in Fire Department costs are great. No fire in one of our fire-resistant buildings has ever spread beyond the room in which it started. Just think of that!

2. Savings to the city for public maintenance of a pattern of old and surplus streets has been made by their elimination by the erection of public housing.

3. Wet and dry garbage collection costs have been reduced four-fifths by installation of incineration by the Authority.

4. Light, air, hot water, and sufficient heat in development homes have made for healthier families.

The one big talking point of the opponents to public housing is the fact that they do not pay full taxes. However, in some instances the Authority pays more as a payment in place of taxes than the area paid to the city when it existed as a slum or vacant land, to say nothing of the savings previously indicated.

Role of Public Housing

The Housing Authority is in business only because it has been found that private industry cannot do the job for the lower-income segment of the population. Indeed, it would almost seem that they are not able to do the job for middle-income families today, but only for those in the upper-income groups. That is not the fault of private industry, nor of the public housers either, but simply one of the execrable exigencies of present-day economics.

Repeated criticism is made of the income of some families who are allowed to remain in occupancy in developments. No mention is ever made of the lowest income families housed, or the fact that the average income in state-aided developments this year was $3,805, and only $2,928 in the federally-aided developments. It is not mentioned either that as the incomes in the higher group increases, the rent is raised so that families in this grouping are receiving very little or no subsidy, and that the high rent that they pay helps another family to receive lower rent.

By and large, the people who live in public housing developments are fine, good living citizens, even as you and I, the chief difference being an economic one only. Of course, we have problem families and problem children, but they are in the minority, and in concert with the community the Authority tries to help with this problem.

To sum up:

1. Public housing is doing the job it was intended to do—serve families of low income, older persons, and large families;

2. Income limits for both admission and continued occupancy have increased commensurate with present economic trends;

3. Rent is subsidized only to the extent needed by the individual family, and the rent that is paid is increased or decreased as is warranted; and

4. Without prying, the Authority with the aid of community resources attempts to help families with problems to solve them.

EQUALIZED ASSESSMENT ADMINISTRATION

By Earle R. Barnard

Across the nation, in the past decade, there has been a dramatic change in the character of assessing, and of assessing administration. This change has been brought about, ironically, by the mounting tax burden loaded onto real estate. Expenditures for local government have soared and it has been easier to lift the increased income from increased real estate levies than it has been to curtail expenses, or to balance the revenue picture by obtaining new sources of revenue. The relationship of this phenomenon to assessing is well known to every assessor. Assessing is not, and cannot be, an exact science. The most we can say is that, ideally, it is mass appraising, and is the systematic application of common sense, using uniform standards wherever possible to assure consistent treatment of all properties.

In the past, when tax rates were lower, and assessments were at only a small fraction of full market value, a difference of opinion as to the assessed value did not have nearly so great a dollar impact as it does today. In short, when tax levies were low, assessing was not so much of a problem, nor was assessing administration. Today, there is no doubt about it, assessing is a problem, and a headache, almost everywhere.

Problems Nation-Wide

This April I attended the conference of the National Association of Assessing Officers at the Sheraton-Plaza, and we talked far into the morning with assessors from Canada, New England, New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. We learned that revaluations and equalization surveys are going on everywhere because the normal assessing machinery has just not been able to cope with the changes and the demand for a rifle rather than a shotgun solution to assessed valuation problems. Incidentally, I could not be other than gratified to have a couple of seasoned assessors from two major cities play hooky from the seminar one morning to learn at firsthand what we are doing here in Boston, and it was doubly encouraging to have a follow-up letter from one of them, asking for additional information to help with their own standardization program.

But revaluations or equalization surveys are not the answer to the problem. At best, they are only temporary measures. For the most carefully developed pattern of equalized values will soon be wrecked by maladministration or a soaring tax rate. It is only the first of these, i.e., assessing administration, that we can even touch on here today. But the second is equally important, and unless we do soon stabilize the tax rate in Boston and elsewhere in Massachusetts, equalization will no longer be possible.

Proper Climate Essential

But let's consider administration. Maladministration may be accidental or it may be deliberate. Whatever the cause, you cannot afford it in the future any more than you could afford it in the past. You must have a professional job of assessing done, what I term equalized assessing administration. Such administration must begin with a climate which encourages and fosters competent, fearless assessing by your staff assessors, or so-called street men. Your chief assessor, the head of the department, must create that climate. He can do this by building up a definite assessing policy, by setting specific assessing standards, then giving each individual assistant assessor the responsibility for determining assessments in his district and making him accountable.

The assessor must follow through to insure that the assistant assessors are really collecting the necessary back data and are actually applying consistent standards in their districts, and that from district to district, class to class, there is uniformity.

A heretofore untried innovation was the setting up of a series of five small meetings each month with the respective deputy assessors and the seven to twelve street men in his district. Individual reports were made by each street man on a number of "binders" completed and a discussion was opened to the consideration of any individual problems he was currently encountering. Each man therefore had the advantage of the combined thinking of his immediate group. As a result the "binders" were in weeks ahead of the deadline for any previous year.

Finally, the assessor must be strong enough, and wise enough, and courageous enough, to insist, not only that each of his staff assessors do a competent job, but that they be shielded from pressure or influence from any source. This last quality, firmness within and firmness without, is the indispensable condition requisite for the assessing staff to have the self-respect and the self-confidence to go out and do a competent and a fearless job of assessing.

Ability, Will and Time

The carrying out of such a philosophy of administration is not an easy task, but is possible, if the assessor is blessed with a group of deputy assessors who have three things: the ability, the will, and the time to work with their staff assessors, reviewing their values and their backup data, coordinating the application of standards, resolving difficult cases, being interested in their work and shown recognition.

Unfortunately, while our Boston deputies have the ability and the will, they have not had the time to supervise assessing that sound administration requires. They have had to spend most of their time reviewing abatement requests, holding hearings, and defending the city's disputed values before the Appellate Tax Board. On this point I am happy to report that we have made an important step toward securing some relief. In September, after much discussion and negotiations, we finally were successful in securing the services of twelve assistant assessors on a full-time basis. These men are now reviewing equalization survey conclusions, and are beginning to assist the deputies in pretrial work and hearings before the Appellate Tax Board.

Outside Help

By the end of this year we shall have completed our equalization survey of income properties throughout the city. But if we are to avoid the disruptive jolts of frequent equalizations, and if we are to save the hundreds of thousands of dollars of interest charges on these disputed valuations annually, we shall have to work at the job of equalization every year, as a part of the day to day assessing process. In order to do this effectively and economically, we are utilizing, without pay, the services of the Real Estate Board and individual realtors throughout the city. We are hoping that the cooperative working relationship we have enjoyed with realtors in the central business district this year can be continued every year. It is important that such cooperation continue in the future so that assessments can be equalized annually as changes in valuations occur.

In closing I would like to just touch on this matter of stabilizing the tax rate. In Boston and elsewhere, there is a growing recognition that stabilization of the tax rate is an essential step for city growth. The mounting burden of municipal expenditures can not be indiscriminately heaped upon the real estate taxpayer. There is little the assessor can do about the levy or the rate, but it is important that all of us, as citizens, continue our efforts to control the levy and the rate, if we are to have sound assessing.

PROGRESS IN CITY PLANNING

By Seward Weber

Planning is not a new endeavor in Boston. The Planning Board was created in 1914.

Confidence in the value of planning has been demonstrated by the way the administration of Mayor Hynes has supported the efforts of the Planning Board during the past decade:

1. In 1951 Boston's first general plan was published. This plan contained a preliminary statement regarding how the major elements of the city should be related to each other and how future change within the city should take place. This document has been extensively used during the past ten years and it is currently being revised and updated to 1960.

2. In 1952 capital improvement programming was inaugurated. This device for scheduling large, nonrecurring capital improvements, such as a school, an incinerator, a parking garage, a civic auditorium, requires the cooperation of all city departments which send to the Planning Board estimates of future construction projects. The Planning Board, guided by the general plan and revenue estimates, establishes priorities for the requested improvements and suggests how and when they should be financed and built. Getting capital improvement programming started was a slow affair, but it has now been accepted and is an ongoing function of the Planning Board.

3. Before World War II it was felt the Zoning Ordinance adopted in 1924 should be completely revised, but funds were not made available for this project until 1952. The Planning Board was then commissioned, with a special grant, to prepare a new zoning ordinance. This effort, undertaken with the assistance of consultants, was completed in 1958 and the proposed zoning code is now being reviewed by the Boston Zoning Commission.

4. Boston's downtown represents the center of commercial and cultural activities for the New England region as well as the metropolitan area. This valuable piece of real estate represents an important concern of the Planning Board, and for the past six years the staff of the Board has been studying the central business district in an effort to determine how best to preserve if not strengthen its vitality. In 1954 the Board prepared an off-street parking program for the central business district. Since then ten parking structures have been located in accordance to this program. In 1956, it proposed the Government Center. The total central area study culminated this year in a central business district plan which will soon be made public. Corollary to the central business district plan is a detailed plan being prepared for the retail portion of the central business district — what we call Boston's retail core. This plan, already the subject of discussions with downtown merchants, will suggest ways whereby the downtown shopping area can compete successfully with burgeoning suburban shopping centers.

5. No statement about planning progress in Boston would be complete without mentioning the urban renewal activities that have occurred during the last ten years. In 1949 the Congress of the United States passed a new housing act providing through loans and grants federal assistance to cities redeveloping their slum and blighted areas.

New York Streets

Under this program Boston has executed the New York Streets redevelopment project in the South End, now the home of the Herald-Traveler, and is currently demolishing structures in the West End project area to make way for the new apartment houses and a modern shopping center.

With the passage of the Housing Act of 1954 rehabilitation and conservation became available as devices to fight blight contingent on the existence of a local workable program. This program was first prepared by the Planning Board in 1955, and is revised annually.

The Planning Board is preparing plans for renewing portions of Roxbury. An application from the Boston Redevelopment Authority for federal assistance to commence detailed planning of the Washington Park renewal area is now pending before the Housing and Home Finance Agency with favorable action expected soon.

Area Renewal

Still another phase of the renewal program in Boston is the Improvement Areas program. To date two projects of this kind have been undertaken in Dorchester. Improvement areas are selected in neighborhoods which are threatened by blight and which will inevitably be affected if steps are not taken to preserve the quality of the housing. To achieve this the improvement area program:

1. Alerts the community to the dangers of blight through education programs.
2. Conserves buildings through systematic enforcement of the building, health, and fire codes.
3. Initiates improvements in the area, such as street paving, street lighting, improved refuse collection, and other municipal housekeeping items.

Not all renewal activities in the city have been federally aided nor have they all been in residential areas. Two of the most dramatic renewal projects in the city's history are the Prudential Center and the proposed Government Center. Both of these projects were conceived and planned during the administration of John B. Hynes. Both of these projects have received so much publicity it is unnecessary to describe them to you. Both projects when completed are expected to strengthen the city's tax structure as well as provide many new jobs in central Boston.

A mere review of activities occupying the Planning Board during the past decade fails to suggest the vitality that has infused the Boston Planning program in recent years.

Since 1956 the Board has been reorganized; the staff has nearly doubled and the budget has been increased two and one half times. The staff now numbers forty-four positions allocated among five divisions: research, comprehensive planning, regional planning, community planning, and administration. Let me indicate the objectives and responsibilities of each division.

Research

Until a year and a half ago the Planning Board did not have a research division. Today it is studying the city's population, its economy, its housing inventory, and housing market, all essential to the preparation of plans for the city or any of its districts.

Comprehensive Planning

The Comprehensive Planning Division is responsible for revising and maintaining the general plan for the city. This function consumes a ten-year cycle with a newly-revised general plan scheduled for publication at the beginning of each decade. As part of the general planning process the Comprehensive Planning Division also prepares what we call systems studies. These studies evolve city-wide plans for the location of schools, playgrounds, branch libraries, fire stations, so these facilities can serve each neighborhood efficiently.

Great emphasis is being placed on the work of the Comprehensive Planning Division at the present time so that by the end of 1960 a new general plan will be ready to replace the current one.

This new general plan will be the most detailed yet prepared by the Planning Board and will include, in addition to allocating space for new public facilities, recommendations for the arrangement of each land use as well as suggestions as to how these uses should be connected and related by a circulation system. It will represent the synthesis of plans being made for each of Boston's eleven planning districts, and it will include a city-wide renewal plan delineating blighted areas and assigning treatment designations and priorities for undertaking them.

Community Planning

The Community Planning Division, like the Comprehensive Planning Division, is concerned with preparing plans for each district throughout the city. However, it considers in greater detail the problems found in each district and prepares plans for specific areas within the district. When this level of planning is accomplished specific projects may be delineated within a district and recommended to the Redevelopment Authority for execution.

Regional Planning Division

As suggested earlier Boston is the commercial, business, institutional, and cultural center for the metropolitan area and the New England region. This central area is studied intensively by the Regional Planning Division, the division which is now putting the finishing touches on a plan for the rehabilitation of the downtown business and financial area.

Of equal regional significance is the transportation and circulation system of the city. The Regional Planning Division includes personnel which study parking, street, and highway alignments. The route location for the proposed inner belt now under study by the Massachusetts Department of Public Works is being investigated by the Planning Board staff so that the Boston City Planning Board will be prepared to advise the state on an alignment that will capitalize on land development opportunities as well as serve traffic.

The Planning Board, by law, has only advisory powers. Regardless of the technical competence represented by its plans, they will not work by themselves. Plans, if they are good, should be executed in order to develop an efficient and liveable city. This means the Planning Board can recommend plans to the community but they must be carried out by others.

The administration of John B. Hynes has lead in developing a technically capable planning effort within the city. Although much remains to be done at this level, the greater challenge lies now in the area of administration so that the product of these planning efforts can, through their use in the decision-making process, be translated into the on-the-ground improvements that Boston so badly needs.

REORGANIZATION UNDER MAYOR JOHN B. HYNES

By Thomas F. O'Day

We all know the old caution: "You can't fight City Hall." City Hall, in this sense, is an elusive, nebulous thing but at the same time a dragon which must be overcome.

It is the purpose of this paper to try to show how Mayor John B. Hynes did fight City Hall and succeeded, claw by claw, in at least maiming the dragon which was entrenched there in a stagnant atmosphere of laissez-faire, in a spirit of resistance to change and in a hundred and one time-worn practices which had grown hoary with age and vested abuse.

Three Separate Phases

Reorganization of the city government under Mayor Hynes involved three distinct phases:

The first phase called for reduction in the number of city departments from thirty-eight to twenty-six and the realignment of the city's high command into an efficient, effective pattern of operation. The office of "deputy mayor" thereupon was established to head the new Department of Administrative Services, whose board of directors was composed of key department heads. This gave the Mayor a tighter grip on the reins of city government by channeling administrative policy through a single agency with department heads functioning as a cabinet.

The second phase involved the streamlining of the city's bookkeeping. For example, a new format was established for the annual budget. No longer is it necessary to be a certified public accountant in order to understand its contents. New methods, new procedures, new machines were installed in the departments of the City Auditor, Collector-Treasurer, and Assessor to make the city's business more businesslike.

The third phase involved the reorganization of the physical and structural facilities of the city in order to meet current needs. The key to this procedure was expansion of the City Planning Board functions into a top-flight agency with a full fledged staff of professional city planners to map out the city's future. The new planning board fitted also into a secondary but important role in helping the city to decide on a long overdue pattern of schoolhouse discontinuance and schoolhouse construction meeting the population shifts to the outskirts, and to realign the location of firehouses and branch libraries enabling those facilities to serve the greatest number of people with a maximum of efficiency.

Over the past ten years the voting facilities of the city have been just about completely rearranged and mechanized in the interest of economy and efficiency.

A Major Undertaking

Each of the three phases of administrative reorganization was a major undertaking. In the time allotted to this panel it would not be possible to even outline the multiplicity of steps involved, but let me give you some examples of the streamlining of the city's financial and fiscal departments where new methods and new machines plugged up holes into which inefficiency had found a nesting place.

In the Auditing Department, recently, "automation" was utilized in the form of a UNIVAC 60 computer, a marvelous machine which shows, right up to the minute, the condition of the city's books. This machine is used by several departments to sift complex statistical data.

Another example: Before 1950, the city's field assessment records were hand copied the same way they were a hundred years ago. Homework assignments were handed out to clerks on a piecework basis during the busy season. Now all the work is done quickly and efficiently by a punch card accounting system installed in 1952.

Economies Achieved

A further example: Approximately 18,000 city employees, who formerly were paid in cash, now receive their checks from the city treasurer. This one operation alone released six policemen from the job of guarding the payroll, not to mention the saving in man-hours consumed in counting, checking, and distributing the pay envelopes to 16,000 employees.

Here is what the secretary of the Board of Overseers of Public Welfare stated recently in a report to the Mayor: "The last decade in the administration of Public Welfare in the City of Boston has been a monumental milestone. Although the volume of work has increased tenfold, at no time was additional personnel requested, but slowly, through reorganization and more efficient methods in the reassignment of duties, the goals of the department were accomplished. The financial and fiscal operations have been advanced to a superior point of administration."

At the Deer Island House of Correction last year 726,900 meals were served at a cost of less than 25 cents a meal. This was 2 per cent under the unit cost of the previous year. All this was done through efficient operation of its farm and the introduction of economical procedures.

Between 1956 and 1958 the annual operating cost of the City Printing Plant was reduced to $113,000, with $34,000 applicable to personnel. This was an accomplishment even in the light of step-rate increases, promotional increases, and a 10 per cent pay raise to nonunion member employees. In a recent report to the Mayor the Director of Administrative Services stated: "We are certain, regardless of criticism, that we can provide printing at a cost that equals or is less than outside plants and we know that in many instances the quality of work produced excels that of commercial plants."

The 190,000 persons who utilize the library services of the city know the revolutionary changes that have been made in the book charging procedure. Here is a department which is handling, as many others do, a steadily increasing activity with a steadily shrinking number of employees.

The city picked up at least another $300,000 in annual revenue through the upward revision of the fee schedules charged the public for various city services.

Areas of Failure

Now, as regards good business practices as a necessity for good municipal public relations. From my own professional observations of the Boston scene, going back a good twenty-five years, I find there are two kinds of people who benefit, personally, from slipshod methods of municipal government: first, those who interest themselves in municipal affairs exclusively for private, selfish gain, and who benefit personally from inefficiency in handling of the city's business, and, secondly, the employees who fail to give a fair day's work for a fair day's pay. Unfortunately, some few city employees have been known to fall into both categories.

Out of these tendencies in human nature are spawned those unsavory conditions, often more fictitious than real, which muck rakers describe as political graft and corruption. In terms of dollars and cents, however, a far greater leakage of public resources occurs when the city's money trickles down the drain simply through inefficiency and loose administrative practices. From this leakage everybody loses and nobody gains.

The day-to-day evils, if you will pardon a strong word, in municipal government take root in those areas where the city has failed to be businesslike in running its affairs. By this failure, the vast reservoir of integrity and zeal generated by the great mass of people who work for the city is shut off at points where it is most needed. This blockage spells waste with a capital W. This is the sort of thing which the present Hynes administration at City Hall has striven, with considerable success, to correct.

The fact that Boston had, in 1958, the lowest number of auto deaths yet recorded in this city, is certainly a tribute to the efficiency of the Traffic Department.

Modern, up-to-the-minute, crime reporting procedures have been installed in the Police Department with the whole-hearted support of the Mayor and City Council.

The very appearance of the Building Department on the ninth floor Annex bespeaks efficiency and improved housekeeping.

During the past ten years, the reorganization program was accomplished quietly without fanfare, and, indeed, with very little credit given the administration which labored to achieve a high goal.

Progress in the Meantime

Our city, in the meantime, kept pace with the times in new school construction, opened Boston's first municipal incinerator, opened a brand new fire headquarters, extended the city services in many categories, expanded and improved its hospital, cooperated with the state in reconstructing most of the main thoroughfares in and out of Boston, eliminated vast areas of slums in the South and West Ends, constructed $10,000,000 worth of off-street parking facilities, laid the ground work for a new government center, paved the way for construction of a new city hall, started construction on a new civic auditorium and laid firm ground work for a brand new era of private building construction sparked by the enormous Prudential Center project in the Back Bay. It is interesting to note that the year 1959 will be remembered as the record year in the city's history in the total capital committed to private construction.

On January 1, 1950, the total number of people employed by the city was 23,011. On February 1 of this year, the official total was 21,354, representing a reduction of 747 employees over the ten-year period. Being aware of the city's fiscal plight this administration was keenly desirous of cutting down the city payroll through the no-hire, no-fire policy, but Mayor Hynes has steadfastly declined to cut necessary city services in order to do so. As it was, he met the White Paper gentlemen's agreement halfway.

A Bitter, Lonely Course

It is only by superior methods in handling the city's business that any mayor can effectively silence the critics who, either deliberately or through ignorance of the facts, insist upon placing the proportionate blame for Boston's financial dilemma on the wrong shoulders. Before this goal can be accomplished a lot of ground work had to be laid.

It is not an easy course for the administrative head of a city to place the long-range interests of the city above political and transitory interests. It is a hard, bitter, and yes, lonely, course for a mayor, who really enjoyed the popularity of the political arena, to knuckle down to a politically unpopular program of municipal efficiency, improved business methods and department programs which put a little more stretch into the taxpayer's dollar. The end result is a better city in which to live and a better municipality for which to work.

Our present mayor had one great advantage over his predecessors in office. He had intimate knowledge of all the details of municipal government. Working from this knowledge, he placed a large portion of the reorganization program in the hands of people, who like himself, were career people, and who knew better than anyone else how to make the reorganization program work. Completent help was brought in from the outside, but Mayor Hynes gave many, many people inside the city government opportunities of a lifetime. In the main, these people made good in their assignments. I am sure, as the years go on, they will all share in the good reputation which Mayor Hynes is certain to leave behind him at City Hall.

MODERATOR'S SUMMARIZATION

Section 1 of the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, as mentioned by Mr. Lane, states that one of the primary purposes of the act was to assist the several states to alleviate present and recurring unemployment as well as to remedy bad dwelling conditions for families of low income.

The Massachusetts Housing Authority law quickly followed as an emergency measure, and the City Housing Authority was formed because existing housing conditions indicated its necessity.

All this was somewhat in the nature of emergency legislation.

I believe that Boston has for its size more public housing than any city in the United States.

This surely demonstrated the emergency need as well as the efficiency of our Housing Administration. More than one half has been created in the last ten years.

Housing for the aged now appears to be a need and, perhaps today, is even more justified than any public housing previously created.

We should be proud of what has been accomplished with federal and state aid to better housing conditions for many families, but I don't think we can boast of the need, or that better housing could only be accomplished by public funds, and by exemption from regular real estate taxes, at the same time that the city has found it necessary in less than three years to demolish 1,560 dwellings abandoned in various other locations not in planned redevelopment areas.

As Mr. Lane states, there is virtue in slum clearance, but doubtful justification except in emergencies of creating new public housing which does not pay its way economically on vacant land areas.

My remarks may indicate to you that I am not a "public houser" and I am not. But, I am not against it either if really needed for slum clearance. However, I believe it is a good question as to how much public housing any city can afford if it tends to attract additional population which does not pay its way through some kind of taxes for varied services, including schools, which must be furnished in conjunction with housing.

Earle Barnard, in his comments about assessing, has been very modest about any of the accomplishments of his department since he took office. Actually, a tremendous change in assessing practices is well under way, which is all to the good.

There has been much said in the past about the "abatement racket" or that the abatements granted by the Appellate Tax Board are ruining the city. Actually, practically all the trouble has come from original assessing procedures, and very few abatements have been granted which could not be substantiated or fully justified.

Unfortunately, our city expenses and tax rate have been increasing at such a rate that the value of all property in the city has been adversely affected. However, Mayor Hynes has done one of the most constructive things in his administration by following Appeal Board decisions and Review Board settlements in subsequent assessments; also by instituting, with the support of the Council, the equalization survey, and the reorganization of the assessing procedures.

Nowhere, that I know of, in the United States has there previously been such lack of confidence on the part of real estate developers and owners in either what their assessment would be, or whether or not they would be assessed equitably with other properties of the same class. If we get back to that sort of a situation, we are done for!

Although it must be very evident to all that real estate owners cannot continue paying what is now a confiscatory tax, and no real hope can be seen of rebuilding our city and increasing the tax base unless the levy on real estate is reduced, a major step is accomplished the minute properties are acknowledged to be equitably assessed and the city's problem is thereby clarified.

I am glad that Mr. Weber mentioned the increase in the size of the Planning Department which also, of course, more than doubled its budget in the last couple years. It has been difficult to be for anything that increased city operating expenses, and the Mayor is to be commended for recognizing that smart planning is not only essential, but is also an economy in the long run.

It is not always fully recognized, but by able zoning, good planning, and planned assessment procedures, land use patterns can be completely changed, the valuable parts of a city maintained, and the rest substantially rebuilt over a comparatively few years.

As Tom O'Day has said, we have had the benefit of a mayor who has been very active in improving the mechanical and operational parts of the city administration. Mayor Hynes has had a lonely task and a tough one. He has had to shift from business administrator to star salesman. He has had to administer a city hemmed in by physical limitations and legislative handicaps, and has accomplished many good things for Boston.

However, I know that Mayor Hynes would be the first to agree with me in the fact that he has not accomplished some of the things he would have liked to do for the good of Boston. Some of these are at the legislative level, such as:

The unfair distribution of MTA deficit.

The unfair burden of County expenses.

The reduction of expenses in departments not under direct control of the mayor.

The relief to real estate owners which might be provided by a sales tax.

We have reached the point where, because nothing was accomplished for Boston's benefit along those lines, the city is in a difficult financial position.

I will not mention the White Paper; the Mayor must be sick of it and some of the rest of us are, too. (Besides, it is not very "white" any more.) However, I must bring up one other thing which Earle Barnard did not mention about the tax equalization survey; let me say here that the equalization survey is undoubtedly the fair approach to correct inequities in our assessing practices, but it has also shown those of us who have followed the progress of the survey that if all commercial properties were assessed at full value, all multiple housing assessed at all it can stand with present rent levels, and residential single to four-family houses assessed as at present, the tax rate would be approximately where it is now, namely, over $100.

This, to me, means that we have no place to go, and the city cannot expect to collect revenue from real estate in excess of the present levy.

The past administration should have, and the new administration will have to drastically reduce operating expenses. It is now too late for normal attrition through a no-hire and no-fire policy to remedy the situation. We cannot spend money that we cannot collect.

Values of property have seriously deteriorated in the central business district and the credit standing of the city has dropped substantially. The current budget being considered is probably the most important one Boston has faced to date, and it must be cut! Nobody likes to eliminate jobs or services, but isn't it preferable to the alternative, which could be payless paydays?

Perhaps the most important thing that any public administration can do is to create confidence and a business climate that is good. The businesslike approach of living within your income will create productive jobs in the city, and these are needed just as much as tax revenue.

Our panel members have outlined many necessary and good things that have been done and some very important constructive moves in administration which have been made and are now in process. These, if continued, should be of lasting benefit.

I take this opportunity on your behalf to thank each member of the panel for an excellent presentation.

Mayor . . .

Hailed by the Mayor

Commissioner Haley further pointed out:

"The existing Sanitary, Sewer, Water, and Highway Divisions will continue to be, as they have been, the work horses of the department. The Sanitary Division is little affected by the reorganization. The others have their hands full with construction, reconstruction, and maintenance of facilities which would cost today $300 to $400 millions of dollars to replace."

Commenting on the Public Works reorganization, Mayor Collins said:

"I hail the Public Works Department shake-up as another step in my program for completely revitalizing the city government. Many more department reorganizations are in the making, which over a period of several years should increase morale and efficiency throughout the city and bring about major reductions in the cost of operating the city government."

The Auditorium Commission on December 30, 1959, voted as follows:

¶ Whereas, Only $12,000,000 has been appropriated for the purpose of acquiring land, preparing plans and specifications, constructing and initially equipping the proposed municipal auditorium; and

¶ Whereas, Five hundred and eighty thousand dollars has already been expended therefrom for the purchase of land, and about $770,000 thereof has been encumbered by contracts for architectural and other professional and expert services, leaving but approximately $10,650,000 for construction, equipment, and miscellaneous; and

¶ Whereas, The validity of the lowest bid has been protested and it appears that because of possible litigation either its acceptance or its rejection will result in protracted delay; and

¶ Whereas, It further appears that a simplification of the ultimate contract through revision of the plans and specifications would be in the public interest; and

¶ Whereas, Rejection of all bids will avoid the delay incident to any litigation as well as permit the revision of the plans and specifications so as to simplify the ultimate contract;

¶ Now therefore it is hereby determined to be in the public interest to reject all bids and it is further voted that all bids be and the same hereby are rejected.

WELFARE COSTS DIP IN ALL CATEGORIES

Following is a summary of the Welfare Department's activities for January:

¶ Because of added interest in Public Assistance financial reporting and resultant requests for additional information concerning recurring statistics, the monthly financial and statistical report has been revised.

¶ Beginning with this issue, the total number of cases for which payments were made will be reported. This total, referred to as "Cases Aided," is given directly beneath "Total Payments" and differs from the "Caseload" in that the latter is the number of cases carried over from the previous month, plus the number of applications approved, minus the number of cases closed.

¶ A section has been added regarding applications rejected or withdrawn. A more detailed analysis of "Indirect Payments" has been instituted to better indicate the scope of payments made on behalf of the client. It is felt that these additional statistics will serve to make possible a better interpretation of the role of the Welfare Department.

¶ Public Assistance payments for January amounted to $2,969,336, a decrease of $428,009 compared to the previous month. This drop in expenditures followed an intensive drive to expedite vendor payments. Lower costs were reported in all categories of assistance. Direct payments remained fairly constant; the decrease occurring in the vendor payments.

¶ As the result of approving 854 applications and the formal closing of 959 cases, the caseload went down 105 cases. The caseload as of the end of January stood at 25,911 cases.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

February 8.

General Order No. 653.

Patrolmen Alfred E. O'Connor and Albert J. Kniupis, Division 18, are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

During last November and December and the early part of January of this year, a number of offenses, including breaking and entering places of business in the nighttime; using automobiles without authority of the owners; and larcenies of accessories from automobiles, were reported as having occurred in Division 18.

In discussing these crimes with their commanding officer, Patrolmen O'Connor and Kniupis, assigned to night duty in plain clothes, informed him that they suspected one Daniel J. Casey, Jr., eighteen years, 63 Sunnyside street, Hyde Park, of having been implicated in some of these offenses. Casey was questioned relative to these matters, but denied complicity and was not brought before the court because of lack of direct evidence.

Patrolmen O'Connor and Kniupis continued to devote considerable time, both on and off duty, in keeping Casey under surveillance and on January 9, 1960, arrested him while in the act of using without authority an automobile owned by a Hyde Park resident, which had been reported stolen on that division.

The officers then devoted further time beyond their regular hours of duty in questioning the prisoner and information was obtained as the result of which they, with the cooperation of juvenile officers detailed to Division 18, arrested six other males, three of whom were under seventeen years of age.

As a result of these arrests and further questioning of the prisoners, there were cleared sixteen cases of larceny or breaking and entering which had occurred on Divisions 16, 18, and 19. These included thefts of and from motor vehicles, and breaking and entering or larceny at various stores, gas service stations, an industrial plant and a dwelling.

Three of the seven subjects arrested were prosecuted as delinquents and their cases disposed of in West Roxbury Court. The other four were held for the grand jury.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the devotion to duty of Patrolmen O'Connor and Kniupis as evidenced by their perseverance in this investigation which, carried on beyond their regular hours of duty, resulted in the solution of a large number of offenses and the cessation of the criminal activities of the subject Casey and his six associates.

February 9.

General Order No. 654.

Detective Second Grade Edward J. Walsh, Detective Bureau, detailed to the Special Service Squad, is hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 12.30 A.M., Friday, January 15, 1960, William Keaney, thirty years, married, of 130 O'Callaghan Way, South Boston, and his brother, James Keaney, twenty-five years, married, 893 East Fourth street, South Boston, applied for and received treatment at Boston City Hospital; William for through and through gunshot wound of the stomach and James for a through and through gunshot wound of the lower abdomen, and at 12.40 A.M. both were placed on the danger list. Because of their condition they could not be questioned by the police.

While conducting their investigation, officers from Division 6 and Headquarters received information that this shooting occurred in the Andrew Square Cafe, Dorchester avenue, South Boston, on the night of January 14, 1960, and that the person firing the shots was one James T. O'Malley, twenty-two years, married, 392 Columbia road, Dorchester. Warrants were sought and granted in South Boston District Court against one James T. O'Malley for assault with intent to murder James Keaney and assault with intent to murder William Keaney, both on January 14, 1960, on the premises of 552 Dorchester avenue, South Boston.

On January 19, 1960, a teletype was issued indicating that James T. O'Malley was wanted on Division 6 for questioning relative to this shooting, giving a description of clothing which he might be wearing, and warning that subject might be armed and that caution should be used.

About 1.30 P.M. on Wednesday, January 20, 1960, Detective Edward J. Walsh, while off duty and in South Market street, city, observed a man whom he recognized as O'Malley. Placing his service revolver in his overcoat pocket, he approached O'Malley, drew his service revolver and identified himself. While keeping O'Malley covered, the officer searched him for the weapon used in the assault on the Keaney brothers, but none was found. The detective placed O'Malley under arrest on the above warrants and with the assistance of a Division 1 officer removed him to Police Headquarters where he was booked and delivered to officers of Division 6 for prosecution.

On the morning of January 21, 1960, O'Malley appeared in the Headquarters line-up. Here he was identified by the victim of an armed holdup at a Dorchester liquor store on January 2, 1960, as one of the two men participating in that crime.

In South Boston District Court on January 21, 1960, before Judge Thomas Linehan, O'Malley's case was continued to February 4, 1960, and he was held

February 9.

General Order No. 655.

Detectives Joseph F. Denney, William T. Eunson, and Thomas J. McGuire of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, Robbery Squad, are hereby commended for meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 9:20 p.m., Saturday, January 16, 1960, the above detectives, while cruising in the Roxbury area as the result of recent holdups of several cab drivers, and when at the intersection of Washington and Elmore streets, were hailed by one Alexander J. Nolan, of 18 Harvard street, Dorchester, a taxicab driver, who reported that he had just been held up and robbed by a man described as thirty years of age, 6 feet 2 inches, 205 pounds, wearing dark shoes. He stated he had picked this individual up as a passenger at Washington and Dale streets and was directed to drive to Munroe street and Walnut avenue.

Upon reaching this location, this passenger suddenly pressed a hard object to the back of Nolan stating: "This is a holdup, give me your money." Nolan gave the unknown man $10 in U. S. currency and coins. The holdup man then asked Nolan if he had a wrist watch. Nolan replied, "No." The holdup man then reached and felt of Nolan's wrist, saying, "I ought to shoot your head off for lying." The culprit then took Nolan's Lord Elgin wrist watch valued at $35 and also a brown leather wallet from Nolan's pocket containing personal papers. The holdup man then got out of the cab and told Nolan "to get going."

Detectives Denney, Eunson, and McGuire with the taxicab driver retraced the route of the taxi ride and when on Bainbridge street, near Dale street, they observed a man answering the description of the holdup man, accompanied by two other men, with all three about to enter an automobile. The wanted man was seen to drop something in the street which proved to be money and a brown leather wallet. Upon questioning by the detectives, the holdup man identified himself as one Peter Bullock, twenty-nine years, single, of 3 Sunderland street, Roxbury, and upon searching him, he was found to have in his possession a Lord Elgin wrist watch which was identified by Nolan, the taxicab driver, as his property.

The other two men identified themselves as Joe E. Williams, twenty-six years, single, of 94 Intervale street, Roxbury, and Abraham Kelley, twenty-seven years, single, of 19 Fernboro street, Roxbury. All three men were placed under arrest as suspicious persons, to wit; suspicion unarmed robbery of Alexander Nolan on January 16, 1960.

On Monday, January 18, 1960, Peter Bullock was identified at Police Headquarters by Frederick Whitfield as the man who held him up on Friday, January 15, 1960, while operating an I.T.O.A. cab on Ottawa street, Roxbury, Division 9, at about 11.30 p.m.

On Tuesday, January 19, 1960, Peter Bullock was identified at Police Headquarters line-up by Robert Morgan of 56 Blanch street, Cambridge, Mass., as the man who held him up while he was operating a Checker Taxicab on Warren street, Roxbury, Division 9, on January 16, 1960, at 12.50 a.m.

On Tuesday, January 19, 1960, Peter Bullock was identified at Police Headquarters line-up by Frederick Taylor, of 40 Lawrence avenue, Roxbury, as the man who held him up while operating an I.T.O.A. taxicab in Fayston street, Roxbury, Division 9, on January 15, 1960, at about 11.05 p.m.

On Tuesday, January 19, 1960, Detectives Denney, Eunson, and McGuire, with their witnesses, sought and were granted warrants in the Roxbury Municipal Court against Peter Bullock for the following four counts:

1. Robbery Armed: That the defendant, while armed with a certain dangerous weapon, to wit: a .38 calibre revolver, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Frederick Taylor, $21 in U.S. currency, one gent's Bulova wrist watch, valued at $100, one gold class ring, valued at $40, all the property of the said Frederick Taylor, while in Fayston street, Roxbury, on January 15, 1960.

2. Robbery Armed: That the defendant, while armed with a certain dangerous weapon, to wit: a .38 calibre revolver, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Frederick Whitfield on January 15, 1960, while in Ottawa street, Roxbury, $35 in U.S. currency, the property of said Whitfield.

3. Robbery Unarmed: That the defendant, being unarmed, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Robert Morgan, while on Warren street, Roxbury, on January 16, 1960, $40 in U.S. currency, the property of said Morgan.

4. Robbery Unarmed: That the defendant, being unarmed, did assault with intent to rob and did rob and steal from Alexander Nolan, $12.05 in U.S. currency, one gent's Lord Elgin wrist watch valued at $35, one brown leather wallet valued at $1, the property of the said Nolan, while in Walnut avenue, Roxbury, on January 16, 1960.

The defendant, Peter Bullock, appeared before Judge Philip A. Tracy in Roxbury Municipal Court, that same morning, January 19 and after hearing all the evidence Bullock was held for the grand jury and bail set at $10,000.

The other two suspects, Williams and Kelley, were released after investigation by the above detectives.

The Police Commissioner is pleased to recognize the zealous, painstaking and intelligent manner, without regard to hours, in which Detectives Denny, Eunson, and McGuire brought about the apprehension of this dangerous criminal

At the same time and place the holdup men robbed three men customers of the store, taking from them a total of $48.85 in United States currency, then forced their four victims to enter a walk-in refrigerator, closed the door, and fled the scene. Teletype was issued covering this holdup.

About 3 A.M. on January 29, 1960, the night clerk and night watchman at the Commander Hotel, 16 Garden street, Cambridge, Mass., were held up and robbed of $200 by two men answering the general description of the two who had perpetrated the Cushing Liquor Company holdup. At 4 A.M. that date a teletype was issued with the description of these two subjects wanted by the Cambridge police for this armed robbery and stating that they had been driven by cab to the North Station, where they left the cab and disappeared.

On the early morning of February 1, 1960, Detectives Edward J. Walsh and Thomas E. Connolly, after comparing teletype information relative to these holdups, recalled questioning Robert G. Ramoska and Nicholas Yasaian on Union Park street, South End district, and that they answered the teletyped descriptions. They brought their suspicions to the attention of Sergt. Walter A. Rachalski, who instructed them to secure photographs of the suspects and show them to the several victims. On viewing the photographs, along with numerous other criminal pictures, the night clerk and night watchman of the Commander Hotel identified as the persons who committed the armed holdup, the photographs of Robert G. Ramoska, alias Robert Dellello, seventeen years, single, of 136 Seaver street, Dorchester, and Nicholas R. Yasaian, eighteen years, single, 48 Union Park street, Boston.

Sergeant Detective Jordan, Sergt. Rachalski, and Detectives Walsh and Connolly went to the homes of Ramoska and Yasaian. The suspects were not there, but information was received that they had made arrangements to flee to Florida. The sergeants staked the squad out at Logan International Airport, South Station, Back Bay Station, and the Greyhound and Trailway Bus Terminals, in an effort to intercept this flight from the city. To cover the stakeout it was necessary to recall to duty Detectives Powers, Moar, and Nee.

About 9.30 A.M., February 1, 1960, Sergt. Rachalski and Detective Pucillo, staked out at the Logan International Airport, received information that Robert Ramoska and Nicholas Yasaian had boarded Eastern Airlines plane, Flight 651, bound for Miami, Florida. With the assistance of Sergt. Alvin B. Collins, airport detail of the state police, the pilot was contacted and all passengers were requested to leave the plane, the reason being given that "the plane has developed engine trouble." This ruse was used in order to avoid the possibility of a struggle on board which might have endangered the safety of the other passengers.

Ramoska and Yasaian were apprehended as they left the plane, arrested and handcuffed by Sergt. Rachalski and Detective Pucillo, and conveyed to Boston Police Headquarters. After extensive questioning by the sergeants and detectives, they confessed to committing the armed holdups of four men in the Cushing Liquor Store and the armed holdup of two men at the Commander Hotel in Cambridge. Robert Ramoska stated that the revolver, used by him, was thrown in the Charles River Lower Basin after the hotel robbery. On Tuesday, February 2, 1960, at Police Headquarters line-up, the prisoners were identified by all the victims of the several armed holdups.

In Dorchester District Court, before Justice David Rose, the defendants, Robert Ramoska and Nicholas Yasaian were arraigned on four counts of armed robbery on January 26, 1960, on the premises of the Cushing Liquors, Inc., 116 Washington street, Dorchester. Case was continued to February 11, 1960, for hearing and both defendants were held in bail of $10,000 double surety. On that date they waived examination and Judge Shulman, after hearing the summary of the case, held both defendants for the grand jury in $50,000 bail.

The evidence in the Commander Hotel armed robbery case is to be presented to the March sitting of the Middlesex County Grand Jury at East Cambridge, by District Attorney John J. Droney.

The commissioner is pleased to recognize the devotion to duty of Sergts. Jordan and Rachalski and Detectives Walsh, Connolly, Moar, Nee, Powers, and Pucillo. With continuing diligence and long hours spent in their investigations of crimes of violence, they have again accomplished an important arrest, and brought about the incarceration of two young but dangerous criminals who, while at liberty from the Juvenile Guidance Center at Bridgewater, were engaged in a series of armed robberies.

DEPARTMENT OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Protection Services

DEAR MR. MAYOR:

For many years this department's building at 26 Norman street, Boston, in which thousands of dollars worth of school equipment and school furniture is stored, has been under the protection of the American District Telegraph Company, 60 State street, Boston, to provide a protection service which I believe to be of great value to the City of Boston. The contract with the American District Telegraph Company has been made annually and the current contract will expire March 31, 1960.

As per their agreement of last year, when an increase of 5 per cent was allowed, the American District Telegraph Company will perform this burglar alarm service for the period of April 1, 1960, to March 31, 1961, at the same price as last year, namely, $1,778.33.

I am definitely of the opinion that the protection services operated by the American District Telegraph Company are necessary in this building and ask that you authorize me to negotiate a contract, without advertising, with the American District Telegraph Company, 60 State street, Boston, Mass., for Central Station Burglary Alarm Service at the Washington School Building, 26 Norman street, Boston, Mass., for the period April 1, 1960, to March 31, 1961, in the amount of $1,778.33.

Respectfully yours,

CHARLES A. CALLANAN,
Superintendent of Construction.

Detailed traffic studies in Worcester, Mass., indicated that the city was losing $35,000 worth of business daily because of congestion. The daily loss in Cincinnati was estimated at $100,000; St. Louis, $125,000, and the Chicago Loop, $250,000.

POLICEMEN LEARN SPANISH

Seventy Bronx policemen have begun a sixteen-week course in conversational Spanish. The course is sponsored by the Police Department and the education section of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. The purposes of the course are to break down the language barrier, avert friction, and also to lessen nationality tensions, a spokesman said. There will be two sessions each week to accommodate the policemen who volunteered to take the course on their own time.

PLANNING BOARD PUBLISHES NEW MAP OF CITY

The City Planning Board, on February 19, issued a new, 1960 edition, map of Boston, printed in three colors and containing more than 1,000 changes of the 1954 issue. It is drawn to the scale of 1,600 feet to the inch and is 37 inches by 42 inches in size.

Each major cartographical change in the city over the past six years is recorded. These include the John F. Fitzgerald Expressway and the new South-east Expressway.

There are two notable blank spaces: the location of the old "New York" streets in the South End, and what once was a maze of thoroughfares on the fringe of the West End adjacent to the Esplanade. All of these streets have been literally wiped off the map to make room for urban redevelopment.

The white spaces in the map showing Boston Proper are more than compensated for in the depicted outlying areas of Hyde Park, Mattapan, Roslindale, and West Roxbury, where thousands of new homes have sprung up recently in once vacant land areas, necessitating an impressive network of new streets.

Besides recording the routine acceptance of new streets—about two miles of them, annually, over the past six years —and many name changes in public streets—the new map records 225 name changes in private ways.

As of January 1, 1960, figures from the Department of Public Works show the following totals for streets under its jurisdiction: 3,370 public streets, 207 part-public streets, 85 public alleyways, and 1,700 private ways. In recent years, private ways are being converted to public ways at the rate of fifty per year.

The total mileage of public ways, exclusive of MDC parkways and state highways, is 741. There are 120 additional miles of private ways.

All the park land and playgrounds of the city, municipal and MDC controlled, are shown in green on the map. Not included, however, are the smaller play areas and tot lots scattered throughout the city. Cemeteries are shown in dotted green, and water is shown in blue. An innovation in the new edition is an inset, showing the islands of Boston Harbor out to Graves Light.

There have been some clarifications of the boundary lines between Boston and Winthrop in the vicinity of the Logan International Airport. This involved the making of certain corrections on the map as previously published, some minor errors having existed since 1926.

Drawing of the map was a two-year task of Griswold G. Tyng, veteran cartographer and illustrator for the City Planning Board, who retired last October. The greater part of the work had to be expertly done under a magnifying glass. The printed copy is a reduction of a wall-sized map measuring 6 feet by 7 feet.

Another feature of the map is the inclusion of several main thoroughfares in adjacent municipalities to clearly indicate their approach to Boston. The 1,600 feet to the inch scale makes the reading of the map so distinct that it is possible to almost pinpoint the location of any piece of property in the city.

The map bears the signature of each member of the City Planning Board as follows: Timothy J. Regan, Jr., chairman; H. Daland Chandler, Edward C. Keane, Carl Dreyfus, Margaret Divver, Frederick A. Davis, Harry J. Keefe, and Robert A. MacLellan.

Copies of the printed map, either in color or in black and white, may be obtained at the office of the City Planning Board at 1108 City Hall Annex, at a charge of $1.00.

BOSTON TOPS ENTIRE STATE AND PLACES
EIGHTH IN NATION ON FIRE PREVENTION

The National Fire Protection Association notified Mayor John F. Collins, on February 19, that Boston has been awarded first place in the state of Massachusetts "for outstanding activity in Fire Prevention during the past year."

Mayor Collins said he was "proud and pleased" by the award and offered his sincerest congratulations to Fire Commissioner Henry A. Scagnoli and the members of the Boston Fire Department.

Boston placed third in the country for municipalities of over 500,000 population participating in fire prevention competition. Some 1,541 communities were judged by the National Fire Protection Association.

Nationally, Boston was awarded eighth place in fire prevention, tying with the city of New York, which has a population of 7,000,000.

The Fire Prevention Division in Boston is headed by Assistant Chief John E. Clougherty. Both Mayor Collins and Commissioner Scagnoli praised Chief Clougherty for his excellent administration of the prevention program.

Commissioner's Statement

Informed of the award, Commissioner Scagnoli made the following statement:

"Fire prevention in Boston is carried on on a day-to-day, week-to-week basis. Through the in-service inspection program, whereby buildings are inspected on a street-by-street and block-by-block basis, many common fire hazards which would ordinarily contribute to loss of life and property have been eliminated.

"The Boston Fire Prevention Code is another major step forward in fire prevention; and it is reputed to be the most comprehensive, up-to-date codified and actively enforced publication dealing with fire prevention in the entire country.

"The Fire Prevention Inspection Force, consisting of members assigned to inspection duty, also has been increased during the past year with the result that while Boston still has many fires, they are not of the serious type which developed in previous years. In fact, the annual fire loss in Boston is very well contained—a direct contradiction to state and national trends."

Commissioner Scagnoli concluded: "My thanks to the Boston Fire Department for a job well done. I know the citizens of Boston join with me in expressing our gratitude to the 2,200 members of the department for their devotion to duty."

DEFEAT OF SALES TAX A "SAD DAY FOR BOSTON" DECLARES MAYOR COLLINS

On being informed of the defeat of the limited sales tax bill in the House of Representatives, Mayor Collins, on February 15, stated as follows:

"Let those who complain of the tax rate or reduced city services lay the blame at the door of those who killed the sales tax.

"Today was a sad day for Boston home owners and rent payers. They have been denied relief from the oppressive burden of a real estate tax in excess of $100.

"Our declining tax base makes maintenance of the present level of municipal services impossible without relief from the State Legislature. Since the Legislature has refused to provide such relief, budget reductions are forced upon the municipal administration with a resultant curtailment of the present level of municipal services.

"We cannot afford the level of services for which we cannot pay. Economy alone cannot revitalize our city."

SPECIAL PROTECTION FOR INVALIDS

Akron's Fire Department plans to give invalids extra protection against injury or death from home fires. Fire Chief Gerald K. Verotzy plans to mark Akron homes in which invalids live.

Firemen, with permission, will place stickers on front doors of invalids' homes. Firemen also will note where an invalid has his bedroom and where he might be during waking hours.

Card files will be kept on this information. If an emergency arises at a marked home, firemen will have an advantage in making a rescue.

Sealed proposals for the erection and completion of a branch library building adjacent to Nos. 4238-4244 Washington street, Roslindale, were received and opened at the office of the trustees at twelve o'clock noon on Monday, February 1, 1960. They were as follows:

S. Volpe & Co., Inc., $294,000; Breino Construction Corporation, $310,900; J. F. Fitzgerald Construction Company, $312,920; Rich Construction Company, Inc., $313,313; R. M. Martin & Co., Inc., $314,917; Kirkland Construction Company, Inc., $316,700; Sciabia & Co., Inc., $317,400; M. Solimando, Inc., $318,400; Edward Goverman, $319,900; J. A. Singarella Company, $324,300; Tassinari Contracting Corporation, $326,541; Stamell Construction Company, Inc., $329,000; J. F. White Contracting Company, $333,700.

Inasmuch as no subbid was received for sprinkler work, the general contractors were notified to include in their proposals an allowance of $3,000 for this work.

The Trustees of the Public Library have taken the following action to award the contract:

"Voted, That there be awarded to S. Volpe & Co., Inc., 185 Devonshire street, Boston, Mass., the lowest responsible and eligible bidder in the public bidding, the contract for the erection and completion of a branch library building adjacent to Nos. 4238-4244 Washington street, Roslindale, as specified in the contract in the total amount of two hundred and ninety-four thousand dollars ($294,000), said amount to be adjusted by the difference, if any, between the amount for which the selected subcontractor agrees to perform the class of work for which a subbid was not received and the amount relating thereto as appearing in the proposal when submitted."

Subsequently, three companies were invited to submit proposals for the sprinkler work. The low bid was in the amount of $2,650, which was submitted by the Viking Sprinkler Company, 51 Sleeper street, Boston, Mass.

Since the above amount is $350 less than the allowance as it appears in the general contractor's proposal, the contract price is to be adjusted by this amount and the adjusted contract price is to be two hundred and ninety-three thousand six hundred and fifty dollars ($293,650).

Permission was granted to award this contract to S. Volpe & Co., Inc., in the amount indicated above.

CLAIMS APPROVED

Eda P. Raia, 106 Chelsea street, East Boston, for personal injuries received on December 10, 1958, caused by defective highway at 52 Chelsea street, East Boston, by payment of $495.

NEW INCINERATOR FOR PHILA.

Philadelphia has purchased for $225,000 a twenty-five acre tract, the site of a proposed $2,000,000 incinerator. The county incinerator authority said the kind of incinerator has not been decided but would probably be of the wet ash type.

In this model, it was explained, garbage is burned in a series of combustion chambers. The burned material is conveyed to a water-filled hopper where it is extinguished. The refuse then is carried by a conveyor to a quarry.

N. Y. TALKS OF MORE SHOPPERS' GARAGES

In a move to stimulate mid-Manhattan shopping New York's traffic Commissioner T. T. Wiley has recommended a $52,500,000 garage-building program.

The plan provides for fifteen garages strategically placed, with parking fees at most of them to be 25 cents an hour for up to four hours. The cost would be met through 4 per cent 30-year bonds.

The garages would be directed to the needs of short-time parkers. They would generate $100 million a year in retail trade, it is estimated.

FEDERAL STUDY OF EXHAUST FUMES

The United States House of Representatives has passed legislation to authorize the surgeon general of the Public Health Service to make a study to determine maximum standards for the elements and amounts of exhaust fumes motor vehicles may discharge, according to the American Municipal News. No later than two years after enactment, a report on the findings and recommendations must be submitted to Congress.

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR ROSLINDALE LIBRARY

Mayor John F. Collins, on February 25, approved the award of a contract for the erection of a branch library building in Roslindale.

S. Volpe Company, Inc., will begin work on the structure, to be located at the corner of Washington and Poplar streets, as soon as the abandoned fire station, now occupying the site, is demolished.

The winning contract was the result of thirteen bids, ranging from $294,000, the award figure, to $333,700, opened by the Library Trustees on February 1.

The architects are the firm of Isidor Richmond and Carney Goldberg. The new building will contain spacious reading rooms for children, young adults, and adults, together with attractive work areas, and comfortable staff quarters. It will have space for story hours, film showings, meetings of the Friends of the Roslindale Branch Library, and similar activities.

The building will be one story in height and semi-circular in shape with a low-lying dome surmounting the center of the building. It is to be completely air conditioned. The interior will be generously lighted by large window areas facing Washington and Poplar streets as well as through lighting that will enter the building from under the dome.

The architects have designed the building in the latest contemporary style, and at the same time have embodied in their design a conservative atmosphere that is pleasantly conducive to reading and study.

The Roslindale Branch Library has had a varied and interesting history. In 1878 a delivery station for books from the Jamaica Plain Branch Library was opened in a private home on Florence street. In 1893 this was transferred to a corner of a dry goods store at 19 Poplar street. In 1896 it was moved to a variety store at 25 Poplar street.

The growth of the Roslindale community showed an increasing need for improved library service. The report of the Trustees for 1900 stated: "An appropriation of $5,000 was made by the city government for the establishment of a reading room in Roslindale, where only a shop station existed." The new reading room was opened in roomy and attractive quarters in the Wise Building, Washington street, on December 29.

It had nearly 2,000 volumes on the shelves, including deposits, and received regularly twenty-eight periodicals.

By 1918 the library had long outgrown its quarters. When the new municipal building was completed during that year, the library moved into its present quarters, directly beneath the gymnasium.

Since 1918 the library has grown along with its community. Its book collection now numbers approximately 25,000 volumes and it subscribes to 66 periodicals. For a number of years it has ranked first in circulation, the number of books borrowed, among the 27 branch libraries in the City of Boston.

MAYOR OUTLINES HUB'S MASS TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS

Writing in the Boston Globe of Sunday, February 28, Mayor Collins stated as follows:

The fortunes of Boston, it appears, ebb and flow with the commuting tide. The number of persons coming downtown each day both determines and reflects changes in the city's economy.

In the last thirty-three years the number of motor vehicles entering downtown Boston each day has increased by 55 per cent. However, the number of persons coming into central Boston each day has dropped by 15 per cent.

Thus, it is easy to see that the core of our transportation problem is more automobiles, fewer people.

There is a direct correlation between the decline of the commuting over the past generation, the increase in our tax rate, the drop in assessed valuations, and the encroachment of blight on our downtown center.

Operation Revival

It is my intention to reverse these trends by creating a first-class transportation system which will permit larger numbers of persons to come into downtown Boston with greater comfort, speed, and convenience.

But first there must be a reason, an incentive, for coming downtown. This reason can be found in the increased vitality becoming more and more evident in our central business area.

We are in the midst of a 400-million-dollar redevelopment program. New towers of steel and glass, offices and apartments, are rising up around us. And this is just the beginning.

I have instituted new assessing policies and our devout dedication to municipal economy is making it possible for one business firm after another to come into the city, or to expand in the city.

This great face-lifting program, now passing through the planning and demolition stages to construction, promises a future Boston of uptown, downtown, all around the town that will be appealing and exciting, just as it will be economically sound.

Only the Beginning

And as I said, this is just the beginning. Added to present developments is a new proposal for a 30-million to 50-million dollar development of the historic Boston water front.

Our world-famous hospitals and schools are constantly expanding their facilities and services to the public. The arts are flourishing here. Our theaters, concert halls, and museums are supplemented by the Metropolitan Boston Arts Center and the Boston Arts Festival and a modern opera house is nearing the blueprint stage.

These are compelling reasons why Boston will remain the living center of the metropolitan area. They are also the reasons why Boston must have first-class transportation.

Boston, now in the midst of "Operation Revival," never can approach its real potential until we provide a vastly superior transportation system, balanced to include efficient public and private transportation.

More Cars, Fewer People

Since the mid-forties the state and the municipalities have contributed over 500 million dollars to new transportation facilities in the Boston area. But, of this amount, more than 90 per cent has gone into highways, streets and parking, and less than 10 per cent to public transportation.

The consequences are all too apparent—more cars, fewer persons in the central business area.

Now I'm not saying that highway expenditures have been unjustified. On the contrary, they are providing faster, safer transportation and they quicken the pace of business and industry. I think the Route 128 development is a grand monument to the economic wisdom of the Commonwealth's road-building program.

In Boston, our new central artery system opened last July and it already is producing similar achievements in the form of the Travelers Building and the New York Streets Development.

Program Must Be Balanced

When the Central Artery is completed by construction of the Inner Belt Expressway, I predict a great arc of new private development will follow it around the city.

The highway program, of course, must continue, but it must be balanced by a program of comparable expansion of public transportation.

Here's what I mean. Since the start of the highway program, patronage on public transportation has dropped 50 per cent. This, in turn, has thrown unexpected volumes of traffic on the highway. Continued neglect of public transportation would be sheer folly. Such neglect would result in massive congestion and economic decline.

Opponents of rapid transit argue that this form of transportation is unpopular, that people will not use it. But let's examine the record.

MTA Levels Off

After a decade of sharp decline, MTA patronage leveled off in the last half of last year with a drop of only .00028 per cent in patronage. The Highland Branch is carrying eight times as many commuters as the Boston & Albany Railroad service it replaced.

Transit improvements cost money, but they create economic values worth many times the original investment. The most valuable property in Boston is directly over our downtown subway lines. Developments such as the Prudential Center and the Government Center would be impossible were it not for the transit lines that serve these sites.

Transit extensions south, west, and north of Boston can be financed for a fraction of the cost of our highway program.

The extensions will pay for themselves in the reduction of highway costs. Are you aware that the present MTA system represents a saving of more than six hundred million dollars in highway and parking expenditures? That's just the amount it would cost to provide for transit riders if they were forced to travel by automobile.

We have yet to devise a suitable method of financing transit improvements. We need a financial method which the public will accept as equitable. Finding such a method of finance is the chief task before the municipalities and the Commonwealth.

At the Crossroads

The past fifteen years have been years of remarkable progress in highway building. At the end of World War II there were few persons, if any, who could have predicted the giant strides to be made so boldly and so effectively in Greater Boston.

Today, in the early months of the 1960's, it is imperative that we move ever forward into a decade of substantial progress in public transportation. The resurgence, the revival of Boston, and the welfare of Greater Boston require that we meet this challenge with every resource at our disposal—and we will.

Patrolman Richard Clarke, Division 14.
Patrolman James W. McColgan, Division 4.

February 26.

General Order No. 663.

The Acting Police Commissioner is pleased to recognize the meritorious police work performed by Detectives Walter J. Gillis, John F. Hames, Austin J. McGowan, and Patrolmen Chester J. Broderick and Joseph J. DiNatale of Division 6, and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 12.25 A.M., February 6, 1960, Michael J. Melchione, of 129 West Broadway, South Boston, manager of the poolroom at 326 West Broadway, South Boston, while in the process of closing the premises, was confronted at the front door of the establishment by one Edward Curran, 26 years, single, of 19 Mercer street, South Boston, who demanded admittance. Upon Melchione's refusal, Curran drew a black automatic pistol from his belt and pointed it at Melchione who immediately grappled with Curran causing both to fall to the sidewalk.

Detectives Gillis and Hames and Patrolman DiNatale, who were at West Broadway and D street, heard and observed the scuffle and ran toward the scene. As they approached they heard Melchione shout: "He's got a gun!" At this moment, one Stephen McNeil, 19 years, single, of 373 West Second street, South Boston, jumped on Melchione just as the above officers reached there and McNeil was grabbed by Detective Hames and Patrolman DiNatale and was taken into custody.

Patrolman Broderick, on detail at the Pizzerama, 328 West Broadway, arrived at this moment and as Melchione and Curran got to their feet, he observed the pistol on the ground and threw himself upon it to prevent either of the participants from gaining control of it. Detective Gillis seized Curran and with the assistance of Patrolman Broderick, who, meanwhile, had placed the pistol in his uniform pocket, the prisoners, McNeil and Curran, were walked to the station.

The firearm seized from Curran, with a cartridge in the chamber and cocked a .32 caliber Italian Beretta automatic pistol, Serial No. 920880, was forwarded to the ballistics unit for examination which resulted in information from the Maine State Police that the firearm had been stolen from Augin's Pawnshop, Presque Isle, Maine, in a break committed there on January 31, 1960.

In the course of interrogation of Curran by Detectives Gillis, Hames, and McGowan, he stated he had received the firearm from one Victor Vadeisa, 24 years, single, of 171 West Eighth street, South Boston. Vadeisa was immediately questioned and he stated that he saw the gun for the first time on February 5, 1960, in Curran's possession, when they were in Peter and Dick's Tavern, 208 West Broadway. He further stated that they went to the First Tavern, 294 West Broadway, after leaving the former tavern, where Curran again displayed the gun which Vadeisa took away from him, put on the safety catch, and then Curran took back the gun. Vadeisa stated he left the tavern alone and when across the street, heard the sound of two shots, that he returned to the First Tavern and persuaded Curran to leave, which he did. This incident occurred at about 11.50 P.M., a short time previous to the disturbance caused by Curran at the poolroom.

On February 12, 1960, Detectives Gillis, Hames, and McGowan visited the First Tavern where Charles Pope, of 19 Waterford street, Boston, stated he was the bartender on the night of February 5, 1960. After first denying knowledge of any shooting on these premises that night, Pope admitted that about 11.50 P.M., he observed a gun in Curran's hand and told him to put it away. He stated that Curran pointed the gun in his direction and fired one shot which broke the top from a bottle on the bar; that Curran then pointed the gun directly at him and fired a second shot as he, Pope, dropped to the floor and that as he crawled to the back room of the tavern, he observed Curran being led from the premises by Vadeisa. Pope further stated that he remained within the premises until 1.30 A.M., and did not inform the police about the incident as he had learned that Curran had been arrested. The premises of the First Tavern were examined by Detective Earl Laird, department ballisticsian, and two lead fragments were removed from the left wall.

Edward Curran was arraigned in South Boston Court on February 13, 1960, charged with assault with intent to murder one Charles Pope; with assault by means of a dangerous weapon on Michael J. Melchione and for the unlawful carrying of a firearm. Curran was held in bail in $30,500 for the grand jury.

At about 6.45 P.M., February 16, 1960, Detectives Gillis, Hames, and McGowan accompanied by Sheriff Edward Green, of Aroostook County, Maine, and Sergt. James Mahany, of the Presque Isle Police Department, Maine, arrested Victor Vadeisa without a warrant, as a fugitive from justice, charged with breaking and entering Augin's Pawnshop in Presque Isle, Maine, on January 31, 1960, and larceny of fourteen firearms. On February 17, 1960, Vadeisa, after intensive questioning, confessed to the breaking and entering and larceny charges.

The detectives searched the home of Vadeisa and found hidden in the ceiling boards of the cellar the following firearms:

1. A .357 Magnum Great Western .45 caliber revolver, No. 18651.
2. A .45 caliber Remington automatic pistol, No. 1-292-604, with four cartridges in the magazine.
3. A .22 caliber Astra semiautomatic cub model pistol, No. 96161.
4. A .22 caliber Mississippi derringer—the number of which had been filed off.
5. A .32 caliber Whitley semiautomatic target pistol, No. 31356.
6. One box of .25 caliber automatic cartridges.

Vadeisa stated that except for the above firearms, he had sold the remainder to persons unknown to him and stated further that he could not remember the details of the sales due to his state of drunkenness at the time. Vadeisa was delivered to the Bureau of Criminal Investigation for rendition proceedings. Investigation is still active in an effort to locate the remaining firearms.

The Acting Police Commissioner is pleased to recognize the prompt response, efficient police work, and many off-duty hours given to this case by these officers which resulted in the arrest of an armed criminal who would have caused serious injury or even death to some innocent person, as well as the apprehension of a second individual who had stolen a large supply of firearms in another state. Police work of this type reflects credit on the entire department.

February 29.

General Order No. 664.

Patrolmen Thomas E. Carney and Francis J. Coleman of Division 4 are hereby commended for the performance of meritorious police duty and each is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 6.05 P.M., February 19, 1960, the officers observed George Dixon, 20, of 8 Compton street, Boston, who was reported missing from the Boston State Hospital and considered very dangerous, running in Lucas street, towards Shawmut avenue. He was wanted for attempted robbery on Division 4. The officers separated in order to head off Dixon in case he backtracked and Patrolman Coleman caught up with him in a parking lot opposite 1000 Washington street. As the officer closed in on him Dixon suddenly pulled a hunting knife from his pocket and lunged at the officer who evaded him. Patrolman Coleman drew his service revolver and in order to prevent serious injury to himself and to apprehend this man, fired one shot into the air. Dixon then put the knife back in his pocket. Patrolman Carney came on the scene and both officers subdued Dixon and placed him under arrest on suspicion of attempted armed robbery of a variety store owned by Carnig Koresian, at 28 Shawmut avenue, on February 8. At the time of arrest the officers recovered a 5-inch hunting knife from Dixon's pocket.

Investigation by the officers revealed that Dixon was the man who entered his store about 9.25 P.M., February 8, and demanded that he open the cash register and give him the money or he would shoot. At this point Koresian threw a pot of water in Dixon's face whereupon Dixon drew a knife from a sheath. The sheath dropped to the floor and Dixon ran out of the store into Warrenton street, towards Washington street. Koresian stated that at the time of the attempted holdup Dixon was wearing a gray tweed overcoat, dark rimmed glasses, a dark hat, and a white shirt. Koresian stated that he is terrified of this person.

The officers went to the Boston State Hospital where they found and seized as evidence the following articles, all property of Dixon: one gray tweed overcoat, one pair of dark eyeglass frames with no lens, one white starched shirt that showed evidence of water stain, and one hunting knife, all of which tended to identify him as the man who attempted to hold up Koresian. The hunting knife was identified as having been stolen in a break at the Peoples Loan Company, 165 Broadway, about 10.10 P.M., February 18, when the front window was smashed and fifteen small pocket knives and three hunting knives with 5-inch blades were taken. Investigation by the officers disclosed that the three knives Dixon had in his possession were taken in this break and were identified by the owner of the store.

On February 20 Dixon was arraigned in Central Municipal Court before Judge Joseph Riley on a warrant charging him with assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, a knife, on Patrolman Coleman. The case was continued to February 23 and after hearing the evidence and in view of the fact that Dixon had escaped from the Boston State Hospital while awaiting commitment to the Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Bridgewater for the criminally insane, Judge Riley committed him to the Massachusetts Correctional Institution for thirty-five days' observation.

The same officers, while assigned to a fixed post at Dover and Washington streets, about 12.05 A.M., February 14, heard what seemed to be an explosion coming from Dover street. They proceeded down Dover street and upon approaching No. 69, a four-story brick business building and dwelling house, observed smoke and flames coming from the upper floors. Patrolman Coleman ran to the corner of Dover street and Shawmut avenue, sounded an alarm of fire, then returned to the scene of the fire where he joined Patrolman Carney and together they proceeded to the second floor where they found it necessary to break the door of the apartment in order to gain entrance. They found the occupants, a man, his wife, and daughter, asleep in their beds. Patrolman Carney lead the people to the street while Patrolman Coleman went to the third floor where he again found it necessary to break the door of the apartment to gain entrance. He found the occupant, an incapacitated man who needed the use of crutches, asleep in bed, and he carried him to the street.

Both officers then re-entered the burning building and went to the fourth floor in a further search for occupants and upon receiving no response to repeated knocking on the door, forced the door. On entering they found the occupants, a man, his wife, and daughter, asleep in their beds. Patrolman Carney lead the parents to the street while Patrolman Coleman carried the daughter to safety.

The Acting Police Commissioner is pleased to recognize the exceptional devotion to duty displayed by these officers, first, for their courage in apprehending a man who was insane to the extent of being dangerous and preventing him from committing additional crimes, and secondly, for the disregard of their own personal safety in entering a burning building repeatedly to rescue seven persons.

March 2.

The resignation of Patrolman James B. Dever, Division 10, having been presented, it is hereby accepted, to take effect as of Tuesday, March 1, 1960, at 5.45 o'clock P.M.

BUILDING PERMITS HIT $92 MILLION IN 1959

The total value of new construction in Boston reached an all-time high of $92 million during 1959. The previous high year was 1925 when a total of $71 million worth of buildings were constructed.

Of last year's total $69 million is represented in permits issued by preliminary construction work on the Prudential Center. This left $22 million represented by other construction or alteration projects, the lowest total since the close of World War II.

Aside from the Prudential undertaking, four projects were started in 1959 which exceeded $1 million in cost. They were:

A public school in Roxbury, cost $1 million; a medical building for Boston University in the South End, cost $2.5 million; a library for Simmons College in the Back Bay, cost $1.6 million, and an apartment house on Beacon Hill, cost $1.7 million.

DETROIT PLANS CIVIC CENTER MALL

Architects have prepared a model of a convention mall for the City of Detroit extending from the Civic Center to Michigan avenue, between Washington Boulevard and Second. There would be a green strip, planners say, reserved for use of pedestrians, approaching the Civic Center. In the mall area would be parking garages, office buildings, recreation center, shops, and a hotel.

IT'S AN ILL WIND

Youngstown reports 67 per cent less dirt in the city's air during the last quarter of 1959 than in the same period the year before. Most of the improvement resulted from the steel strike, but control activities also played a major role when the mills reopened in November.

ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES DEPARTMENT.

Purchasing Division.

Doughnut Mix

DEAR MR. MAYOR:

For several years, this office has been purchasing doughnut mix for the various city institutions from DCA Food Industries, Inc. This company, in turn, loans their doughnut making machines to the city for use in the institutions. It is my understanding that no other company maintains a similar policy.

Authority is therefore requested to dispense with publicly advertising for prices and award a contract, without public advertisement, to DCA Food Industries, Inc., for furnishing doughnut mix to the various city institutions for the period from April 1, 1960, to March 31, 1961, inclusive, at the following price:

Fifteen cents per pound in 100-pound bags in lots of five bags or more.

Approximate total amount of contract will be $4,500, net.

Respectfully yours,

MICHAEL A. DESIMONE, Purchasing Agent.

AUDITORIUM COMMISSION.

February 12, 1960.

Blueprint Service

DEAR MR. MAYOR:

The Auditorium Commission expects to advertise anew in the February 20, 1960, issue of the City Record for general bids for construction of the proposed Municipal Auditorium. In accordance with such advertisement, copies of the plans and specifications prepared by Hoyle, Doran & Berry, architects, must be available for distribution upon request at the offices of the Auditorium Commission commencing at 10 A.M. on Wednesday, February 24, 1960.

The plans consist of 142 drawings; and the specifications cover 520 pages. This commission is concerned with the awarding of a contract for the reproduction of these plans and specifications.

On February 10, 1960, written bids were invited by telephone from Charles Bruning Company, Inc., Hutcheson Company, Inc., B. L. Makepeace, Inc., and Spaulding Moss Company.

Spaulding Moss Company, with a place of business at 401 Summer street, Boston, submitted the following bid:

Drawings, 142 each, 10 square feet each; blueprints, 100 sets collated and bound, $4,260; for each additional 25 sets, add $1,065, specifications, 520 pages per set, on 8½ x 11, 20-pound bond; reproduction to be from Xerox plates; printed covers for binding to be provided by the architects; multirun process, 250 sets printed, collated, and bound by Perfect Binding method, $1,488; total, $5,748.

Charles Bruning Company, Inc., with a place of business at 965 Commonwealth avenue, Boston, submitted a bid in identical terms. Hutcheson Company submitted no bid. B. L. Makepeace, Inc., submitted a bid; but it was not for the complete work.

When the first invitation for general bids for this construction was advertised, Spaulding Moss Company did the work in a satisfactory manner and with the utmost cooperation. The Auditorium Commission has determined that the work should be awarded to that company at the present time.

Your authority is accordingly requested to dispense with advertising in awarding a contract to Spaulding Moss for 125 blueprint sets of plans at a cost of $5,748 and 250 sets of specifications at $1,488 with a provision for not exceeding 175 additional blueprint sets of the plan, in 25-set batches, at an additional cost of $1,065 for each batch of 25.

Respectfully,

AUDITORIUM COMMISSION,
By WILLIAM D. IRELAND,
Chairman.

LIBRARY DEPARTMENT.

Watchman, Guard Service

DEAR MR. MAYOR:

The Trustees of the Public Library respectfully request the approval of your Honor for the award of a contract, without public advertising, to A. F. Publicover & Co., Inc., 25 Pemberton square, Boston, for the provision of watchman and guard service at the Central Library building for an experimental period from January 25, 1960, through March 31, 1960.

This service will replace an operation which has been performed hitherto by watchmen employed by the library. If the results anticipated are confirmed from the experimental period, the present use of such watchman and guard service can result in substantial savings to the city. The cost of this service for the period of the experimental contract will be approximately $2,350.

It is the opinion of the trustees that the nature of this work is such as not to lend itself successfully to public bidding. After thorough examination of invited proposals submitted by five companies in the watchman and guard business, the trustees selected A. F. Publicover & Co., Inc., since it has had wide experience in providing security guard service to many institutions with needs for protection similar to those of the library. The trustees have therefore "Voted, That there be entered into without public advertising with A. F. Publicover & Co., Inc., 25 Pemberton square, Boston, Mass., a contract for watchman and guard service for the period January 25, 1960, through March 31, 1960, at the rate of one dollar and seventy-five cents ($1.75) per hour per man; and

"Voted, That the Director, and librarian be and hereby is authorized and directed in the name and behalf of the Trustees of the Public Library of the City of Boston to execute said contract."

Inasmuch as the total cost for this service will exceed two thousand dollars ($2,000), there is requested permission of your Honor to enter into this contract without publicly advertising for bids.

Respectfully,

THE TRUSTEES OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY OF THE CITY OF BOSTON,

By MILTON E. LORD,
Director.

BOSTON DIGS OUT OF RECORD SNOW STORM

Boston dug its way out of a record-breaking snowfall over the past week end at a cost which, Mayor Collins expects, will stay well within half a million dollars. A total snowfall of 19.7 inches exceeded the previous one-storm record of 19.4 inches on February 16 and 17, 1958.

The storm began, lightly, at 10.30 A.M. on Thursday, March 3, and ended, except for light flurries, at 10 P.M. the following day, leaving in its wake an almost prostrate city.

Plows were out in the early evening on Thursday and throughout the three-day period kept all the main traffic arteries and MTA surface lines open. Side streets, however, presented sometimes insurmountable problems as parked automobiles prevented the operation of plows and snow removal equipment.

Friday morning a special unit was established in the Mayor's office, on a 24-hour basis, to receive emergency calls from citizens in special need of immediate service for reasons of health and safety.

Meanwhile, during the week end, crews worked around the clock, clearing 740 miles of Boston streets. The Fire Department maintained double emergency shifts during the period. Fortunately only a few small fires occurred. The Police Department handled hundreds of special emergency calls necessitated by the storm. Full school sessions were not resumed until Wednesday.

WASHINGTON STREET in downtown Boston was virtually free of snow by noon on Sunday, March 6, less than 36 hours after the cessation of the record 19.7-inch snowfall which hit Boston this past week end. Speedy snow removal permitted the lifting of the parking ban in the downtown area by Monday noon.

SERIOUS IMPEDIMENT to firefighters were the snow-choked streets and parked automobiles. Firemen had to carry ladders 1,000 feet in answer to a fire alarm at Symphony road, Back Bay (pictured above), in order to rescue occupants of a building. The Fire Department remained on double shift during the emergency.

MAYOR REPORTS ON HIS FIRST SIXTY-FIVE DAYS

In a telecast over Station WNAC-TV, on March 9, Mayor Collins stated as follows:

Well, it snowed last Thursday night and Friday, and we had quite a workout. We had so much balmy weather during January and February that Mother Nature decided to remind us that spring does not actually arrive until the calendar says so, and sometimes not even then.

Now, whatever joy snow may bring to the youngsters anxious to try out their Christmas sleds and skis, whatever delight it may bring to the artist, or inspiration to the poet, I can assure you that to the mayor of a large city like ours, snow means trouble, expense, and the possibility of emergency affecting the health and safety of all its citizens.

As I watched the first flurries gradually grow into a record winter storm, my first feelings were of sadness—sadness that we could not retain in the city treasury, unexpended, the amounts appropriated for snow removal.

Snow Emergency Met

Indeed, this administration has been concentrating so hard on eliminating and reducing every possible expense that I must confess I almost took the snow as a personal affront.

As the storm developed, however, it became clear that your new administration was faced with its first emergency, and our efforts were immediately directed to the task at hand. I am satisfied that through the magnificent cooperation of thousands of city employees and citizen volunteers, for which we shall ever be grateful, a good job has been done.

To plow 740 miles of street, knowing that many of them will be made impassable by stranded automobiles, is not an easy or quick job, no matter how many men and pieces of equipment you use. Anticipating every kind of personal emergency that might occur throughout the city, whether to enable the sick to be transported to hospitals, or

Redevelopment Program Moves Ahead

Boston's urban redevelopment efforts moved ahead this week in three phases:

1. Ground was officially broken for construction of the $55 million West End redevelopment scheme.

2. The Federal Housing Administration earmarked $143,000 for advance planning of the 186-acre Washington Park renewal and rehabilitation project in Roxbury.

3. Edward J. Logue, New Haven urban renewal expert, took over part-time duties at City Hall for the next month, during which time he will draft a continued urban redevelopment plan for Boston for submission to the Mayor and the civic leaders of the community. If the plan meets with approval, Mr. Logue will be asked to stay with the city, on a full-time basis, to implement his plans. His salary would be $30,000 a year, this figure having been submitted to the City Council in the Mayor's 1960 budget.

fuel trucks to make deliveries, a state of emergency was declared early Friday morning, and for the first time in our history, a special emergency unit was established in the Mayor's office on a 24-hour basis, to receive emergency calls from citizens in special need of immediate service for reasons of health and safety.

Manned by 20 city employees, including department heads and four switchboard operators, this unit worked around the clock for more than two days, and handled more than 4,000 urgency calls.

At the same time, thousands of city fire workers and policemen and public works employees went on double duty until Monday morning, rendering great and arduous services above and beyond the ordinary call of duty, services for which you and I owe them our special thanks.

The manner in which our city employees responded to this emergency is typical of, and a tribute to, their quality and character.

More Reports to Come

Passing from our brief interlude of "Operation Snow-vival" to an initial report on "Operation Revival," this is the first in a series of monthly reports which I shall make to my fellow citizens. These reports are made possible through the cooperation of this and other Boston radio and television stations, on an unpaid basis, and as a contribution to the public service for which we are duly grateful.

The purpose of these reports is not merely to furnish full and timely public information, but also to stimulate public discussion of our city's problems, and to improve communication between you and your administration, communication, which I hope will be "two-way," and not merely "one-way," because I am certain that your mayor and his department heads will benefit greatly from your comments, your suggestions, and even from your complaints and criticisms.

Each of these programs will be as informal and informative as possible and will focus on one or two individual topics. I shall also have occasion from time to time to introduce some of my department heads, to report on their departmental functions and problems, and, I expect, to relate the progress they have made in their special fields.

We have now completed 65 days of "Operation Revival" for Boston. May I report on the high lights and events of this period, starting, if you will permit me, with my personal impressions and reactions:

First, I give thanks for the good will and cooperation of every class of citizen—the working people of Boston, the business community, the civic and professional organizations.

Second, may I express once more my thanks to our city employees for their tremendous cooperation, as a result of which city services

FIN. COM. REPORTS ON VARIOUS POLICE DEPT. WORK ORDERS

The Boston Finance Commission, on March 7, transmitted to the City Auditor a report pertaining to work orders issued by the Police Commissioner during the closing months of 1959 for electrical, carpentry, painting, and other projects in the Police Department issued to private contractors.

Following is the full text of the Finance Commission's report:

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

March 7, 1960.

MR. JOSEPH P. LALLY, City Auditor,
City Hall, Boston, Mass.

DEAR MR. LALLY:

On January 21, 1960, the Boston Finance Commission received the following communication:

LETTER OF CITY AUDITOR

January 20, 1960.

ANTHONY J. YOUNG, Chairman,
Finance Commission, 44 School Street, Boston, Mass.

DEAR SIR:

In accordance with the provisions of section 19 of chapter 486 of the Acts of 1909, I direct your attention to certain invoices of the Boston Police Department which concern electrical work done at the Headquarters Building at 154 Berkeley street, Boston, Mass. I am directing your attention to this matter because it is my opinion that this work was contracted for in a manner contrary to the City's best interest. I also direct your attention to painting and carpentry work which has been done at Headquarters and at various station houses throughout the city which also, in my opinion, were contracted for contrary to the City's best interest. Please be assured that the files of this department are available to you for whatever investigation you may undertake in regard to these matters.

Very truly yours,

JOSEPH P. LALLY,
City Auditor.

Although this letter refers specifically to "electrical work done at the Headquarters Building" and to "painting and carpentry work which has been done at Headquarters and at various station houses," the Finance Commission has also included in its examination allied flooring work done at Headquarters and various station houses (police division buildings), since the latter subject has come into view of the Commission during an examination of the subject of building maintenance and repair.

PART I.

Examination of Invoices and Work Performed

Complying with the above request of the City Auditor, the Finance Commission proceeded to make an examination of the invoices involved, the procedure followed by the Police Department and the work performed.

The funds for the multiplicity of work orders under which the program of police building repair work was to be done were provided in part through a transfer of appropriations within the Police Department's budget.

A request of the Police Department for Transfer of Appropriations dated December 11, 1959, and approved on December 30, 1959, provided for a transfer of $149,000 from the Personnel item of the Police budget: $90,000 from Permanent Employees and $59,000 from the Overtime item. Eighty-five thousand dollars of this was transferred to Item 26, Repairs and Maintenance of Buildings and Structures, and $17,390 to Item 70, Buildings and Improvements. The explanation for the transfer request reads: "to adjust deficits." (See Appendix.)

On January 15, 1960, the Police Commissioner sent to the City Auditor a "1959 Unliquidated Reserve" letter, to reserve funds to pay for obligations incurred but not paid during 1959 and substantially completed prior to December 31, 1959. The City Auditor in a letter to the Police Commissioner dated January 20, 1960, stated: "that the reserve will be established as requested" ($136,806.39) "without prejudice as to my right subsequently to refuse to approve for payment any or all invoices for which the reserve is being established." (See Appendix for copies of both letters.)

Invoices and Work Orders

Working from the Auditor's and Police Department's records, those orders and payments relating to the specific matter in hand were listed and analyzed.

Electrical Work

In January, 1957, the Edison Company prepared a lighting layout for Police Headquarters building, at no cost to the City.

On February 21, 1958, bids were opened for furnishing and installing one switchboard at Headquarters.

On October 28, 1959, a contract was made with J. J. Grace & Sons, Inc., in the amount of $17,382.68, to furnish and install one Westinghouse switchboard in the basement of Police Headquarters. This contract was awarded at the 1958 bid offered by that company, which was the lowest bidder. It was from this installation that the Police Headquarters electrical work performed by Dorgan Electrical Company, Inc., started. It is significant that no other single contract was drawn up for the electrical work. Instead a large volume of work orders all under $1,000 were issued to a single company.

Seventy-two orders were issued to the Dorgan Electrical Company totaling $68,610.57 for electrical work at Police Headquarters building and police division buildings during a two-month period, October and November, 1959. The bulk of this work was scheduled for a single building, viz., the Headquarters building on Berkeley street.

The following analysis groups these orders according to the related job or project.

Seven of the eight orders totaling $7,113.85 for repairing wiring and the furnishing and installation of fluorescent lighting fixtures in various police division buildings were written during October and November, 1959.

Six orders totaling $5,400 for furnishing and installing automatic emergency lights and batteries at various police division buildings and Headquarters building were all written on November 30, 1959. Each of the orders was written for $900.

For the single project of installation of new wiring and circuit breaker type panel boards to carry the new a.c. electric system from the new main switchboard to each of the seven floors and basement at Headquarters, nine orders were written, totaling $8,321.72. All of these were written during the last week of November, 1959. Eight, in fact, were written on November 30.

Forty-nine orders totaling an estimated $47,775 were written within the month of November, 1959, to cover one project. This project was the rewiring, furnishing, and installation of new fluorescent light fixtures, switches, and duplex outlets on each of the seven floors and basement of the Headquarters building. Each of these orders was written for $975. Six orders were written for work on each floor.

Mr. William H. Malone, Director of Signal Service for the Police Department, wrote the specifications and supervised the installation of the electrical work done thus far. A general inspection by Finance Commission investigators showed that the work was done as provided in the work orders.

On February 8, 1960, about three weeks after the City Auditor had requested the Finance Commission to investigate this matter of Police Department work orders, the Police Commissioner requested the City Auditor to cancel forty-three orders, representing $41,925, of the above-mentioned forty-nine orders, "due to the inability of contractors to complete the work within a reasonable time." (See Appendix for copy of letter.)

Painting

C. J. Meissner Company, doing interior and exterior painting work, was issued forty-five orders totaling $33,598.26 during 1959.

Of these forty-five orders, ten were issued prior to June 5, 1959, and totaled $5,772.32, of which eight orders involved redecorating in the Headquarters building. The balance of thirty-five orders, totaling $27,825.94, were issued in the six-week period between October 16 and November 30, 1959.

Of these thirty-five orders for painting work, sixteen orders totaling $12,857.74 authorized work at Headquarters building. Subsequently, six of these sixteen orders, estimated cost of $900 each, totaling $5,400 were canceled by the Police Commissioner in his February 8, 1960, letter to the City Auditor.

The balance of these thirty-five orders for painting were issued for work at various police division buildings; that is, nineteen orders totaling $14,968.20.

Plumbing, Heating, Roofing and Carpentry

During the year 1959 the department issued 127 orders totaling $12,621.64 to the Paul J. Rogan Company. For the most part, these orders were for minor heating, plumbing, or carpentry repairs at police division buildings and at Headquarters. However, there were issued several orders for repairs to roofs of police division buildings as follows:

Division 10

Order No. 4461 dated 9-15-59
in the amount of..... 983 00

Division 19 Total..... $2,495 50

Four orders, all under $1,000, but totaling $3,214.50, for roofing work on the same building (Division 18) were issued within four months. Separate orders were written for the left and right sides of the same building.

Three separate work orders, all under $1,000, but totaling $2,495.50, for roofing on the same building (Division 19) were issued within a two-month period.

On November 24 an order was issued in the estimated amount of $900 for the purchase of an oil burning hot water heating system and, on November 30, another order in the amount of $900 was issued for the installation of the said hot water heating system in the basement of the Headquarters building. Subsequently, in the Police Commissioner's letter of February 8, 1960, to the City Auditor these two orders were canceled.

Flooring

The same pattern of engaging a single contractor to perform a multiplicity of work orders for similar work within a short period of time is found also in the flooring program.

During a two-month period, October and November, 1959, forty-seven work orders totaling $28,292.32 were issued, authorizing John J. Curtin Flooring Company to lay tile flooring, etc., in various police division buildings and Headquarters building.

Fin. Com. . . .

Thirty-one of these forty-seven orders, totaling $19,406.61, were issued for work to be performed in a single building, viz., Headquarters building on Berkeley street. The work involved was similar in character, viz., laying rubber and asphalt tile flooring.

The remaining sixteen orders, representing $8,885.71, were issued for similar work at various police division buildings.

Correspondence Between Police Commissioner and City Auditor

The January 15, 1960, letter from the Police Commissioner to the City Auditor (See Appendix) requesting a special unliquidated reserve account of $136,806.39, concludes with the statement: "The above items represent obligations definitely incurred during 1959 which were substantially completed prior to December 31, 1959."

On February 8, 1960, the Police Commissioner sent a letter to the City Auditor which contains the following: "With reference to communication dated January 15, 1960, requesting that a special unliquidated reserve account be provided for bill commitments of 1959, you are requested to cancel the following items due to the inability of contractors to complete the work within a reasonable time." There then follows a list of fifty-three order numbers representing an estimated amount of $50,575 which the commissioner wished to cancel.

In other words, the letter which stated that the work was substantially completed was followed by a letter requesting cancellation of orders representing a substantial part of that work.

PART II

Legal Aspects

The foregoing sections of this report make it clear that a great multiplicity of work orders, all under $1,000 in value, were prepared for similar work in the Police Department within a short period of time. The greater part of the work represented by this volume of relatively small work orders could have been tied together into sizable amounts that would have called for competitive and advertised bidding, with any and all benefits that derive from competitive bidding.

The best interests of the City would thereby have been served.

Whether any law was violated in failing to assemble segments of a project into a sizable project requiring competitive bidding is another question.

The Finance Commission has explored the legal aspects of this matter to determine what illegality, if any, attended this apparent failure to strive for competitive bidding. The following paragraphs present the results of this exploration.

Under the provisions of section 30 of the City Charter, Acts of 1909, chapter 486, "Every officer or board in charge of a department in said city . . . ; and when about to do any work or to make any purchase, the estimated cost of which alone, or in conjunction with other similar work or purchase which might properly be included in the same contract, amounts to or exceeds two thousand dollars shall, unless the Mayor gives written authority to do otherwise, invite proposals therefor by advertisements in the City Record."

If the provisions of section 30 of chapter 486 of the Acts of 1909, as amended, apply to the Police Commissioner as an "officer or board in charge of a department in said city", then orders, "for similar work which might properly be included in the same contract," would require the Police Commissioner to group such orders and invite proposals by advertisement in the City Record.

It is the contention of the Police Commissioner that the provisions of the City Charter, inconsistent with the powers granted to him by Acts of 1906, chapter 291, sections 7 to 21, inclusive, as amended, are inapplicable to him.

A judicial determination of this disputed point should be made.

The Acts of 1906, chapter 291, sections 7 to 21, inclusive, as amended, which sets out the powers of the Police Commissioner of the City of Boston, contain no provision, similar to the provision in section 30 of the City Charter, requiring similar work to be included in the same contract.

Another pertinent statute relating to the alteration or repair of public buildings is chapter 149, General Laws, section 44-A. This provides:

"Every contract for the construction, reconstruction, alteration, remodeling, repair or demolition of any public building by the Commonwealth or by any governmental unit thereof, estimated to cost more than $5,000 in the case of the Commonwealth, and more than $2,000 in the case of any governmental unit thereof, shall be awarded to the lowest responsible and eligible general bidder on the basis of competitive bids in accordance with the procedure set forth in the provisions of Sec. 44-B to 44-L, inclusive."

There is no provision, however, in this law, requiring that similar work be included in the same contract. In other words, this statute does not require that multiple segments of a project be integrated to form the basis of a contract which will exceed $2,000 in amount.

It is further noted that the powers granted to the City Council by section 5 of the City Charter (Acts of 1909, chapter 486, section 5) to create, change, limit or abolish any department specifically excludes certain departments or any board or officer appointed by the Governor. This section may well imply that the Police Commissioner, being an officer appointed by the Governor, may not be subject to the controls provided by the City Charter.

We therefore do not pass upon the question as to whether or not the Police Commissioner for the City of Boston is subject to the provisions of section 30 of the City Charter since it involves a purely legal question and requires judicial interpretation.

We also do not pass upon the question whether or not the Police Commissioner for the City of Boston has the power under the Acts of 1906, chapter 291, section 8, to incur expenses for the proper function of his department and to make requisition upon the City of Boston for payment therefor, notwithstanding any specific appropriation existing for its payment.

The Finance Commission feels that the position taken by you, under the circumstances, is warranted.

Mayor Reports . . .

are being improved, while city expenses are being reduced. My fellow city workers know by now that this is "Operation Revival" and not "Operation Reprisal."

This is a nonpartisan administration and will remain so.

This is an impartial administration and will remain so.

Thanks to Legislators

Third, I wish to give thanks to the many state legislators who have paid Boston the courtesy of lunching with me at City Hall (standard menu: corned beef sandwiches and coffee) to discuss matters of mutual importance to state and city. I feel certain that we have all benefited by this interchange of ideas, and I have every confidence that these meetings, which have only just begun, will result in future benefit and progress.

Heartening Developments

Turning to events and milestones symbolic of Boston's future, we can point to some heartening developments.

For years, we, in Boston, have watched with envious eyes the movement of industries and families to the fringe areas. Now in the first 65 days of operation revival, three electronic firms are completing expansion plans within our city limits. The biggest of these is in East Boston, where Transitron is readying the former Maverick Mills.

Yesterday, ground was broken at the West End apartment project, first of the final steps in remaking a portion of our city, and harbinger, I am sure, of the return of the native from the suburb to the city. When the work is finished the project should look something like this.

Meanwhile, work continues apace on the breath-taking Prudential Center, which will mean so much to our city, and which will include a 12 million-dollar municipal auditorium, contracts for which will soon be let.

As you read in the papers, financing has been completed and ground has been broken for the underground Common Garage, which will not only help revive Tremont Street and the Park Square area as shopping centers, but will go far to solve nighttime parking problems for residents of the Back Bay and Beacon Hill.

In addition, the log jam of the Government Center is just about broken, and the day when Scollay square gets a new and beautiful lease on life is closer to realization.

Finally, figures just compiled show that the total amount of new construction in Boston in the first two months of 1960 is double the amount during the same period a year ago.

Confiscatory Tax Rate

As encouraging as these matters are, realism compels us to remind ourselves, at all times, that we cannot attain a new city, strong in civic spirit and beautiful in physical appearance, unless we also keep Boston financially safe and strong, not only for the benefit of her citizens, but in order to stimulate new investment and construction.

Which brings us right back to our single outstanding problem and burden, our confiscatory real estate tax rate.

Inevitably, the Legislature must, and, therefore, will provide a new and alternate source of revenue so that real estate will not bear the cost of city government so exclusively.

But until, and even after that time, we must bend every effort to the reduction of expenses, and the elimination of municipal frills, without curtailing essential city services.

In its first 65 days, indeed, even before it took office, your administration has concentrated its attentions and directed its energies to "Operation Belt-Tightening," that is, the reduction of the city budget for 1960, in an effort to prevent an increase, and, if possible, to effect a decrease, in our tax rate.

Pared Down Budget

Last year, our budget for city, county, and school purposes, but excluding MTA and MDC assessments, and also excluding payments on our city debt, came to well over 160 million dollars.

As I explained in my inaugural message, we were faced this year with a built-in increase of more than 9 million dollars which by itself would have accounted for a 6-dollar increase in the tax rate.

On top of that, requests for increases made by previous department heads, plus those of the School Department, called for additional net increases of nearly 11 million dollars which, if granted, would have resulted in another 7-dollar increase in the tax rate.

Adding together the 1959 actual expenses, the built-in increases for 1960, and increases in departmental requests, we would have had a total basic budget in excess of at least 180 million dollars and a tax rate of at least 114 dollars.

Faced with these problems, we had to go to work immediately, to find ways of cutting, and cutting heavily, not only to hold the line, but to push the line back, and all of this in time for the statutory deadline for submission of the 1960 budget to the City Council.

Mr. McMorrow, Director of Administrative Services, eight assistants, and your mayor rolled up our sleeves and went to work, night and day, week in and week out. We called in all department heads and consulted outside experts. We went over each item right down to office supplies and telephone calls.

Starting with the stack of departmental requests that you see before you, we worked our way down to this printed volume of budget recommendations, with the following results:

Subject to any further reductions the City Council may find possible to make, the 1960 budget, as submitted, comes to less than 158 million dollars, resulting in the following savings:

A reduction of almost 23 million dollars as compared with the total of the 1959 budget, the 1960 built-in increases, and the increases in departmental requests.

A reduction of almost 12 million dollars, if we wholly disregard the departmental requests.

And, actually, a net reduction of almost 3 million dollars from the 1959 budget, even without the built-in increases of at least 19 million dollars for 1960.

We are happy to report these savings to you. With good fortune, and barring unforeseen adversities, and, I hope, no more snow storms, this is our financial picture, as of this time.

Essential Services Maintained

Essential city services will not suffer. A few little-used bathhouses are being closed; chauffeur-driven cars have become a rarity; sumptuous meals to visiting dignitaries have been replaced by coffee and doughnuts; bean pots have taken the place of Paul Revere bowls.

BUT, the sick will be tended, the poor will be helped, our children will get an excellent education, our streets will be clean, and our people and their property will be well protected.

This, then, is my first report to the people of Boston.

I hope you have found it as interesting and encouraging as I have found it a pleasure and satisfaction to meet with you tonight in this manner.

Thank you very much, and, good evening.

BUILDING IN CITY UP 100% THUS FAR IN 1960

Total value of new building construction and large-scale alterations during the first two months of 1960 was up 99.8 per cent over the same period last year, latest Building Department statistics show.

This year's first two months total is $13,823,300 as compared with the January-February total of $6,935,300 last year.

Chiefly responsible for the sharp increase were two permits applied for last month in connection with the huge West End Development, which totaled $6,311,000 in represented value.

Last year was the all-time high year for value of new construction in Boston, the total being $92 million. Of that amount $69 million was represented in the value of building permits issued to the Prudential Center.

The previous high year to 1959 was the year 1925 when a total of $71 million in new construction was authorized.

FIRE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

March 8.

General Order No. 10.

I. LETTER OF APPRECIATION.

The following letter which was received from his Honor, Mayor John F. Collins, is hereby published for the information of the members of this department:

"CITY OF BOSTON,
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR,
CITY HALL, BOSTON,

March 8, 1960.

FIRE COMMISSIONER HENRY A. SCAGNOLI, Fire Headquarters, 115 Southampton Street, Boston, Mass.

MY DEAR COMMISSIONER:

"I know every citizen of Boston joins me in extending congratulations and gratitude to every member of the Boston Fire Department for a job well done during the recent snow crisis.

"The storm, as you know, was the biggest in Boston's history, and I am convinced that our fire fighters proved once again that they are among the finest in the world.

"I am aware that the men worked double duty and that, through such sacrifice, the people of Boston were well protected.

Sincerely yours,
JOHN F. COLLINS, Mayor."

Commissioner Scagnoli wishes to add the following:

"I wish to add my personal congratulations to those of the Mayor's in thanking all members of the department for a job well done. I would be remiss in my duties, however, if I did not single out Ladder Companies 15 and 26 for their extrameritorious work on the Sunday morning fire at Symphony road. These two companies combined in hand-carrying ladders down the street approximately 1,000 feet and saving the lives of eight people.

"To them the citizens of Boston owe a personal debt of gratitude."

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

March 8.

*General Order No. 617.SPECIAL STATE ELECTIONS IN WARD 20

The Acting Superintendent of Police is hereby directed to make the following details for duty at the Special State Primary on Tuesday, March 15, 1960, and again at the Special State Election on Tuesday, April 5, 1960, to be held in Ward 20.

1. The necessary number of Patrolmen from Police Division 17 to attend the twenty-one polling places in this division, to preserve order and protect voters in the full exercise of their rights.

2. Two sergeants to report at the office of the Board of Election Commissioners, City Hall Annex, Court square, prepared to proceed from that place at 6.15 o'clock A.M., Tuesday, March 15, 1960, and again on Tuesday, April 5, 1960, in motor vehicles to be provided for the purpose, with ballot boxes, etc., to the twenty-one precincts in Ward 20, and deliver same to the police officer detailed in each precinct.

3. One patrolman to each of the twenty-one precincts in Ward 20 at 6.30 o'clock A.M., Tuesday, March 15, 1960, and again on Tuesday, April 5, 1960, to receive ballot boxes, etc., from sergeant detailed on truck; such detail to continue until the ballots are counted and the result declared.

4. At 8 P.M., Tuesday, March 15, 1960, and again on Tuesday, April 5, 1960, when the polls are closed, two sergeants will report in Ward 20 to meet motor vehicles at last point of morning distribution; and to proceed then to each of the twenty-one precincts of the ward to return ballot boxes, etc., to Board of Election Commissioners.

5. While the polls remain open an officer of rank, to be designated by the commanding officer of Division 17, will visit the polling-place in each precinct of Ward 20, at stated intervals, and in case of any disturbance will report the fact to his commanding officer without delay. If additional men are needed beyond the number available, the officer in charge will communicate immediately with Headquarters.

6. Cards with ward and precinct number and location of voting booth printed thereon will be forwarded to Division 17, on which division commander will write the name, division number, and the number of the patrolman detailed at the polling place of each precinct. This card will be delivered by the patrolman detailed at polling place to employee of Board of Election Commissioners on receipt of ballot box and other material. The patrolman so detailed will deliver these articles to the warden or the clerk of the precinct and will allow no person to take or examine them before such delivery. The warden will sign and deliver to the officer a receipt for the ballots.

7. The patrolman will obtain from the warden copies of poster relative to smoking and the use of liquor in polling places, and post same in conspicuous places where they may be easily read.

8. The warden will deliver to the patrolman detailed at the polling place for his use a copy of the descriptive voting list, which must be returned to the warden at the close of the polls.

9. Voting machines will be used at these two functions in all of the precincts, except Precincts 1 and 4, where paper ballots will be used. When the warden has set up the machines for voting, and the polls are declared open, he will give keys of each machine in the precinct to the police officer. The police officer will have custody of keys until the close of the polls at which time he will return keys to the warden.

Keys No. 2 and No. 3 will be given to the police officer to return to City Hall. These keys are to be enclosed in a sealed envelope and signed by all election officers. Since the procedure is most important, patrolmen shall check the envelope, one for each machine, to be certain that they are in proper order and that they are delivered in hand to the clerk at the check-in desk at the Election Department.

10. Since the law requires a ballot box to be furnished for challenged ballots, the patrolman will have custody of the ballot box key during the polling hours. When the polls are opened the patrolman will mark in the place indicated on the tags attached to the key the figures which the register shows before any ballots are cast. When the polls are closed, the patrolman will mark on the same tag the figures which the register shows after all ballots have been cast. He will then hand the key to the warden, who will open the box and have these challenged ballots sorted and counted. After the ballots have been counted, the ballots cast, the block tally sheets, the voting machine authority slips (and nothing else) shall be placed by the warden in the leatheroid box provided for the purpose which must then be sealed and signed by all the election officers. At primaries all ballots cast must first be placed in separate party boxes. At elections Absentee Ballots must be counted and placed in box with other ballots cast. The warden will then cause the voting lists, including the list used by the police officer, to be sealed in an envelope, the envelope to be certified by the signatures of himself and the other election officers. The unused and spoiled ballots are to be put into the cardboard box provided for the purpose and sealed and certified in the same manner.

The patrolman on duty at the polling place will then deliver personally to the Election Commissioner's Office, Room 111, City Hall Annex, the following five articles:

1. The leatheroid box properly sealed and certified (and the following items in their separate sealed envelopes).

2. The official return.

3. The total tally sheets.

4. The press return.

5. The voting machine keys.

11. After the closing of the polls on both of these days an employee of the Board of Election Commissioners, accompanied by a sergeant, will call at each polling place to pick up ballot boxes and other material and return the same to City Hall.

12. Commanding officer of Division 17 will see that the officers detailed for duty at the polls are furnished with a copy of the circular issued by the Board of Election Commissioners entitled: "Instructions to Police Officers on Primary and Election Days."

IMPORTANT NOTE.

A. Officers shall strictly enforce the law pertaining to smoking. Smoking is prohibited within the confines of the polling places, during the entire day, while the polls are open, as well as after they are closed.

B. Officers are reminded that it is the privilege of the voters to watch the count of the votes cast. It is understood that no disturbance or crowding is to be permitted and that the voters are to remain outside the rails.

C. Officers shall handle ballot boxes with great care.

D. On both of these days the polls will open at 8 o'clock A.M. and close at 8 o'clock P.M. At the close of the polls all persons waiting to vote, including any who might be in line at the entrance to the polling place, are to be placed in line by the warden, and given cards bearing their names. The police officer is to stand at the end of this line to be certain that no additional persons are permitted to join it. All voters in the line are to be permitted to cast their ballots.

E. In accordance with the provisions of chapter 231, Acts of 1958, a candidate for office, or his representative duly authorized in writing, shall, within one hour after the official vote for said office has been announced by the warden, be permitted to examine and check the vote recorded on voting machines in any precinct in the City of Boston in which the name of said candidate has appeared on the ballot. Election officers have been instructed in the procedure to follow and it is important that the police officer in each precinct remain on duty during this hour of examination.

FREE PARKING AT METERS

A group of Milwaukee merchants will offer free parking in four city-owned lots for a two-month experimental period. The city will be paid $1,076 for the loss in meter revenue and the cost of lot maintenance will be sustained by the group.

The program is designed to help older business areas compete with the free parking offered by shopping centers.

DEAR SIR:

Your Honor's permission is hereby requested to have Assistant Fire Chief John F. Howard sign the payrolls of the Fire Department sign the payrolls of the Fire Department for the four-week period beginning March 2, 1960.

The reason for this request is that many times it is necessary for the Fire Commissioner and Chief of Department to be absent from the Headquarters office on department business; and, as the payrolls should be signed immediately upon completion in order to prevent a delay in paying the employees, the foregoing procedure is necessary.

Respectfully yours,

H. A. SCAGNOLI,
Fire Commissioner.

EXTENSION OF CONTRACTS

DEPARTMENT OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

The Mayor has approved extension of the time limit on completion of the following contracts:

Contract with A. Atlas Electric Company for electrical work at East Boston High School, extended from March 1, 1960, to April 1, 1960, because of additional work.

Contract with Bradbury Electric Company for electric work at Girls' Latin School, extended from March 1, 1960, to April 1, 1960, because the contractor was delayed on account of late delivery of telephone materials.

Contract with Bradbury Electric Company for electric work at South Boston High School, extended from March 1, 1960, to April 1, 1960, because of delay in getting fixtures and additional work.

JOINT PURCHASING BY 12 CITIES

Cooperative purchasing by government units has resulted in substantial savings in many instances, according to the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing. Twelve cities in Florida have won lower bids on such items as cars, trucks, gasoline, oil and grease, by buying together.

In the first two and one-half years of joint purchasing, the three original cities in the agreement saved nearly $35,000.

ADDITIONS TO CONTRACTS

DEPARTMENT OF SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

Bradbury Electric Company, in connection with work at South Boston High School, has been ordered to make the following additions to its contract:

Replace the four defective lugs located on the outside wires. Use four solderless lugs large enough for 900 M.C.M. cables. Balance circuits as directed at submain switches located in electric room. Total addition to the cost is $165.

MEMPHIS IMPROVEMENTS

Included in the Memphis, Tenn., long-range public improvements program, slated to cost $108 million, are plans for a new $5 million city hall, with allocations of $18 million for schools, $10.7 for the airport, and $22 million for streets, drainage, and sewers.

TRAINING INSTITUTE

Philadelphia's Personnel Department plans establishment of city training institute under jurisdiction of a board, including representatives of the city, the University of Pennsylvania, and other educational institutions. Personnel News points out. Training will relate specifically to Philadelphia's municipal staffing needs.

TREES EAT FUMES

Air pollution, particularly the kind that is emitted by automotive vehicles, can be lessened by planting trees. Trees take in carbon dioxide the way humans take in oxygen. Trees discharge oxygen. About a dozen trees are needed to offset one automobile, according to the magazine, The American City.

BLIGHT WINS ASSESSMENT CUT

A Baltimore department store won a $125,000 reduction in its tax assessment. The request was made, officials were quoted in the American Municipal News, because of deterioration of the city's downtown retail area, due to traffic congestion, removals to the suburbs, and cuts in transit service.

CHICAGO CIVIL DEFENSE

Chicago's old freight tunnel system, now owned by the city and no longer in use, is being considered along with other facilities for possible adaptation for defense purposes.

CANDIDATES APLENTY

In Japan, politicians must know how to make the job of mayor look easy. In a recent election there were 938 candidates for the job in a city of 7,034 voters.

DAY ORATION OF MAYOR JOHN F. COLLINS designated by the Legislature to commemorate the evacuation from Boston, during the Revolutionary War, of the British troops and Hessian mercenaries of King George the Third.

A Saint For A National Hero

To most, however, it is a holiday dedicated to the honor of St. Patrick, patron saint of Ireland and of the Archdiocese of Boston. And thus, on Thursday while we honor the gallant colonial troops to whom the imperial forces of the greatest empire of that time were forced to yield, we also honor the patron saint of Ireland.

As we pay tribute to St. Patrick it is an interesting thought to look at the nations of the earth and the men they have chosen as their national heroes. France has its Napoleon, Russia its Lenin and its Stalin, and the United States named Washington as the Father of his Country.

The Achievement of Patrick

While other countries almost invariably name a soldier or a statesman, Ireland, among the few nations of the world, chooses as its national hero a saint of God. And the choice of a national hero often reflects the character of a people. For the outstanding characteristic of a saint is love of God and, necessarily flowing therefrom, a love of country. And these two attributes, love of God and love of country, the Irish people have carried to every corner of the globe, enriching the life blood of every country to which they have immigrated.

As children, we were taught the story of St. Patrick; how he served as a shepherd in Ireland; how he were, due to their national culture, singularly ready to embrace the Christian faith. They were among the handful of nations at that time which could claim a national culture.

Roman Generals Thwarted

For hundreds of years before the coming of Patrick, Roman generals had exhorted the legions of Rome to "war down and take possession of Ireland, so that freedom might be put out of sight."

And in this early Roman reference to Ireland is the keynote of all later Irish history, a warring down on the one hand, so that freedom might be put out of sight, and eternal resistance on the other, so that it might be upheld. And all Irish valor and chivalry, whether of soul or of body, has been directed for 2,000 years to this same end.

While they could conquer France, Scotland, and Britain, the legions of Rome could not conquer Ireland. And so, unlike the natives of Britain and Scotland, the Irish in pre-Christian times and in the first Christian centuries were not brought into contact with Roman institutions or Roman culture. Despite this, they created and developed a civilization of their own that was in some respects without equal. They were far advanced in the knowledge of metal work and shipbuilding, they engaged in commerce, they loved music, and had a great familiarity with letters.

Pagan But Civilized

When disputes arose among them, these were settled in duly constituted courts of justice, presided over by a trained lawyer instead of being settled by the stern arbitrament of force. Druidism was their pagan creed. They believed in the

Throughout the land he went, establishing churches, founding monasteries, and establishing schools. Some 1,200 years before that illustrious institution, Harvard, the college founded by Patrick in Armagh was attracting scholars from Britain and the nations of the continent. And these spiritual children of Patrick carried on in traditions he had established.

Each generation saw its holy men and its holy women; each generation saw its missionaries, fired with zeal, leaving Ireland to plant the faith in distant lands.

Flowering of the Faith

The seeds planted by Patrick flourished and once-pagan Ireland became a citadel of Christianity and was rightfully called the School of the West, the Island of Saints and Scholars.

And throughout every form of attack, down through the Danish, Norman, Tudor, and Stuart assaults, throughout the invasion of Cromwell, and the British imperialism of the nineteenth century, this love of learning and zeal for religion lived on.

The attempted reformation by Henry the Eighth and his daughter Elizabeth served only to produce martyrs as did the brief but bloody rule of Cromwell.

These were the days of penal laws, when they who clung to the old religion suffered much. But nothing could shake their faith; neither the proclamations of Elizabeth and James, the massacres of Cromwell, nor the ferocious conscription of the eighteenth century.

The priest said Mass, though his crime was punishable by death, and the people heard Mass, though theirs was a criminal offense. The clerical student, denied education at home, crossed the sea, to be educated at Louvaine or Seville and then returned home to face poverty, persecution, and even death, but still determined even at such risk to fulfill his duty.

Ireland's Heavy Cross

The Catholic masses of people, socially ostracized, degraded, and impoverished, shut out from every avenue to ambition and enterprise, deprived of every civil right, knowing little of law, except when it oppressed them, and nothing of government when it struck them down, still clung to the religion in which they were born.

On a soil so constantly wet with the blood and tears of its children, it would seem vain to expect that scholarship could flourish. Nonetheless, the schoolmaster, driven from school, taught under a sheltering hedge. This phenomenon of the hedge school and barefoot master is almost unique in history.

Visitors riding through Roscommon in 1812 reported contemptuously that they saw a ditchful of scholars. If they had asked the old-time master whether he had got eight or nine hundred pounds a year from the government, he'd have laughed at them.

"From the government? Faith, I'd have a halter from them if they found me. It is the people who pay me, a few potatoes now and then and a shilling when they have it."

If they had asked him where he had been trained, at some well-known normal school or teachers' college, he'd have answered "no," he had come back in his rags to Ireland from the University of Paris or the University of Salamanca, had come back at the risk of deportation to keep the fire of culture alive in those poor little huts, had come back to find himself the object of hate and contempt of the ruling classes who gave him his name.

Scholastic Heroism

For just as the pagans coined the name Christian and John Calvin first used the name Jesuit, so the landlords invented with a sneer the term hedgemaster. With the passage of time, however, all these epithets have taken on a spiritual dignity, like the Roman crucifix that has become the Cross on our churches, and now hedgemaster suggests to us only a lovely picture of his school.

For it was by the flowering thorn-bush on the hillside that the master would wait for his boys. Preferably he would pick the corner of a field where two hedges met and the ground gave a far view of government spies. There, with stones for disks and shamrocks for carpets, he would teach them from his own prodigious memory and maybe a tattered book or two. A few little sticks and a piece of turf were kept burning close by, so that given a signal of danger they could destroy their poor scraps of paper and take to their heels.

And what was the result? When they got through they could read, write, and figure, and many, in addition to Gaelic, were fluent in English, French, and Spanish. More than that, travelers in the eighteenth century were constantly amazed that stable boys knew Cicero and that Greek students wandered all over the wild mountains of Kerry.

Escape from Degradation

This was the popular source of education in such days. It rested upon three foundation stones which I wish we could reproduce today. First, students made to learn; second, parents who would go hungry to bed to scrape together three shillings (a quarter) that their children might enter the beautiful world of the mind and thus escape the degradation that had been forged upon them; and, thirdly, hedgemasters who lived for their boys, were ready to die for them, and sometimes did.

Was there ever such pure love of learning? Was it any wonder that when 70 per cent of the English people were illiterate, could not that is, read their own language, Ireland was almost universally educated?

The Stamp of Royalty

Historians speak with admiration about the French aristocracy who never lost their politeness in the filth and squalor of the dark dungeons. Yet, here was a whole people, ground down and destitute for centuries, who never lost their native urbanity, the spirit of gaiety, their consciousness of obvious superiority to their invaders; who were able in the darkest days of penury to sing and dance and dream and pray and live their own interior life in perfect independence. Besides, what can great souls do when they are crushed to earth by force, what can they do but sing and pray?

RETINA FOUNDATION BUYS SITE IN WEST END AREA

The Boston Redevelopment Authority announced, on March 14, that it had sold a three-quarter acre tract of land in the West End development area to the Retina Foundation for use as the site for a new $1,500,000 Medical Research Institute.

Ground will be broken for the construction of the new building in early May, Dr. Charles L. Schepens, director of the Retina Foundation, has informed the Redevelopment Authority.

The land purchased by the Retina Foundation from the Redevelopment Authority fronts on Staniford street and is located immediately adjacent to the Cambridge Street properties of the West End Branch Public Library and the Harrison Gray Otis House. The parcel sold to the Retina Foundation contains 35,714 square feet of land.

On Monday of last week the Redevelopment Authority conveyed the first complex in the $55 million West End development area to Charles River Park, Inc., and on Tuesday, ground-breaking ceremonies marked the start of work on a project which will play an important part in the revitalization of inner Boston.

Construction of the $1.5 million Medical Research Institute will be another major step in the redevelopment of the West End.

The initial unit of the new Research Institute will consist of a three-floor laboratory wing of 36,000 square feet and a connecting two-floor wing of approximately 7,000 square feet, in which will be housed the Retina Foundation administration offices, library, and conference facilities.

The Retina Foundation, internationally famous for its work in the field of eye research and academically affiliated with the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, presently maintains the major portion of its facilities on Chambers street in a building scheduled to be razed to make way for the new $55 million development.

Papers for the sale of the property on which the new Medical Institute will be erected were passed by John C. Conley, general counsel for the Boston Redevelopment Authority, and Attorney Monte J. Wallace, counsel for the Retina Foundation.

Members of the Boston Redevelopment Authority, who authorized the sale of the land, are Joseph W. Lund, chairman; the Rt. Rev. Francis J. Lally, vice-chairman; James G. Colbert, treasurer; Melvin J. Massucco, and Stephen E. McCloskey.

RENEWED INTEREST IN DEVELOPMENT OF WATER FRONT

Mayor Collins is anxious to take another look at Boston's downtown water front plans with a view toward restoration of the area as a historic shrine, as a center for recreation, and as a site for high-rise apartment houses.

Possibilities along the water front was the first aspect of the city's development possibilities to attract the attention of Edward J. Logue, a nationally-known expert who is credited with changing the face of the city of New Haven. Mr. Logue is currently studying Boston's urban development prospects. He will report on his study in a few weeks to Mayor Collins.

"I think if Boston looks again to its harbor it will again be a leading city," Mr. Logue stated this week in a television appearance.

MAYOR COLLINS HONORARY BOSTON CHAIRMAN OF ALL-AMERICAN FAMILY SEARCH

Mayor John F. Collins, on March 11, accepted an invitation to serve as Boston's honorary chairman for the 1960 All-American Family Search.

The second nationwide search for the country's most representative family is being conducted by the Grolier Society. It is open to all American families with children, their own or adopted. They must be residents of the state from which they are nominated at least one year.

Families which best exemplify the principles of the American home are being nominated. The Search emphasizes the theme: "Family Unity for a Better Community."

After carefully screening nominations, committees will select the most representative family from each of the fifty states and the District of Columbia.

On May 24, these fifty-one families will gather at Lehigh Acres, Florida, for the All-American Family Conference. They will meet with a board of distinguished judges to discuss topics of paramount importance to families everywhere.

Based on criteria designed by the board chairman, Dr. Emily H. Mudd of the University of Pennsylvania's Division of Family Study, the judges will choose the 1960 All-American Family. Among the awards it will receive are a Westinghouse Total Electric Gold Medalion Home at Lehigh Acres, a Four-Door Studebaker Lark Station Wagon, and a complete 102-Volume Grolier Library. The fifty-one families will attend the conference with all expenses paid by national sponsors.

Among the organizations cooperating in the Search are the General Federation of Women's Clubs, United States Department of Defense, Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, Girls' Clubs of America, Kiwanis International, National Conference of Christians and Jews, and the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association.

Nomination forms may be obtained through Westinghouse, Owens-Corning Fiberglas and Studebaker Lark dealers, or by writing to All-American Family Search Committee, 575 Lexington avenue, New York 22, New York.

GERARD E. HAYES TO HEAD MAYOR'S FIELD DAY

Mayor John F. Collins, on March 12, announced the appointment of Gerard E. Hayes, Boston banking executive, as chairman of the Mayor's Annual Charity Field Day.

The event will be held at Fenway Park on Tuesday, June 14, at 8 P.M. In the event of inclemen

And so our forefathers were royal in their suffering, greater than we are in our prosperity, and because they were noble they clung to two things, they clung to the Mass, which gave meaning to their lives, and with hardly less determination they clung to the culture of the ages, humane and liberal studies. If it was the martyred and fugitive priest who kept the soul of Ireland alive, it was the hedgemaster who kept its eyes open.

Irish Influence Abroad

And when in the latter half of the eighteenth century, the tide turned and the first dawn of toleration appeared on the horizon, it was found that the vast majority of the people were unchanged and that after two centuries of the most relentless persecution since the days of the Roman emperors Ireland was still Catholic and still cultured.

It was this passion for learning, this love of their religion, this spirit of patriotism that they carried with them when they emigrated and enriched the lifeblood of every country they adopted.

In military deeds and statesman-like conduct they stand forth. Marshals of France like Lord Clare; prime ministers of Spain like Don Ricardo Wall; creators of victorious armies like Count Peter Lacy in Russia; mighty war lords like Field Marshal Brown in Austria; founders of empires like Count Lally, India.

And equally pre-eminent are her sons in the church, our own country's typical, we have but to recite the names and their ancestry is obvious: Cardinals such as O'Connell, Farley, Gibbons, Mooney, Spellman, and McIntyre, and our beloved Cardinal Richard J. Cushing.

The history of Ireland remains to be written, for the purpose of Irishness remains to be achieved. The struggle for national realization begun so many centuries ago is not ended.

That struggle, God willing, shall end in the ultimate independence of all Ireland.

POLICE DEPARTMENT ORDERS

March 10.

General Order No. 672.

Patrolman James R. Bickerton, Identification Section of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, is hereby commended for meritorious police duty and is granted three days' additional vacation.

About 11:44 p.m., April 17, 1959, a widow, 65 years of age, of 439 Shawmut avenue, Boston, when walking toward her home and upon reaching Rutland and Haven streets, was approached from the rear by a man described as 20 to 22 years, 5 feet 8 inches, wearing the uniform of the U. S. Navy. This man placed his hand over her mouth and dragged her into an alley off Haven street where he attempted to commit a felonious assault upon her. At the time of this assault, this woman had her right arm in a cast from the wrist to the elbow with her left shoulder in a sling. Her injuries having been received in a fall on a previous date.

"IRISHMAN OF THE YEAR" TITLE TO BE GIVEN TO HUB MAYOR IN HOLYOKE

The city of Holyoke, on Sunday, March 20, will honor Mayor John F. Collins as the "Outstanding Irishman of the Year."

Samuel Resnic, Jewish mayor of that city, will be sporting an emerald green tie and lapel shamrock, as he presents the award to Mayor Collins.

The city itself will be appropriately dressed for the occasion and will top off the celebration with a big St. Patrick's Day parade.

The award, which is issued annually, last year was given to Senator John F. Kennedy.

The woman resisted this man while in the alley telling him that she lived close by and asked him to walk her home, she believing there would be people awake in the house. He agreed, took her by the arm and told her he would kill her if she made an outcry. No person was available at the house and the man forced her to take him to her apartment on the first floor. Upon entering, the sailor pushed her on the bed and committed a vicious assault. She then asked his permission to get a drink from the refrigerator, to which he agreed, and she ran out of the apartment to the second floor calling for help. In the meantime, the sailor fled from the scene.

The police of Division 4 removed this woman to the Boston City Hospital where upon arrival and examination by Dr. Andrew Bull, she was found to be suffering from a myocardial infarction and was hospitalized pending smear and culture tests.

Sergeant Detective William A. Bradley of Division 4 was assigned to the case, but he was unable to secure any information that would assist in identifying the person responsible for this crime. He requested that a fingerprint officer be dispatched for a thorough search of the premises.

At 1:15 a.m., Saturday, April 18, 1959, Patrolman James R. Bickerton responded and after a lengthy and diligent search discovered four fresh prints on the headboard of the bed. On April 20, 1959, the four latent prints were forwarded to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Washington, D. C., for comparison search with prints on file in that Bureau.

On November 27, 1959, information was received from J. Edgar Hoover, Director of Federal Bureau of Investigation, that Philip W. Conover, Fingerprint Examiner of that Bureau, had identified the prints as belonging to one John Edward Harlee, 21 years, of 2115 East

Eager street, Baltimore, Maryland, a seaman aboard the U.S.S. "Boston."

Subsequent communication with Director J. Edgar Hoover resulted in arrangements being made for Fingerprint Examiner Philip W. Conover to appear before the Suffolk County Grand Jury on December 9, 1959, at which time he presented expert comparative fingerprint testimony upon which a true bill was returned charging John Edward Harlee with this heinous crime. On February 10, 1960, this subject was arrested on Indictment Warrant No. 7238 issued by the Superior Court of the County of Suffolk.

On February 24, 1960, Sergeant Detective Bradley, Patrolman James R. Bickerton, and Fingerprint Examiner Philip W. Conover of the Federal Bureau appeared in Suffolk Superior Court before Justice Jesse Morton with John Edward Harlee who pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with this vicious assault and he was sentenced to serve three to five years in the Massachusetts Correctional Institution.

When the assailant of this woman fled from her home, there were no witnesses or clues to assist in the solution of this crime other than the meager description of the criminal received from the hospitalized victim and it is the considered opinion that the resultant indictment, conviction and sentencing of Harlee was solely and directly the result of the diligence and devotion to duty displayed by Patrolman Bickerton.

The acting police commissioner is pleased to recognize the outstanding and painstaking work performed by Patrolman James R. Bickerton in this case which brought to justice a potential murderer if permitted to be at large.

CINCINNATI HAS URBAN RENEWAL PLAN FOR LIGHT INDUSTRY

Cincinnati will begin actual execution of urban renewal of a 297-acre area west of the central business district with the aid of a $30 million federal loan and a $16,367,000 capital grant, it was recently announced.

Project land, after clearances, will be reused primarily for light industrial purposes.

Estimated net cost of the project is $25 million. This represents the difference between the cost of acquiring, clearing, and preparing the land for its new uses and the return from its resale at fair value.

The $16.3 million federal grant covers part of this deficit and includes an amount for aiding in the relocation of site residents. Local contributions will cover the remainder of the loss.

CONTRACTS AWARDED

The Mayor approved the award of the following contracts to the lowest eligible bidders:

ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES DEPARTMENT

Purchasing Division.

Garden Materials

Furnishing garden materials to the various city departments from April 1, 1960, to March 31, 1961, awarded as follows:

No bids were received on Item 11. This item will be purchased in the open market when and where available. No acceptable prices were received on Item 26. This item will be readvertised. All bids received on Items 18, 19, and 22 are being rejected inasmuch as at present there are insufficient funds to purchase same.

California Spray-Chemical Corporation submitted the lowest price on Item 29, but this company submitted a check, with their bid, which was not certified. In order to take advantage of the lowest price, authority is requested to reject all bids received on this item and award a contract, without further public advertisement, to California Spray-Chemical Corporation at an approximate total amount of $3,362.84, net.
